Going Home Today

The body of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, who thought her next train ride would be a honeymoon, is going back to Iowa today—for burial.

The fiendish murder of the 23-year-old War Department clerk and bride-to-be, and the repercussions that followed at the White House and the Capitol, yesterday led to the formation of a super-homicide squad within the Detective Bureau.

This squad, built around the regular homicide squad, is headed by Capt. John H. Fowler. It is made up of 14 detectives, the most extraordinary group ever assigned to a murder in the National Capital.

Workmen and detectives worked all day yesterday and last night dredging sewers and manholes, looking for the clothes of the girl who disappeared Sunday while on an errand and whose body was found Monday. Policemen scoured alleys in the same quest, and furnace ashes were being sifted for some trace of the garments.

Two Persons Hear Screams

Two persons reported hearing screams at 2 a. m. Monday near the point where the body was found, but detectives leaned to the theory that Miss Strieff had been raped and murdered long before this—perhaps shortly after she disappeared in the thunderstorm that swept Washington last Sunday afternoon.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, last night offered a $500 reward for information leading to capture of the murderer.

Slain Girl's Missing Clothes Described

District police are pressing an intensive search for the clothes of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, 23, whose body was found in an alley garage here Monday morning. The body was unclothed except for shoes and stockings.

A description of the missing apparel follows:

Very light blue cotton play suit with stripes about 1 inch apart. This is a three-piece suit, consisting of shorts and shirtwaist and a wrap-around skirt with white buttons down the front.

One dark blue semitransparent raincoat with a hood attached.

One lady's white umbrella.

No Selectees—All Volunteers

Report From Putnam County

Post Staff Writer Goes Home To Tennessee—and Writes a Memo

MEMO TO EDITOR:

I went home—Silver Point, Putnam County, Tenn.—for my vacation. Our town is in the Cumberland foothills about 75 miles from Nashville.

Washington was a mad beehive when I left. National defense wasn't going right, it seemed. Some members of Congress were on the point of apoplexy. Communists were pulling strikes. The boys covering the White House were jittery.

I wonder if you would like to know about Putnam County?

My mother and most of the other women in Putnam County are putting up red cherries right now. The wheat is yellow in the fields. School is out and the kids are going barefoot.

The men are all busy. My guess is that they don't read the speeches some of our Senators have been making because every man who can get in the Army has volunteered. There has been no selectee called from our county because the men didn't wait for that.

They say they always have volunteered when the country was in trouble and it looks like trouble now, so why wait?

Farmers Build Camps, Powder Plants

There are about 1,500 people in our neighborhood and about half of them are Republicans. Everybody says if the President needs more help they will do whatever he asks.

As fast as the farmers get their crops in they, and the hands, are getting out their hammers to help build army camps and powder plants. Those with more skills start working on dams and aircraft factories.

The new Vultee plant has opened at Nashville and nearby Camp Forrest is booming.

The biggest piece of news in Silver Point this week was a first baby in the home of Alfred Gill, the postmaster, who is "on leave" with the National Guard at Camp Forrest. Alf was so excited when he came home for the weekend he almost forgot to report he's been made a sergeant.

The boys in camp come home whenever they can and their mothers bake all day getting ready for them. The neighbors all come in and sit for a while and the boys who are not quite old enough to volunteer talk about their chances to fool the recruiting officers. Most of them are big enough to do it because they grow them big down here. The boys are awfully proud of their shooting ability.

I went to the graduation exercises at Tennessee Polytechnic Institute—8 miles away—last Friday. Dr. D. F. Fleming came up from Vanderbilt University to address the 100 graduates. He said the boys had before them "a magnificent chance to complete the job we started in the World War." The parents nodded and applauded. The boys in the engineering group were excited about getting in the Army or in some defense engineering work. The girls were all talking about civil service examinations and typing and nutrition work. Some of the boys were rushing off to complete work for their pilot's licenses. I came home feeling I wasn't doing as much as I could.

Everything Stops for News

When the noon news broadcast starts at Silver Point and the newspapers come, everything stops. If anybody's radio is broken he goes to the neighbors. The strikes make our folks mad. They say "Communist" like they used to say "Yankee." Silver Point was glad the troops were called out on the West Coast.

I went to the school house Thursday to watch farmers' families make mattresses. They are made under the old surplus cotton plan which allows at least one mattress to each farm family with a cash income under $600 annually. The family pays 72 cents for the ticking. The mattresses are very good.

TVA power lines are being rushed to outlying districts, provided contracts were made before the emergency. No new contracts are being made because of need for power for defense. Another dam is to be built on the Caney Fork River only a few miles away to bring all streams of this area in the TVA power system.

When I read this over it sounds like quite a lot is going on in Silver Point and Putnam County, but no one is excited about anything.

Our folks just feel like the natural place for a young man is in the Army because they always have gone into the Army when the President called. The older men are glad to have work and are buying savings stamps. And the women are tending the kids, cooking for the menfolks and breaking their necks to please their sons when they come home from camp.

I thought you might like to know.

Roosevelt May Retain Militia

By Frank L. Kluckhohn
Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt confirmed yesterday that the Government is giving consideration to keeping the National Guard in service beyond the year's period originally designated. At his press conference, the President said that Secretary Henry L. Stimson was preparing a report on the matter and that he expected to receive it shortly. Pending this report, the Executive said he could not make a decision.

It has been the general understanding among legal experts in Washington that it would be necessary to obtain Congressional authorization to keep the National Guard in service more than a year. Some circles insisted, however, that, since an unlimited national emergency has been declared, legislation may not be necessary.

As of May 22, there were 21,800 officers and 270,000 men of the National Guard in Federal service.

'Work or Fight' Order Is Urged

World War "work or fight" regulations on defense labor were proposed yesterday by Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, if the pending Senate-passed Connally amendments fail to halt interruptions in defense production.

Bailey said he was studying orders issued by President Wilson in the first World War with particular attention to requirements that draft numbers of defense strikers be moved up and men refusing to work in defense plants be denied other Government work.

The North Carolinian said he plans to present the first World War solution of defense strikes for the record and if the need arises will draft corresponding legislation.

The drastically revised House version of the Connally bill will go before the House Rules Committee tomorrow for assignment to a place on the House docket, Chairman May,

U. S. Hearings to Open Monday On Cent-a-Quart Milk Increase

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Developments crowded upon one another yesterday in the drive toward an adequate milk program for Capital needy.

The Department of Agriculture announced it will open hearings next Monday on proposed amendments to the Federal milk marketing order, one of which would increase producers' prices by 1 cent a quart, sending the retail delivery price to 15 cents.

Taking swift action, District officials conferred on plans for a "penny project" to benefit undernourished school children and immediately dispatched a proposal to the Department of Agriculture designed to eliminate objections which the department found to a previous scheme.

Conrad Van Hyning, acting welfare director, was informed by Agriculture that consideration is being given his request to relax rules made by the department on distribution of 5-cent quarts to needy families.

Northern Moves

By the Associated Press

London, June 17.—Persistent reports reaching Norwegian circles in London today indicated Germany was concentrating "large numbers" of troops on the Norwegian west coast—a possible springboard for invasion of Scotland.

The Norwegians said that in the past few days numerous troop trains carrying marines and material had passed through Oslo on the way to west coast bases.

In addition, reports from Krageroe, on the Skaggerak, say a steady procession of transports and other vessels has been steaming in a westerly direction.

Choice For Russia

Meanwhile observers in London asserted Russia soon must choose whether to fight Germany or yield to humiliating demands involving considerable tangible loss. It was expected Germany would make these demands on Russia as the price of peace:

1. Full control over all the rich oil and agricultural lands of the Ukraine.

2. Right of passage for German troops through the trans-Caucasian corridor, a route that would bypass Turkey and lay Suez open to attack from the east. This route would also bring the Germans into the oil fields of Iran and Iraq.

3. Right to establish war industries in Soviet territory beyond the range of Royal Air Force bombers.

4. Placing of Russian Baltic sea shipyards at Germany's disposal.

5. Demobilization of the Soviet western army.

Big Tank Battle Rages as U. S. Planes Hold Off Dive-Bombers

By the Associated Press

Cairo, June 17.—The battle resulting from the British thrust into Libya developed fiercely today with hundreds of tanks employed on both sides and American-made planes declared by the British to be holding German dive-bombers at bay.

The British appeared to be attempting to cut off Axis forces in the Egyptian border town of Salum by a double advance on their supporting positions of Fort Capuzzo and Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass in Libya.

German troops in Salum would be caught in a triangle if the operation succeeded. They would be confronted by the British positions to the east, forming the apex of the triangle, and by spread-out British-held positions in their rear.

Tobruk Besiegers Used

British military reports indicated the Germans and Italians, realizing the seriousness of the situation, had drawn on troops besieging Tobruk, 80 miles to the west, and were launching repeated and fierce counterattacks.

Unofficial reports said wave after wave of these counterattacks had been repulsed, with heavy losses to the Axis forces. They said Royal Air Force fighting planes, many of them American-built, were holding at bay the German Stuka dive-bombers which had come out to harass the British mechanized columns.

The Stukas were reported to have been forced in many cases to dump their bombs before they could get to the fighting area.

A military spokesman tonight reported the situation to be "still confused." Earlier in the day a communique had stated British forces in a surprise advance had penetrated to Fort Capuzzo and withstood several counterattacks. Other reports added that the British had captured the German positions in Halfaya Pass, just outside Salum.

(Berlin dispatches quoted the German official D. N. B. news agency in the sense that the fighting was proceeding favorably for the Axis forces.)

Indian Units Fool Nazis

Radio Locating Nazi Planes Is Britain's 'Secret Weapon'

By Craig Thompson
Copyright by New York Times

London, June 17.—The wartime development of a radio locator that finds invading planes through fog, darkness and clouds and helps to guide defending fighters to them was announced here today coincident with a radio appeal by Lord Beaverbrook, minister of state, that was directed in part to the United States and asked for technicians to help in the further development and more widespread use of the apparatus.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Philip Joubert, newly appointed commander in chief of the coastal command air forces, said that the device has been developed on widely known principles of physics, but despite this, details of the method of operation were withheld.

It was made known only that there is some sort of machinery with radio "eyes" that can scan the skies for miles offshore and detect approaching aircraft in time for fighters to take to the air and prepare for combat.

The radio locator has been one of the greatest helps in Britain in maintaining day supremacy in the air over the isle since last October, and it may well become an instrument as important as a multiplicity of fighter planes and guns. In his broadcast Lord Beaverbrook said that the device was spreading the covering wings of science over the multitudes who inhabit vast cities.

In a talk that was tantalizing for what it did not tell, Sir Marshal Joubert said that the instrument had been "born in a rather ancient lorry on a fine March morning in 1935 on a road near Daventry." The discoverer apparently was Robert Alexander Watson Watt, who is adviser on telecommunications for the air ministry. A team of brilliant

Strike Ends In Hawaiian Defense Bases

Machinists Still Out, But Labor Picture Generally Brightens

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Despite a sudden strike of several hundred construction workers on Hawaiian defense projects, and two walk-outs at plants with indirect defense connection, the defense labor situation yesterday was the most peaceful in recent weeks.

The Hawaiian strike, which took place at Wheeler and Hickman fields and Fort Kamehameha, involved carpenters, electricians, truck drivers and laborers, the Associated Press reported. It was brought to an end last night when the men agreed to go back to work pending negotiations on their demands.

Machinists Remain Out

Dispatches said that the men were not unionized and that a demand for a flat $1.25 hourly wage was the sole issue of the walk-out.

A spokesman for the carpenters declared the men were working 56 hours a week at straight pay and with no overtime bonuses.

Of the recent wave of serious stoppages, only that of 1,700 machinists, striking for six weeks against 11 San Francisco Bay shipyards, remained current. Meantime, the Defense Mediation Board sought to settle the issues of two others where work has subsequently been resumed.

Situation "Favorable"

Principal case before the board involved the North American Aviation Co., still under Army occupation, but with a reconstituted negotiating committee meeting with management representatives on wage demands.

Representatives of the management and the C. I. O.-United Auto Workers met briefly with a board panel yesterday afternoon and subsequently negotiated directly. They were scheduled to reconvene with the panel at 10 a. m. today.

A board aide characterized the developments and the direct nego-

Alcoa Denies It Obstructed Defense Output

Aluminum Official Hits Ickes Charges At Senate Hearing

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Officials of the Aluminum Company of America yesterday vigorously denied charges made by Secretary Ickes that the company had obstructed the development of additional aluminum sources needed for defense production.

Testifying before the Senate defense investigating committee, I. W. Wilson, Alcoa vice president, declared the company had done "everything within its power and more" to speed defense production. Alcoa, he said, is ready to expand aluminum output still further with Government aid in financing the additional power facilities required.

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, a member of the committee, declared following the testimony that apparently the Office of Production Management was responsible for delay in constructing a power project at Fontana, N. C., which would enable aluminum production to be increased approximately 100,000,000 pounds annually.

"It looks to me as if the OPM is the culprit in this instance, if this testimony is true," he said.

Wilson had told the committee that Alcoa was unwilling to develop the power project with its own funds because the Government had ruled that they must build it under a license calling for ultimate return of the property. But, he said, it stands ready to produce the required power for the aluminum expans' under an RFC loan, or turn over its sites to the TVA for development.

"I think the OPM is considering the project along with other possible alternatives for expanding aluminum production," Wilson stated.

Mead declared that the Alcoa could not be expected to seek an RFC loan "when the matter is held up in OPM."

Staggering Blow to Estimates

50 Per Cent Slash in WPA Forces Revision of D. C. Budget

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Extensive revision of District budget estimates for 1942, already passed by the House and scheduled for Senate hearings today, must be made immediately if the Commissioners are forced to comply with yesterday's Federal order to slash its WPA personnel 50 per cent by July 1, it was reported last night.

Staggered by the drastic order from Howard O. Hunter, national WPA chief, the Commissioners announced they would lodge vigorous protests today with Federal WPA authorities and both appropriation committees of Congress.

Effective July 1, a total of 4,000 District workers will be thrown out of jobs and a score or more of vital, city-wide WPA projects will be junked under the Federal order, the Commissioners said.

The District's present 8,000 WPA roll must be cut in half, it was pointed out, and of this number some 3,200 are working on certified defense projects and cannot be touched. This, said Commissioner John Russell Young, leaves but about 800 to carry on a multitude of established operations.

Young expressed grave fear that necessary municipal activities will be wrecked and said the Commissioners proposed to make their protests "as strong as possible."

"I don't know why we should be made the goat," said Young. "I'd like to know who has the arbitrary power to cut us more than anyone else."

The District budget was predicated on the understanding that WPA assistance would be available and the city has no funds to aid unemployed employables.

"Wht are we going to do," Young asked, "with some of our contemplated and necessary projects? The appropriation figures are in and in some instances we boosted the ante. This is a terrific blow and I'm afraid it will cramp efficient operation of the District government."

The Federal order was made

'Can't Remain Indifferent'

Trade Rebuff by Indies Makes Situation Grave, Japan Says

By the United Press

Tokyo, (Wednesday), June 18.—Japan's economic relations with the Netherlands East Indies have been gravely affected as result of the policy of the Batavia government in mobilizing its resources for purposes of war, Koh Ishii, head of government information, said today.

The official spokesman, in announcing recall of Former Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa from Batavia and termination of the present economic negotiations with the Netherlands Indies, asserted that "the Imperial Japanese Government cannot remain indifferent to the spread of the European war towards the nations of the South Seas." (Netherlands Indies and adjacent areas).

The threat of a spread of the European war toward southeast Asia began when the Netherlands government fled from The Hague to London a year ago, Ishii said.

Ishii set forth the government's views in a formal statement reviewing the negotiations with the Netherlands Indies and the causes for their failure.

Within the Gates

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The United States last night ordered its border guards from coast to coast not to let any Germans leave the country until further notice.

Immigration officers and customs officials were instructed to cover all possible means of departure: vessels, trains, buses, airplanes and international border roads.

Latest move in the crack-down on Fifth Column activities, the instructions were issued to make sure that all Germans comply with President Roosevelt's order last weekend that no German (or Italian) funds be taken out of the country and that all German property here be registered.

It was expected that the drastic order to border guards, issued "to lock the barn door before all the horses escape," as one official said, would be relaxed after the Treasury has completed its census of German and Italian property.

Reasons Advanced

Unofficial reasons advanced for preventing any Germans from leaving the country were:

Keeping all Germans here, even though about 175 consular and propaganda agency employes were ordered Monday to leave by July 10, would probably insure the safety of Americans still in Germany in case Germany takes reprisals.

The Government would be in a better position to control the movement of Germans into Mexico and other South American countries, where considerable Axis propaganda has been reported.

The Government could make sure that consuls and propagandists, under orders to leave the United States, were not carrying away with them any assets in violation of the freezing order.

About 330,000 German Nationals in this country are affected by the order but most of them are permanent residents and about 60 per cent, it is estimated, have declared their intent to become citizens.

King Freezes Credits in Italy

The order to keep all Germans in the country for the time being came as Germany officially announced that she would take the "necessary measures" against assets of American citizens in the Reich.

King Vittorio Emanuele, meanwhile, signed a decree law freezing American credits, investments and property in Italy as a reprisal for a similar move by President Roosevelt.

A Nazi spokesman said in Berlin that the German reprisals would pay the United Statesback for what

Nazi Consuls Subversive, Says Roosevelt

By Bert Andrews

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

President Roosevelt indicated yesterday that consulates of other Axis powers may have engaged in activities similar to those which led to Monday's sudden order for the expulsion by July 10 of officials and employes of German consulates and propaganda agencies.

The President was asked specifically if the consulates of "any other nations" have been engaging in "doubtful activities."

He smiled and said there was no news on that—today. And when his questioner pressed a little by asking if he had meant to emphasize the today, the President answered that the men and women in the room had heard him the first time.

While the President did not mention any power by name, most observers inclined tonight to the belief that the consulates of Italy may have been under survey. It was recalled that the Administration some time ago ordered the closing of Italian consulates at Newark and Detroit, although it did not require their officials and workers to leave the United States.

DNB Records Protest

[In Berlin DNB, official news agency, issued a statement saying:

["The North American Government on June 16 in a note to the German charge d'affaires in Washington requested that German consulate officials in its territory as well as members of the German information library in New York, the Transocean Agency and the German Railway Tourist Office leave the United States.

["As the basis for this request, it was said that the German officers affected acted in an unpermitted manner.

["The German government rejected this accusation as unjustified and arbitrary and made a sharp protest against the treaty-violating action of the North American Government."

[The State Department last night said it had no information on reports that the Reich government was protesting.—Editor's note.]

A Great Many Sins

At his semiweekly meeting with newspapermen, President Roosevelt was asked if he could disclose some of the activities which brought about his ruling that German consulates and propaganda units must be closed by July 10. He said he could not go further than to say they were of subversive character. Pressed for more detail, he added that he would say the word subversive included a great many sins.

One of the questioners wanted to know if the sins included any participation in recent and current defense strikes. The President rated that as the type of speculation that should not be indulged in by regular newspaper writers, only by columnists.

Then, as additional indication that the offenses charged against the Germans adversely affected American security and American defense, the President remarked that he would call them cumulative in effect.

Later President Roosevelt was asked if he agreed with a statement made last night by Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, in a speech at Quebec. Knox told his Canadian audience that the people of the United States were "at the very hour of decision" and that they were determined to follow the "same self-respecting routes" as Canada "in defiance of those who seek military domination over us."

The President's answer, when asked if he subscribed to that, was that he believed in the Ten Commandments, too. A newspaperman asked if the Knox declaration was the eleventh. There was no answer.

Asked why Marine Corps leaves had been canceled, Mr. Roosevelt said he did not know that they had been.

would prevent "necessary expansion" of aluminum production facilities in order to get them under its control.

"We want to state without reservation," he said, "that the aluminum company has no desire to prevent the necessary expansion of aluminum manufacturing facilities in this country, or to get them all within its domination and control. We are interested in but one thing, that there be sufficient aluminum produced to meet the defense needs of our country."

Silent on Trust Charge

The Alcoa official declined to discuss allegations that the company is a monopoly and is a party to agreements with foreign companies for restriction of aluminum production within the United States. He said it would be "improper" for him to discuss an issue that is pending before the courts—an indictment under the anti-trust laws.

Alcoa, Wilson said, is now producing twice as much aluminum as in 1938, when it launched a $200,000,000 expansion with its own funds. When the program is completed its output will be triple the 1938 figures, he said. The official also registered an "emphatic denial" that his company had anything to do with the mistaken estimates of aluminum production and needs made by the OPM.

The committee also heard testimony from Edward K. Davis, president of Aluminum, Ltd., of Canada. Under questioning, he described how Canadian, British, German, French and Swiss producers of aluminum agreed ten years ago to limit production of the metal "during the depression."

"Abrogated" in 1936

"This agreement, he said, was "substantially altered—I might say abrogated in 1936." Aluminum Co. of America was not a party to the cartel, Davis stated.

Under questioning by Chairman Truman, Davis insisted that his company was "entirely independent" of Alcoa. Though organized by the American Company, the Canadian corporation "is now owned by the public," he said.

Senator Truman said he had been informed that the Canadian company had been formed to control aluminum prices and yet not "run into our antitrust laws."

"You were entirely misinformed," Davis declared. "That is untrue."

The President's Day

By International News Service

TOO BAD: Lots of things were "too bad" at the White House yesterday. The correspondents felt it was "too bad" the President's record-shatteringly brief conference (12 minutes) was so record-shatteringly unfruitful. The President thought the Washington crime wave, climaxed this weekend with the murder of Defense Worker Jessie Strieff, was too bad.

And the Secret Service men who demanded that correspondents show their White House identification cards at the door of the Executive anteroom and again at the threshold of the President's office felt that it was "too bad" they went to all that trouble for nothing. They were looking for, and would have confiscated, the credentials of a reporter for the German Transocean News Agency.

NAVY BLUE: The President, thinner since the sore-throat, but rested and lively, stayed at the White House, received all callers in the oval study but came over to the Executive offices for his press conference. Natty in a blue and gray checked seersucker suit, navy blue nubby-knit tie, white shirt and blue and gold cuff links, Mr. Roosevelt was obviously in fine-fettle but uncommunicative.

UNSCHEDULED: Chill, neat Undersecretary of State Welles was added to the formal list of White House appointments well after 10, arrived after 11, excited as always with lip-buttoned tightly. Other appointment-keepers were Senator-Justice Byrnes, United States Ambassador to Uruguay William Dawson, United States Ambassador to Australia Nelson Johnson.

GREETERS: Promptly at 5:15, Rooseveltian Secretary Maj. Gen. Edwin (Pa) Watson and State Department Proctocol Chief George Summerlin rolled off in a long black limousine to fetch Netherlands Princess Julianna, her Prince Consort Bernhardt from the Union Station. At 5:50 they stepped out of the car, went slowly and smilingly up the White House steps to be greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt—deliver messages of importance from Queen Wilhelmina, dine, talk and see a movie at the White House with a handful of carefully culled guests.

the spokesman called a long succession of "provocative acts."

Lending gravity to the situation in Berlin, said the Associated Press, was the comment of a high official that Germany now withdraws her former assertion that she "could not be provoked" by the United States.

Some retaliation by Germany, both for the freezing order and for expulsion of German consuls and propagandists, has been fully expected by the State Department. It is not known whether the German reprisals will be in kind, or will take some new, perhaps more stringent form.

The Italian freezing decree, similar to President Roosevelt's allowed Italians living in the United States to make payments to Americans and permitted American residents of Italy to receive funds for living expenses and other proven needs.

Assailing the American freezing order as open economic warfare against the Axis, Virginio Gayda, often Premier Mussolinis mouthpiece, claimed that Italy gained $80,000,000 in the freezing exchange.

Gayda said that American investments in Italy were $145,000,000, compared with Italian investments in the United States totaling $65,000,000.

The Commerce Department said this week that American investments in Italy were $151,000,000 and Italian investments here $74,000,000. United States holdings in Germany, said the Department, were $441,000,000, while German investments here were $106,000,000.

Amid increasingly sharper Fascist reactions to the United States, Gayda accussed this country of enforcing an "outrageous robber policy."

German reprisals stronger than mere tit for tat for the American actions were freely predicted. It was pointed out that Germany has controlled American assets there for many years.

All foreign assets in Germany have been under strictest governmental regulation since early in the Nazi regime. Any foreign currency in possession of an incoming traveler is counted and registered. A traveler entering or leaving Germany is restricted to 10 marks (about $4).

The severe Italian freezing order carried penalties for violators of prison terms of three years and fines equal to five times the value of any property changing hands in violation of the decree. Accomplices to forbidden transactions risk fines and six months in prison.

Dispatches from Rome told of Americans lining up at the American Express Co. offices hopeful that their bank accounts might be liquidated. Their hopes proved futile.

Some resourceful Americans, their cash reserves low, formed "eating clubs" to stretch their meager supply of funds.

Nazi Cuts Wrists At Ellis Island

New York, June 17 (AP).—Immigration authorities said today that Guenther Tonn, detained at Ellis Island pending trial of charges that he acted as an unregistered agent for a foreign country, had slashed both his wrists and inflicted a small cut in his throat with a razor Sunday night.

Tonn's superior, Dr. Manfred Zapp, editor of the German Transocean News Service, slept through the incident, authorities said. Tonn's condition was described as "not serious."

Roosevelt May Retain Militia

Most of them were ordered in last September and their one year's term in the Federal armies would terminate at a critical time for the Nation, before many selectees have received full training and before fall maneuvers. It was widely believed, therefore, that their period of training and service would be extended.

The President conceded yesterday that new lease-lend authorizations or appropriations would be requested of Congress in addition to the $7,000,000,000 already appropriated. Mr. Roosevelt said that he did not think the totals had yet been made up and added that it probably would be some time before they were.

Plans Ready To Arm Ships, Roosevelt Says

American merchant ships can be armed quickly in case of need to resist attack, President Roosevelt revealed yesterday, while the State Department insisted that its protest to Germany for inhumane action in sinking the American freighter Robin Moor will not be weakened by the fact that no lives were lost.

Though declining direct comment on the Robin Moor case until he examines depositions of survivors which arrived from South America yesterday, President Roosevelt said that plans for the arming of merchant ships are ready and have been ready since 1918.

Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference that he supposed every chief of naval operations had had a plan in the safe since the end of the World War.

Welles Stands on Statement

"Have they come out of the safe yet?" a reporter asked.

Not at his request, the President replied.

Mr. Roosevelt said he did not know whether Congressional authority would be needed for the arming of the merchant marine.

While officials worked on the text of a strong protest to Berlin charging violation of the rules of naval warfare and warning against any further trespass on "freedom of the seas," Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles said the Government stands on its previously announced position that Germany broke all laws of humanity and morality by not assuring the safety of the passengers and crew of the Robin Moor.

Safe arrival of 35 more survivors of the Robin Moor, at Capetown, South Africa, did not affect the Government's charges against Germany, said Welles. Eleven survivors were landed earlier at Pernambuco, Brazil.

The American Consul General at Cape Town was instructed yesterday to take depositions from the 35 survivors there and cable a summary to the State Department. They will supplement depositions brought here from Pernambuco yesterday by Philip P. Williams, a secretary of the American Embassy at Rio de Janeiro.

Welles said that the Government would be in a position to reach final conclusions in the near future, though he declined to say whether a formal communication would be sent to Germany.

of the House Military Affairs Committee, said.

Amended Monday by May's committee, the bill now empowers the President to order and enforce with the Army and Navy resumption of work in any strike-bound plant, and penalizes as sabotage any effort to prevent workers from entering or working in defense plants.

Chairman Reynolds, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, meanwhile moved to break a stalemate on an earlier War Department bill vesting sweeping powers in the President to requisition any defense materials or facilities needed in the emergency.

Reynolds called Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson to testify on the bill before his committee this morning. Leaders indicated the bill will be laid before the Senate before a companion measure in the House is further considered.

Chairman May of the House committee opened hearings on the bill and then laid it aside. He said yesterday he probably will "wait to see what Senate hearings develop."

Amendments are expected to be offered to specify defense materials the President may requisition, such as German-owned patents and second-hand metals, rather than leave the power wide open.

Society Notable Finds Her Assets Frozen by U. S.

New York, June 17 (U.P.).—The socially prominent Abby Morison Ricker, who always pays her bills promptly, heard an angry tradesman's voice on the telephone today demanding an explanation for the National City Bank's refusal to accept her check.

Mrs. Ricker's father and grandfather were bank presidents and she knows all about balancing check stubs.

"I have plenty of money in the bank," she said firmly.

"They say," the tradesman responded, "that your funds are frozen."

Mrs. Ricker called the bank. It was true. Mrs. Ricker, who was the United States Navy's only woman wireless operator during the World War, had been living in Italy. The bank therefore had an Italian address on her account, which thus was impounded under President Roosevelt's order freezing Axis funds.

That left Mrs. Ricker with $1 in cash and very busy answering telephone calls about her checks.

Her next step, she said, may be to consult her lawyer, Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War.

U. S. Naval Observer Lost On Iraq Flight

LIEUT. COMDR. GEORGE WILSON GROVE

The Navy Department announced yesterday that Lieut. Comdr. George Wilson Grove, an American naval observer in Iraq, had been missing since June 13 on a flight with the R. A. F.

No details were given, but it was said that the officer's wife, Mrs. Katharine Grove, of Cornwall, Conn., had been notified that the search for the missing plane was being continued by the R. A. F. Because of the generally flat terrain of Iraq some hope still exists of finding Grove alive, it is understood.

Commander Grove, 46, was born in Philadelphia and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1915. He served on the destroyer Ericsson during the World War, employed on escort and patrol duty in the Atlantic.

After the war, he served as executive officer and navigator of the U. S. S. Upshur, which was employed as an aerological ship during the transatlantic flight of the NC-seaplanes in 1919. Later, on duty with the destroyer force at San Diego, Comdr. Grove served as executive officer of the U. S. S. Barker, and then was transferred to the U. S. S. Harding. He resigned from the Navy in 1920.

In 1933, he was commissioned as a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve, and saw duty with the Office of Chief of Naval Operations and aboard the U. S. S. Lang. Grove was promoted to lieutenant commander Jan. 1, 1940, and was ordered to active duty last September.

Stimson Backs Waterway, Expects Long War

By Hedley Donovan

Post Staff Writer

American defense plans must be based on the possibility that the present war will last for years, the House Rivers and Harbors Committee was told yesterday by Secretary of War Stimson and Assistant Secretary of State Berle, as hearings opened on the Administration's $266,000,000 St. Lawrence River power and navigation project.

Both witnesses stressed the possible duration of the war as an answer to arguments that the St. Lawrence development, since it would require several years for completion, could not aid the defense program.

"Very Long Emergency"

Stimson, asked to estimate the length of the present emergency, replied:

"In my opinion, it is necessary to prepare for a very long emergency. We hope it will be briefer, but it not safe to act on such a hope in such a situation as confronts us today."

At another point in his testimony the Secretary of War told the committee, "You face the prospect of a long war.

He said "the St. Lawrence project would contribute to defense preparations and the air-to-Britain program by increasing the amount of hydroelectrical power available for defense industries, opening up new shipbuilding facilities and cutting the open-water distance that certain supplies must travel from this country to Britain.

Berle, also asked to estimate the duration of the war, said, "There is no information in the State Department which would lead to a belief that the present conflict will come to a speedy end."

Likened to Napoleon Wars

"The historical analogy of the Napoleonic wars, of course, calls itself at once to attention," he added, pointing out that that conflict was in progress almost continuously for 17 years.

Berle said the new shipbuilding facilities that would be made available by opening of the Great Lakes to ocean-going commerce would be particularly valuable since "the Axis powers, if victorious, would commence a shipbuilding race against us, with the facilities of the entire European coast several times greater than our own."

The State Department official said there was "no shadow of a doubt" that the United States would be better prepared for defense today if the St. Lawrence treaty had been approved when submitted to the Senate in 1934. He said the arguments employed against the project then recalled early protests against the TVA, which, he said, has proved to be "a bulwark of defense."

Power Shortage Critical

Berle, under questioning by Representative Carter (Republican), of California, conceded that the decision to submit the St. Lawrence project to Congress as an "agreement," rather than a treaty could be supported by numerous historical precedents. He conceded that the fact that a treaty requires a two-thirds vote for ratification might have been "a factor."

He added that he had noticed "a sudden interest on the part of the transportation people in the treaty-making power of the Senate."

Berle, in an apparent bid for support for the St. Lawrence project from proponents of power developments in other sections of the country, said the threatened power shortage is so critical that "it is no longer a question of this project against some other—but of getting all the power we can, whether from the St. Lawrence, in the Arkansas Valley or in the West."

Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, read into the committee record a letter from Secretary of State Hull, who is ill, stating that he is in "full accord with the proposed legislation" and hopes "the bill will receive prompt and favorable action."

Strike of Trash Men Ends in Baltimore

Baltimore, June 17 (AP).—Trash and garbage collectors returned to work last night after signing a "No strike" agreement with the department of public works.

The contract signed by George Cobb, chief engineer and head of the department, with 1,200 striking trashmen recognizes the Municipal Employes, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union, an A. F. L. teamsters' union affiliate, as sole bargaining agent for the men and sets up facilities for fixing wages and working conditions.

Super-Police Squad Hunts Sex Murderer

lessed last night. So were two other colored men. One of these, a 20-year-old youth, had been arrested on information given the police by his "girl friend." The other was a 30-year-old man who washed windows and did other odd jobs in the apartment house.

The rape-murder of the pretty young War Department clerk transcended in interest any crime that has been committed in Washington since the celebrated Mary Baker case in 1930.

President Roosevelt commented on the case at his press conference, saying that it was too bad.

Mrs. Roosevelt, disturbed like other Washington mothers, suggested various methods whereby girls might protect themselves.

Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, demanded a Congressional investigation of the District Police Department and the "crime wave" that has left the city with a number of unsolved murders, most of them committed in the area where Miss Strieff's nude, battered and raped body was found Monday morning.

A cloud of tips and rumors surrounded the case, but harassed detectives frankly admitted that their investigation was "cold"—that they didn't have a thing, not even a starting point.

They said they might have a starting point if they could find the clothes that were stripped from the girl's body. These might yield some clue. But the clothes, and the white umbrella the ill-fated girl carried as she went out to buy butter, were missing. When the body was found she was clad only in wet shoes and sport socks.

In an attempt to locate the clothes, police arranged to have a corps of men from the City Refuse department dredge the sewers and manholes throughout the whole neighborhood, extending from Q Street to California Street and from Sixteenth Street to Connecticut Avenue.

In a manhole at Nineteenth and T Streets Northwest, the searchers hauled up out of the muck a pair of blue pants, a coat, a sweater—and a dead baby. The body of the infant was taken to the District Morgue. The clothes did not bear any resemblence to those they were after.

Police scouring the alleys in the neighborhood found several bundles of old clothes, but these also proved of no value.

An early theory was that Miss Strieff might have accepted a ride from some motorist during Sunday's cloudburst. Yesterday, however, this theory appeared to be a weak one. A more likely theory, it was believed, was that Miss Strieff was grabbed by her assailant and either hauled into an automobile or into a doorway.

In reconstructing the slaying, the investigators start with a scene in Miss Strieff's apartment. The apartment is located at 2110 Nineteenth Street Northwest. On Sunday afternoon Miss Strieff and her roommate, Miss Christine Tankersley, were preparing dinner. Stanley Le Blanc, Miss Strieff's fiance, was to be a guest, and the two girls were baking a lemon pie.

Wore Blue Raincoat

"We ran short of butter," said Miss Tankersley, "and Betty said she would run out and get some."

A storm was threatening outside, so Miss Strieff put on a blue, transparent raincoat with a hood attached. She also took her white ladies umbrella. This was about 2:15 p. m.

The delicatessen store for which Miss Strieff was headed was that of Peter Duncan, at 1810 Florida Avenue Northwest, about a block and a half away.

To get there Miss Strieff must have walked south one block on Nineteenth Street and then turned east on Florida Avenue. The delicatessen is located midway in the block.

Duncan said yesterday that he distinctly remembered serving Miss Strieff. He said she bought a stick of butter for 12 cents and gave him a quarter. He remembered giving her the 13 cents change. He remembered her raincoat and the hood over her head. At that time, he said, he believed it was raining, but not as violently as it did shortly thereafter.

Auto Double-Parked

Duncan also remembered that there was an automobile outside of his tstore—parked double. Whether this automobile was important is a question that has not yet been decided

"I did not say I saw the girl get out of the automobile," Duncan told The Post yesterday. "And I didn't say I saw her get into it. All I said was that the automobile was out there. I don't know what happened after she left the store."

What weakens the theory that Miss Strieff accepted a ride, in the opinion of some of the detectives, is this: She went out thoroughly prepared for the rain, wearing a raincoat and carrying an umbrella; she had only a block and a half to go.

Would she under those circumstances, they ask themselves, have accepted the offer of somebody posing as a good Samaritan?

If the answer is no, what then could have happened to the girl? One possible answer, it was suggested, was that she was seized as she walked along the street and hauled into a doorway. Or, it was suggested again, the murderer may have come along in an automobile, asked her for directions, and then shoved her into the car.

The rain, which began coming down in torrents about seven minutes after she left her apartment, might have served as a curtain for an abduction.

On the other hand, people often go to their windows to look out when a violent storm breaks, and, hoping that this might have been so on Sunday, Capt. Ira Keck, acting chief of detectives, yesterday urged newspapers to publish a description of the clothes Miss Strieff was wearing. Somebody, he reasoned, might recall seeing the girl walking along in the rain after she left the delicatessen store.

As matters stand, the last person known to the police who saw Miss Strieff on Sunday was Duncan, owner of the store.

A blank then occurs that does not end until 9:15 o'clock Monday morning, nearly 19 hours after Miss Strieff left her apartment.

At that hour Monday, Frances Williams, a colored maid in the employ of De Witt C. Croissant, professor emeritus of English at George Washington University, went out back to empty some garbage. The Croissant house is at 1717 Q Street Northwest.

To get to the alley, the maid had to go through a metal door of the Croissant garage. As she stepped through the door, she drew back in horror. A girl's body, nude except for shoes and socks, was piled up against the rear of an automobile. The maid ran into the Croissant home to call the police.

The detectives assigned to the case lean to the view that the murder was a one-man job, and that the man, they are convinced, was of a particularly fiendish nature.

Dragged Along Alley

He apparently had dragged the body for some distance along the alley. Splashes of blood indicated this, and also the appearance of the girl's back. There were many abrasions such as might be caused by cinders. Finally, the killer had thrown the body into the garage as if it had been a sack of potatoes.

An autopsy showed that Miss Strieff had been garroted. A rope or a folded handkerchief might have been used, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said.

She had been raped—obviously, before her body had been dragged to the garage—and she had put up a "terrific struggle." The killer had beaten her and left deep fingernail marks on different parts of her body.

That is about as much as the investigators now know about the case. There are a hundred things they would like to know, but, for a starter, they would like to know approximately where the attack took place. They think the killer was familiar with the neighborhood. That is one reason they are so eager to find the girl's clothes.

If the killer had not been familiar with the neighborhood, it was argued, it might have occurred to him that the best place to dispose of a body was some such place as Rock Creek Park.

What he actually did was audacious in the extreme, and indicated that he was thoroughly at home in the alley. He dragged the body along this alley for perhaps 60 yards. Then he saw the sliding doors of the Croissant garage were open, and into this building he flung the body.

In the nearly 19 hours that Miss Strieff was missing, the girl's fiance, Le Blanc, a clerk in the Farm Credit Administration, searched the apartment house on Nineteenth Street. He reported to police that James Fairfax, 55, the colored janitor, refused to let him search his quarters in the cellar. Fairfax taken into custody for questioning and subsequently released.

Three barrels of ashes taken from the Nineteenth Street apartment house were sifted for evidence by Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg and Detective Sergt. John Wise. Nothing of value was found.

Capt. Keck said last night that more than 100 persons had been questioned in connection with the murder. Hundreds of persons telephoned Police Headquarters to volunteer information. None of the information was valuable, but the officials hoped that the calls would continue. However it may be in mystery novels, in real life most crimes are solved by tips.

Cab Parked in Alley

Earl C. Burgette, attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital, who lives in a first floor apartment at 1614 Seventeenth Street, directly across the alley from the garage where the body was found, told of a conversation between a man and woman in a taxicab parked in the alley at about 2 a. m. the day the body was discovered.

Burgette, an amateur photographer who had stayed up to develop some negatives, said the woman, whom he described as small and having a "contralto" voice, was on the front seat of the cab with the driver.

The woman cried excitedly, "Will you stop and think what you're doing?" on one occasion, and again demanded: "Do you know what you're doing?"

To the latter query, the man replied, "It's just about time you're shown."

Later the woman pleaded, "Won't you please believe me?" The conversation lasted about 10 minutes when he called out to the couple asking them to move down the alley, Burgette said.

Burgette described the taxi as light colored, with a stripe running around the body, and having dark fenders.

Woman Hears Scream

Mrs. John Hale, of 1723 Q Street Northwest, three houses from the home of DeWitt C. Croissant, in whose garage Miss Strieff's body was found, said yesterday she heard a "long, piercing scream" issuing from the alley about 2 a. m. Monday.

"I thought it was one of the roomers," she said. "I got out of bed and went upstairs, but I couldn't find anything wrong. I came downstairs and I said to my husband, 'John, that scream came from the alley.'"

The decision to detail an extraordinary homicide squad to the case was reached at a conference yesterday morning between Maj. Brown and Capt. Keck.

Capt. Fowler, chosen to head the detail, was recently promoted and made commander of the Thirteenth Precinct Station. He is acknowledged to be one of the department's most brilliant men. He took a special course for criminologists at Northwestern University, and for years was the department's ballistics expert. It was his testimony more than anything else that resulted in John Eugene Ecklund being sentenced to the electric chair.

Next to Capt. Fowler comes Lieut. Darnall, chief of the regular homicide squad. His regulars are Detective Sergts. John Wise, Jerry Flaherty, Aubrey Tolson, Dewey Guest and Fred Rawlinson.

Added to these were Lieut. Archie Winfree, chief of the robbery squad; Sergt. Robert Murray, of the Sixth Precinct, formerly a detective sergeant who specialized on holdups; Detective Sergt. Richard Felber, of the check squad, who two years ago smashed a bootleg milk ring; Detective Sergt. Charles Carber, of the pick-up squad, who broke the Landis murder a few years ago; Detective Frank White, of the Thirteenth Precinct, and Detective Sergt. Dan Pittman, of the robbery squad, and Detective Frank Smith, of the Thirteenth Precinct.

Acid Test for Police

The men who run the Police Department know that, fairly or unfairly, the Strieff murder is going to be regarded as an acid test for them, and this elite squad is their answer.

Reports that the Army and the Federal Buearu of Investigation had joined in the investigation were exploded yesterday.

Two Army officers called on Capt. Keck yesterday, but it was only to discuss the case. They were Lieut. Richard J. Smith and Lieut. Daniel Simmonds, both intelligence officers from the Ordnance Division of the War Department, where Miss Strieff worked.

The FBI, it was explained, had no jurisdiction in the case.

Mrs. David Strieff, mother of the murdered girl, also called on Capt. Keck yesterday. Neither she nor her 20-year-old son, David, had any ideas that might help in running down the murderer of their beloved Betty.

Looking ahead to the melancholy trip to Des Moines, Iowa, the brother said:

"Betty's body belongs to us. We are taking her home."

Coroner MacDonald released the body from the morgue yesterday. Coroner's jury will be sworn in this morning. This is composed of R. W. Williams, Harold Corl, E. L. Donaldson, Alex G. Fant, Bertram Longstreet and the Rev. F. I. A. Bennett.

Store Where Miss Strieff Bought Butter

THIS DISMAL ALLEY, a block from Miss Strieff's apartment, is known to residents of the neighborhood as a short cut from Florida Avenue to Nineteenth Street. The murdered girl could conceivably have taken this route after leaving the delicatessen so as not to have had so far to walk in Sunday's storm

Death of Nude Man In Alley Ascribed To Crushed Skull

A certificate in the death of Dalrymple Garrison, 44-year-old salesman, was withheld by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night pending further police investigation and pathologists' tests.

Dr. MacDonald ordered an autopsy after Garrison was found nude in an alley behind his apartment at 1734 Fourteenth Street Northwest at 3 a. m. yesterday. First reports indicated the man had been shot in the head.

The post mortem disclosed, however, that his death was due to a crushed skull and both the coroner and homicide squad investigators said they believed he fell from his attic apartment while walking in his sleep.

He apparently plunged through a doorway formerly used to hoist machinery into the one-time loft now used as living quarters. He fell about 12 feet, it was estimated.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

Mr. Knudsen is lavishly satisfied with the defense production and that's the first good news I've heard since Hector was both ends of a frankfurter.

It's pleasant to hear that the old doll factory hasn't run out of sawdust. I'm a fellow who scares as easy as rabbit with three ears.

During the last war I was so scared of submarines I wouldn't walk up a damp street. Now, the parachutists have got me shaking like a hitch-hiker on a rotary plow.

But when Mr. Knudsen says things are all right I know he isn't clipping wool from dead sheep.

He is in charge of production in the United States same as Dr. Dafoe is in Canada.

Murder Leads Mrs. Roosevelt To Warn Girls

The murder of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff gave Mrs. Roosevelt occasion to issue a warning yesterday to the young women of Washington.

Saying she had met several "quite attractive" criminals in her lifetime (in prisons), the First Lady told a press conference that:

"If a girl drinks at all, she should be extremely careful, and it is wise for her to remember not to take even one drink in a group or with an individual she doesn't know all about. She should remember that a good many prison men are outwardly attractive, even though perfectly capable of putting something into a girl's drink."

Mrs. Roosevelt, as mother and grandmother, also made these suggestions for young women:

Be careful who you go out with; come home at an early hour with an escort whom you know well or with a group of other girls, and don't be so trusting, accepting "anyone who seems friendly on face value."

Such crimes as Miss Strieff's murder might be avoided if girls would follow her advice, Mrs. Roosevelt said.

She added that a larger police force might be the answer to the Washington crime problem but she was not sure. Perhaps augmenting of personnel in certain divisions is more needed than an increase in the entire force, she said.

Mother to Take Slain Girl's Body to Iowa

Mrs. David Streiff, mother of slain Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, yesterday visited Washington scenes and persons known well by her 23-year-old daughter and planned to return to Iowa today with the War Department clerk's body.

"Please don't ask me anything. I don't know anything to tell you," she said to newspapermen, tears in her eyes.

Friends said she visited police headquarters, the War Department office where her daughter worked, the apartment from which Miss Strieff disappeared Sunday afternoon and a boarding house where the young woman lived until a month ago. At the boarding house, she had lunch with friends of her daughter.

Her visit to police headquarters was entirely unofficial and had nothing to do with the investigation, police said. The other calls, it was said, were made because Mrs. Strieff wanted to see the people and places her daughter had written home about.

Army Men on Case

Mrs. Strieff, friends said, is stopping here with "old friends of her family." Yesterday she was accompanied by her son, David, jr., who flew to Washington with her, and one or more of the Army Intelligence officers assigned to the rape-strangulation case.

It was made plain that Mrs. Strieff had no information that might help to solve the mystery.

Intelligence officers working on the case are Lieut. Richard J. Smith, Lieut. Daniel Simonds and Lieut. Robert Clark. Police said they were assigned primarily to assist them in solving the case but also "to be in a position to take action on behalf of the War Department if necessary."

However, it was said that Miss Strieff was not normally in a position in the Ordnance Department to possess information of value to outsiders although she had occasionally handled "classified data"—data classed as secret, confidential or restricted.

Investigators said her slaying was "unquestionably" a sex murder and had no connection with her occupation.

Legislators Seek Investigation Of Police, FBI Intervention

Demands for a Congressional investigation of the District Police Department and for Department of Justice intervention in eliminating "this outrageous condition" came from Congress yesterday in the wake of four unsolved murders here in the last three months.

Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, calling for the Congressional investigation, wrote Chairman Randolph (Democrat), of the House District Committee, that "there is obviously something radically wrong somewhere."

Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, wrote the Attorney General that the FBI should be sent into action on the Washington crime front.

Representative Randolph said Representative Hebert's concern over the crime situation "is concurred in quite generally by members of Congress."

May Make Announcement

He added: "I shall discuss his request with the ranking minority member, Mr. Dirksen, of Illinois, and with Mr. Schulte, chairman of the standing Subcommittee on Police, and other members of the full District Committee. Perhaps I will have an announcement to make tomorrow morning."

"The Police Department may be undermanned, as claimed by Superintendent Ernest W. Brown," said Representative Hebert, "but that is no excuse for the failure of the department to check crime and solve a murder occasionally."

Hebert stated that in his own city of New Orleans, with a police force only a third the size of Washington's, there has not been a single unsolved murder in the past 13 years.

"This is not an indictment of the Washington police force," he added, but he declared that immediate action is necessary if "the lives of our citizens are to receive the protection which is due them."

Points for Investigation

He asked Randolph to appoint a subcommittee of the District Committee to investigate:

1. Whether the police force is large enough.
2. "Whether it is efficient."
3. Methods used by the detective bureau and its homicide squad.
4. Whether the detective bureau is properly equipped with modern scientific devices for criminal investigation.
5. Whether men appointed to the force are properly trained before being placed on the streets.

Senator Herring wrote: "Today, in our Nation's Capital, these brutal crimes not only endanger the lives of its residents but also serve to direct the attention of the Nation to the inadequacy of our law enforcement agencies at the very seat and heart of our national government."

He said he realized the Department of Justice customarily left local law enforcement and investigation to the Metropolitan Police Department.

Cent-a-Quart Milk Increase Hearings Set of the District WPA program, which will involve cuts in the free school lunch and 5-cent milk depot projects, stirred speculation as to effects on the dual campaign for establishment of penny-milk in the schools and extension of nickel quarts to all families certified as needy, not merely public reliefers and persons awaiting WPA jobs.

C. I. Dunn, milk marketing administrator for the Washington area, released figures showing that dairies disposing of their products in the District handled 25,835,952 pounds of milk last month—largest total since the Federal marketing order became effective in February, 1940, and an increase of 1,464,000 pounds over April.

Last night the Consumers' Milk Committee, meeting at the Y. W. C. A., voted unanimously for establishment of a penny milk project in the schools and for extension of 5-cent quart privileges to more needy.

The committee, a pioneer supporter of low cost milk to the poor, also recommended that the bottles be sold in groceries, more numerous and more conveniently located than the 11 depots.

Strong opposition was expressed to the producers' application for a price increase and plans made to argue against it at next Monday's hearing. The committee voted to ask the Agriculture Department to postpone the hearing that its members might have more time to marshal data.

Even if the request is denied, however, the committee will testify, said its president, Mrs. Sarah Newman.

The public hearing on a 1-cent price increase, as well as other proposed amendments to the Federal order, will be held in the Departmental Auditorium beginning at 9:30 a. m. next Monday, said the Agriculture announcement. The auditorium is at Thirteenth Street and Constitution Avenue.

The price boost is being sought by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association. Its request is for a cent-a-quart rise in the Federal subsidy paid for surplus milk sold to needy families at 5 cents a quart, as well as for an identical increase in the price paid farmers for milk retailed at the regular scales.

Condition Eliminated

Less than three hours after a District Building conference yesterday to expedite launching of a "penny program," a letter was on its way to O. M. Reed, dairy division chief of the Surplus Marketing Administration, outlining a plan of operation.

Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, did not disclose the contents of the revised application, which he drew up. However, he said it eliminates the condition objected to last week by Reed, whose Agriculture Department bureau administers surplus milk programs.

The previous plan, providing for designation of schools in low income neighborhoods and in which certain pupils would receive complete free lunches while the remainder would be provided with free milk only, was criticized because of its element of segregation.

The new scheme, it is believed, would make the half pints available at recess time to all the boys and girls in the designated schools. Those certified to the free lunch list would receive them, save that the menu would be milkless, the children having had their half pints at morning recess.

Encouraging Letter

With regard to nickel quarts, some 2,800 bottles of which are being sold daily at 11 schoolbuilding and police station depots, extension of purchase privileges to recipients of private charity and WPA workers appears not unlikely.

Acting Welfare Director Van Hyning was encouraged by the tone of Reed's letter. It pointed out that while plans are being made to continue the project along its present lines of eligibility and distribution, means of improvements are being studied which could be initiated on short notice.

Reforms might include not only a more equitable system of deciding what families shall be eligible for this low-cost milk but also its distribution in groceries, perhaps no a stamp basis, rather than at the 11 depots—a number which is far too few—as at present.

The District WPA retrenchment order promulgated yesterday need not seriously affect the milk program, it is believed.

Although personnel assigned to the school lunch project may have to be reduced from 286 to 100, the curtailment in number of meals served would not be in the same proportion, WPA Administrator Paul Edwards told The Post. One economy is now being effected by baking bread in ovens contributed by the Self Help Exchange.

While the ax will fall on some of the WPA laborers assigned to the 11 milk depots, arrangements probably can be made to keep all of them open for the same number of hours daily as at present.

known to the Commissioners yesterday by Paul Edwards, local WPA administrator. Under a bill pending in the House, the entire country will be cut about 29 per cent— from 1,400,000 WPA workers to 1,000,000.

On July 1 of last year, the District quota of WPA workers was 11,000—"and we barely got along," said Young.

Whole Projects Eliminated

After receiving the Federal order, Edwards immediately gathered his assistants and started whacking employable men and women from WPA rolls. In many instances, important projects were eliminated entirely.

Among these are the art, music and writers' projects employing 191 persons. Their elimination includes the popular childrens' gallery.

Health, welfare and highway items also received drastic curtailments.

The entire local WPA highway program, with exception of an access road to Bolling Field (a defense project), was stricken by Edwards. The program involves 285 workers.

Another project ordered stopped is the defense training program for 207 persons.

A clean sweep of all projects at Gallinger Hospital, construction and service, involving 127 persons, also was made.

The only programs left intact were the recreation and educational projects. The recreation program employs 90 persons and includes school playground supervision. Some 100 persons work in the educational project, which deals principally with Americanization teaching and language instruction to Army officers.

429 Off Airport Roster

The roster at the National Airport at Gravelly Point was cut by 429 workers.

Other cuts and eliminations announced by Edwards were:

District woodyard, 64 persons, out; District repair shop, 81 persons, out; Water Department, cut from 164 to 75; rural electrification project, 157 persons, out; National Capital Parks, 50 persons, out; Sewer Department, cut from 620 to 75; National Training School for Boys, 26 persons, out; Home for the Aged, 153 persons, out; all Federal agency projects, 523 persons, out.

Surplus commodities (local five-cent milk stations), cut from 169 to 100; sewing room, cut from 267 to 100; school lunch program, cut from 286 to 100; household training, 22 persons, out; health department clerical service, cut from 130 to 50; housekeeping aid, cut from 162 to 50; Library of Congress research project, 80 persons, out.

Blind Project Out

Vocational rehabilitation for the blind, 19 persons, out; National Archives research project, 106 persons, out; soil conservation project, 18 persons, out; Census Bureau, 42 persons, out; U. S. Supreme Court, 4 persons, out; historical records project, 111 persons, out; labor statistics, 25 persons, out; Budget Bureau, 8 persons, out; Bureau of Indian Affairs, 6 persons, out; recorder of deeds, 36 persons, out, and the Health Department assistance program, 10 persons, out.

In connection with the free school lunch program, it was reported that an average of 5,000 lunches a day are served at 66 schools throughout the summer. The number increases to 9,000 during winter school months.

The District repair shop program, which was eliminated, carries on repair and construction work for public schools.

Ickes Asks Ban on Oil Exports From Atlantic Seaboard

By the Associated Press

A complete ban on exports of oil from the East Coast of the United States, without prior Government approval of individual shipments, was proposed to the petroleum industry yesterday by Secretary Ickes, Defense Petroleum Coordinator.

The action followed close on the heels of the stoppage Monday of a 240,000-gallon shipment of oil from Philadelphia, because of the threatened oil famine on the Eastern seaboard.

Maritime sources in Philadelphia said the export ban would affect at least ten vessels scheduled to sail from there for foreign ports before the end of July with oil shipments. Seven are Japanese and three are Danish.

All have contracted for lubricating oil in containers.

32 Telegrams Go Out

Ickes' assistant petroleum coordinator, R. K. Davies, addressed identical telegrams to 32 East Coast oil shippers, as follows:

"In view of the impending petroleum shortage in the Atlantic Coast area, it is imperative that drainage of stocks from this region be avoided. I suggest therefore that no further sales of petroleum products for offshore shipment be made without prior consideration by this office."

This procedure, Ickes' aides said, was taken under the coordinator's authority to make "petroleum and petroleum products available adequately and continuously at the proper places," and to "make specific recommendations . . . to insure the maintenance of ready and adequate supply of petroleum and petroleum products."

Sailing Blocked by Protest

The sailing of the Azuma Maru was blocked after a protest from Edward Jobbins, general manager of the Wilson Martin division of Wilson & Co., Inc., who said he didn't believe the shipment should be permitted in the face of a possible oil shortage in the Eastern States.

In a telegram to Ickes, Jobbins declared that lack of oil would force him to stop production of fatty acids needed in processing "important national defense products."

"I object very strongly to working my head off on defense," said Jobbins, "and now facing the threat of having to close down because oil is being exported to Japan—an Axis power, and our potential enemy."

'Secret Weapon' Locates Planes

scientists worked on the device in secrecy until after the war had started.

Three services, the fleet, the army and the air arm, played a part in the development, and it was said that the device was invaluable for all of them.

"Though all three services played a part in the later development of radio location," said Air Marshal Joubert, "the Royal Air Force can legitimately take credit for its initial development. It knew what it wanted and was prepared to back scientists who thought they could give it by adapting certain principles."

Radio location has been more of a development than an invention in the sense that it was not discovered by accident or in a flash. It was not a sudden inspiration, but rather more remarkable than that. It was an example of how vision and genius can develop and expand known scientific principles to solve a problem.

"Though millions of pounds have been spent on radio locaters," Air Marshal Joubert said, "it is safe to say that the entire cost has already been saved. It was of such incalculable help that independent observers from the Dominions have stated categorically that the battle for Britain was won by the fighters of the R. A. F. and radio locators."

The use of some such device has been fairly well known for some time but a statement concerning it, even as guarded as those by Air Marshal Joubert and Lord Beaverbrook today, probably would never have been made if the time had not come when technicians were urgently needed. It is expected that a certain number of women in the women's auxiliary air force may be trained to operate the radio locators, but it is estimated that in addition to 300 women some 10,000 men are needed for division among the three services.

Some technicians are wanted for the development of the apparatus and more efficient operation, some for upkeep and some for installations and management. The field that must be covered runs all the way from trained radio mechanics to highly educated physicists and theoreticians.

"The demands for personnel come on us from the air force, army and navy," said Lord Beaverbrook. "These demands are always growing—demands for the men who invent and improve, and those who make and maintain the technical equipment with which the battle for freedom is being fought. Where the work goes on here, where man has sought out many inventions, you have an invitation to join us."

House Approves Bill Authorizing Naval Promotions

The House yesterday passed legislation authorizing President Roosevelt to make unlimited temporary promotions in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard to supply the required officers for the expanding fleet.

The Administration-sponsored measure permits advancements of commissioned, warrant and top-ranking non-commissioned officers to higher rank, but naval officials have said that additional warrant and junior commissioned officers are mainly needed now. No promotions will be made to the top commissioned grades for the present, it was said.

An amendment was adopted on the floor which would apply wartime pay rates to those advanced under the act. Without this change, few of these advanced would receive a pay increase, as the Army-Navy pay laws are based on length of service.

Campaign Seeks To Smuggle Radios To Reich Rebels

Hollywood, June 17 (AP).—Hal Styles, president of the Los Angeles Chapter, Veteran Wireless Operators' Association, said today a national campaign will be opened Saturday for radio parts to be sent to Germany.

Destination is the Reich's underground movement, Style said, an anti-Nazi organization which keeps informed by radio of British and American news. The parts would be smuggled into Germany from England.

"Germany has given America a pretty good example of what can be accomplished through fifth column activities," Styles declared, "and anti-Nazis in Germany will become fifth columnists for us."

2 Radio Heads Say FCC Rules Harm Industry

By the Associated Press

Executives of America's two largest broadcasting networks accused the Federal Communications Commission yesterday of attempting to dominate the radio chains through regulations which would prove "disastrous" to the industry.

The charges were made by Niles Trammell, president of the National Broadcasting Co.; William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and John J. Burns, C. B. S. general counsel.

They appeared before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee at a hearing on a resolution by Senator White (Republican), Maine, to postpone enforcement of the CC's new regulations pending a Congressional investigation.

Chairman James L. Fly, of the FCC said when the regulations were issued that they were designed to curb "monopolistic practices" of N. B. C. and C. B. S., which he described as opposed to "any and all restrictions" on their operations.

Trammell's Charges

Trammell said the regulations would "disastrously affect the entire broadcasting structure of the Nation" and that they resulted from "unproven charges of domination, control and monopoly" against N. B. C. and C. B. S. One of the regulations directed N. B. C. to dispose of its Blue Network.

Trammell said the five FFC members who signed the majority report expected a possible breakdown in the competitive system of broadcasting operated by private enterprise.

He subscribed to the prediction of the two minority FCC members who foresaw "business anarchy" as a result of the regulations. The FCC majority, he said, was "perfectly willing" to recommend a Government-controlled broadcasting monopoly in the future.

Paley charged the FCC "strains and strives" to injure N. B. C. and C. B. S. while attempting to "help" the Mutual Broadcasting System, the third national network which has supported the FCC regulations.

Trammell, Paley and Burns agreed there was a need for "clarification" of communications laws respecting broadcasting, and said Congress should "more clearly define" the powers of the FCC.

Meddling Laid to FCC

The executives disputed the authority of the FCC to declare the existence of monopoly, maintaining that it was an administrative licensing agency and that the courts must determine monopolistic practices.

They defended network ownership of stations and "exclusive" contracts, two phases of radio chain operations hit in the new regulations, and said the FCC was attempting to "meddle" in business practices of the networks by banning rate agreements between a chain and its affiliates.

Trammell said the industry had set up self-regulation machinery to correct objectionable tactics, "but we have come down a long road to the point now where the commission demands that the industry yield to it the control of business practices under the guise of its authority to grant licenses 'in the public interest, convenience and necessity.'"

Small Industries Imperiled By Priority, OPM Aide Fears

Forecasting as a distinct possibility the obliteration of small businesses due to priority action in the defense program, an OPM official yesterday hinted at Government underwriting of small factories, closed by the defense program, so that they can be started up again after the emergency.

Speaking here before field representatives of the OPM defense contract service, an official of the service, Peter R. Nehemkis, declared that the "drastic effect" of priorities has covered whole industries and that already not less than ten entire industries whose supplies have been cut off or sharply curtailed face either closure or entrance into new lines of production.

"Indeed," Nehemkis said, "before the end of this summer, we expect to find one-third of American industry faced with the grim reality of 'guns versus butter.'

"It is one of the profound ironies of our defense effort that its total effect may well be to obliterate the smaller enterprises from the American business scene."

He pointed out that this result would mean the loss of competition in American business and the destruction of "the last frontier of individual initiative and venturesomeness." As a solution, Nehemkis asked whether it might not be necessary "to devise techniques for the underwriting of those factories which have been closed down so that they may be enabled to start up again as soon as possible after the emergency."

Brenda Frazier To Marry This Month

By the United Press

New York, June 17.—Brenda Diana Duff Frazier, cafe society glamor girl and heiress to more than $4,000,000 when she is 21 next June, will be married to John (Shipwreck) Kelly, insurance broker and cafe society character, sometime this month, it was announced today.

The wedding, according to the social secretary for Mrs. Frederic Watriss, mother of Brenda, probable will not be as lavish as the $35,000 coming out party given the brunette beauty in December 1938.

Kelly, is a former professional football player, who won fame at the University of Kentucky, where he was an outstanding halfback in 1931. With the financial assistance of his guardian, Percy H. Johnston, chairman of the board of the New York Chemical Bank & Trust Co., he became part owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers professional team but sold his interest a few months ago. Since coming to New York after his graduation in 1932 he has been seen frequently in cafe society circles and has been a frequent escort of Brenda. He is 30.

The pale beauty of the Stork Club has been living on only a portion of the $170,000 annual income left her in the $4,000,000 estate of her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Frank Pierce Frazier. She receives the principal June 9, 1942, when she will be 21. Another $1,000,000 more or less, will come to her after her marriage, due to a peculiarity of her father's will.

The late Frank Duff Frazier and Brenda's mother were divorced in 1936. The estate was divided between Brenda and her mother, with the proviso that Brenda would receive none of it while she lived with her mother. It was assumed that when she goes to live with Kelly the money will be hers.

Apparently in deference to the war, the British-born Mrs. Watriss decided on a quiet wedding for her daughter, to take place at their Ritz-Carlton home.

Bill Offered to End Boundary Dispute

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, yesterday introduced legislation to end the old dispute over the Virginia-District of Columbia boundary and declare the new National Airport part of the Capital City.

Corporation Counsel Keech recently ruled that the entire airport lies within the District, but Virginia officials have maintained that all the land, except that created by dredgings from the Potomac, is within Virginia.

The Nichols bill fixes the boundary at the existing high water mark on the Virginia side of the Potomac, except for the airport area.

3 Inspectors To Quit Force

The retirements of three police inspectors, reported under consideration last week, were accepted officially yesterday by the Commissioners.

The retirements become effective August 1 and involve Inspectors L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent of police; B. W. Thompson, chief of detectives, and William G. Stott.

The Commissioners also accepted the retirements of Detective Sergt. Howard W. Smith and Privates Daniel Foley and Albert R. Lamb.

There was no announcement from the Commissioners on successors to the retired officers. It has been widely reported, however, that Inspector James Beckett will take Edwards' place; Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, will take over Thompson's post, and Capt. Harvey Callahan will be promoted to fill the inspectorship vacancy.

50 More Books In Agents' Trial

Alleged Russian propaganda which called the Pope "a tool of capitalism" and portrayed the United States as a loose, lax country where nobody lived with his own wife was placed before 12 jurors in the District Court yesterday.

More than 80 books were placed in evidence, beside 70 offered last week. The works are alleged to have been handled in this country by three officials of Bookniga Corporation, which, the Government says, was a Soviet propaganda agency.

Morris Liskin, 54, Bookniga president; Norman Weinberg, secretary, and Raphael Rush, vice president, are on trial before Justice F. Dickinson Letts on a charge of criminal conspiracy to evade provisions of the law requiring alien agents to register with the State Department.

B. Frank, New York advertising man, testified yesterday that Amtorg, the official Russian trading agency, paid a bill for $900.71 for Bookniga advertisements in the Daily Worker, the New Masses and other publications. The ads, said Frank, were charged to Meznniga, the Soviet publishing house in Moscow.

Seven Educators Join Faculty of Georgetown University

Georgetown University yesterday announced the appointment of seven new faculty members, and the transfer of seven young Jesuit scholastics on the staff of the college of arts and sciences to other schools.

Most important of the newcomers is the Rev. Thomas J. Murray, former dean of the Manhattan division of Fordham College and dean of the Fordham School of Commerce. He has been assigned to the faculty of Georgetown School of Foreign Service.

Father Murray will replace the Rev. Aloysius R. Mack, professor of religion, who is to be changed to the college faculty. The only other change of assignments within the faculty involves the Rev. Aloysius J. Hogan, professor of religion in the college, who is to teach English next year. Father Hogan is a former president of Fordham University.

Other new appointments on the college faculty include the Rev. Philip S. Hurley, who will succeed Father Hogan as professor of religion. He is coming from Our Lady of Martyrs Tertianship, Auriesville, N. Y. The Rev. Joseph A. d'Invilliers, from Loyola College, Baltimore, will be assigned as professor of political science. The Rev. Philip V. Sullivan and the Rev. Timothy P. Reardon, both from Auriesville, N. Y., also will teach in the college. The latter will be professor of mathematics and physics.

Two scholastics assigned to the college staff are George S. Glanzman, S. J., sociology, and John J. Scanlan, S. J., Latin. Each was studying last year in the Fordham Graduate School.

The scholastics who are being assigned elsewhere include Edward H. Dineen, professor of mathematics; George B. Hoch, instructor in classics; Brian A. McGrath, professor of political science, and Joseph F. Murphy, professor of English. They are all going to Woodstock College, Md., for courses in theology.

Theodore G. Plessner, instructor in English and director of dramatics, has been assigned to St. Peter's College, Jersey City, N. J.; Edward J. Sweeney will go to St. Francis Xavier College, New York City, and Herbert A. Musurillo will go to Fordham University.

The six-year term of the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University expires officially on July 2. There has been no indication as yet whether he will be transferred in the summer or be retained in office.

Jackson's Son Wins High Award at Yale

New Haven, Conn., June 17 (AP).—William E. Jackson, of Jamestown, N. Y., son of Robert H. Jackson, United States Attorney General and Supreme Court nominee, won one of Yale's six highest awards announced today by President Charles Seymour as 664 seniors of Yale College, Sheffield Scientific School and the Engineering School received their degrees.

Jackson's award was the David C. DeForest prize, given to the senior "who shall write and pronounce an English oration in the best manner."

Zamzam Survivor Describes Experiences on Nazi Raider and Supply Ship

Vessel Shelled At Dawn With No Warning

A detailed account of life aboard a German raider by a survivor of a Nazi-sunk ship is recorded in the letters of James P. McKnight, of Allentown, Pa., a representative of the United Presbyterian Church, to his family. McKnight was aboard the Egyptian motorship Zamzam when it was attacked in the south Atlantic on April 18. Excerpts from his letters, written in his 39 days aboard the raider and its supply ship, follow:

By James P. McKnight

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

(May 4, 1941.)

At 5:15 Thursday morning, April 17, Frank E. Conboy got up and dressed. I looked at my watch by flashlight, and was just dozing off again when there was a great "wham" close by.

I thought something had fallen on the deck overhead, and immediately there was a second "wham," also close by. Conboy came rushing in and I said, "What is it?"

He said, "A raider." I said, "Oh, no, maybe it is a collision."

He said, "Why, you can see it." "Wham." Conboy said, "God, are they going to sink us without warning?"

In this time I had been putting on my trousers and shirt over my P. J.'s. Mr. (the Rev. Dr. Ralph D.) Hult came in from the bathroom and was dressing, too. I said, "Don't forget your passport," and got the key and unlocked the Gladstone for mine.

Then from the hall I heard, "My God, Vic, is it you?"

With what I had got on I hurried out into the hall, and there was the ambulance unit leader lying shot through both legs at the knees. One of his outfit was just leaving him and was saying to the others:

"The shelling is all over now," and to me, "If you can find the ship's doctor send him here."

Women, Children in Hall

Women and children were already in the hall. Some one said, "use the rear stairs, the other is blocked."

The ports were all closed and lights still burning in our section and I thought it night. But as I stepped onto the rear deck it was almost dawn, no sunrise yet, but light enough to see, and away in the distance was the dark form of a ship. I saw a signal light flash from it.

Our station was one deck up and I hurried there. No signal had been given and no officer was on hand to direct. People were saying, "Do we get into the boats?" The chief engineer came by and I asked him, but he didn't reply. Sailors were lowering our boat from the deck above us.

Mr. Hult and I helped in Mrs. (Elmer R.) Danielson and her six children, Mrs. (Walter A.) Ohman, Dr. (Dudley) Wright (75) and his wife, Mrs. (W. E.) Thompson and her daughter, and then we men got in. There must have been others, too. . . . The sailors cried, "No more, no more," and lowered away to the water. They unhooked the rope at the same time the boat began to take water.

Two sailors and a petty officer came down the rope into the boat. I wanted them to hook on the rope again, but someone said, "We will bail it with our hands," and the officer said, "We will bail it with the bucket." The sailors got out the oars and pulled toward the stern of the Zamzam, and then the boat was half full of water and the cry was, "El gardal, el gardal, wein el gardel." It was hopeless from the start.

Boat Quickly Filled

By the time we reached the stern of the boat and in less time than I write this, the boat was full. I said to Mr. Ohman, "In a minute we will all be out in the water." Mrs. O. said, "Walter, come here by me." And with that we all tipped into the water.

I remember going under and of catching my breath to not take in water, then my head was out and my hand on the edge of the upside down boat. Two sailors were astride it and I climbed up with them. Others were in the water clinging to the rope loops on the side of the lifeboat . . . obviously, we could not remain long as we were. Would the raider do anything? The sailors were saying, "Ya Zamzam, Ya Zamzam" and then as the raider drew near, "Ya captain, Ya captain," though they couldn't be heard.

Now it appeared that as we drifted the raider and our boat would collide at the intersection, but the raider had power on and passed in front of us and we drifted right along its hull. In the meantime, the raider had put out a motor launch, but it went immediately to the strugglers in the water.

As we drifted alongside the raider the German sailors leaned over the rail and threw a rope. One of our sailors caught it, but instead of using it to stop and hold us, he simply climbed up the rope and left us to drift.

A second rope was thrown in the same way by another sailor. By this time we were rapidly approaching the stern of the raider where the propeller was churning the water and the prospect became more threatening.

Second Boat Aids

But now a second motor launch was lowered and it came to us directly. We put women and children aboard first and soon were going up the rope ladder to the deck of the raider. After one child had tried to climb up the German sailors told us to hold them for baskets.

On deck it seemed to me impossible to believe that Mrs. D. and her six were all together and safe . . . No sooner were we on the deck of the raider than a beautiful rainbow streamed across the sky. We thanked God in our hearts and took courage.

Our captors looked on passively, but not hostilely, as we came along the deck of the raider. On the after deck plain benches had already been placed and the first were already seated. Life belts were taken off and blankets provided. Soon they said, "Women this way," and men hurried to kiss their wives, fearing separation had come. But the guards smiled and said, "Oh, no," and nodded encouragingly.

I now took stock of my own situation. Of course, I was soaked, but my hat was still on my head. I had put on my new brown shoes, my new gray trousers over my P. J.'s, and thought I had put on a shirt, too, but had been conscious for some time of P. J. sleeves. Then all of a sudden I saw I had one of the greenish shirts bought in Newcastle on. The sleeves had been rolled up when I put it on. When I had gotten that far, I had put on my life belt, then had grabbed watch, wallet, passport and travelers' checks.

Glad to Be Alive

Then I put on my old green hat, grabbed my new gray coat and my raincoat over my arm and was ready. When others needed help into the boat I fired my coats ahead of me. When the boat overturned I lost both. I put on a blanket and slipped off trousers, shirt, shoes and socks to dry. My right trouser had an "L" tear at the knee, and the P. J.'s underneath the same, and two skinned places on my leg. I had decided before hand to wear my best as I might not save anything else. Anyway now I stood in the sun in my blanket and was glad to be alive.

Now the passengers and the crew began to arrive on deck rapidly and the officers were reported to have said something about many Americans. Soon our deck was full of passengers and Zamzam officers. Many arrived as neatly dressed as for church, but more were either wet or were only partly clothed in day clothing. A number came on in pajamas or bathrobes or in various combinations. People said little except to greet each other.

Soon the Germans brought huge tea kettles full of hot tea and about six mugs for 100 men. We took turns drinking and felt better. As soon as all were aboard we were lined up and counted, and announcement was made that all had been saved, though six were wounded, three of them seriously. It still sounds impossible to accept.

The motor launches had been putt-putting back and forth, and as soon as all were on board they returned to the Z. Z. and soon we saw luggage coming on the raider. German sailors carried it along the deck we were on and up to the promenade deck above. Then we watched and saw launches return to the raider where other sailors handed down baggage from the side door on our deck amidship.

Belongings Brought Over

Returning to the raider, the baggage was pulled up with the winch in rope hammocks. At first it seemed incredible that in such fashion they could or would take time to transfer the luggage of 200 passengers. But as hours wore on at this, typewriters, grips, trunks, playthings, steamer chairs and finally loose clothing tied in sheets, blankets and curtains began to arrive.

Supplies also were brought over in the same way. Cartons of cigarettes by the dozen, fruit and provisions from the larder of the Zamzam.

Early in the forenoon the men with wives below were allowed to go to see them. When they returned they reported that the ladies and children were in a large, clean room three flights down; that there were wooden benches to sit on and provisions for bunks, too. At 10:30 or so they all came on deck and some were still wet.

At 11:30 they went back down for lunch and at 12 men went to the same room. Now began meals with which we were to become well acquainted in the weeks to come. They all consisted of three parts—a thick soup, brown bread, tea. That first soup was well prepared and tasty. The bread was always heavy and usually sour. Tea was of medium strength with a little sugar served, same to all, no choice. Those who didn't crowd in that day found no dishes or cups. Lots of us used unwashed dishes and cups. Or we took dirty ones and washed them ourselves.

Shells Sink Zamzam

Back on deck after lunch it seemed that the transfer from the Zamzam was about complete. All day an officer had stood on the raider sending and receiving messages to an officer on the Zamzam and vice versa. No attempt was made to touch cargo or baggage in the hold.

At 2 the raider pulled a little distance away. Then the last men on the Zamzam got into the launch and pulled away at right angles for 100 yards or so and then there was an explosion. The launch circled to the other side, and there was a similar explosion. The Zamzam originally had one shell below the water line and had taken water slowly all forenoon. Now she started to sink rapidly and in seven minutes went under. At the end she listed to port, but her keel kept even. In the morning's shelling probably 12 to 15 shells were fired.

Immediately after the Zamzam sank, the raider's engines began to throb and a lot of vibration was set up as the raider began speeding across the South Atlantic. We sat around on deck on benches and life preservers, utilizing the shade of masts and funnels. We talked in low tones of our predicament.

In the afternoon, Mr. (William H.) Edwards came to me and said that Mr. (the Rev. W. J.) Guilding had asked Mr. (Stanley) Johnson to be our representative to meet the captain of the raider.

A committee was made up to represent the passengers: A. Catholic, Father (Charles J. V.) Murphy; a journalist, representing Life and Fortune, who had embarked at Pernambuco; Capt. Wyndenbuck (William A. Wyndenbruck-Loe), of the ambulance corps; Mr. Johnson, and Capt. Smith, skipper of the Zamzam. No meeting was held to elect them. They were just quietly asked to accept. At 4 o'clock or so, Mr. Johnson appeared and motioned our group together. He reported as follows:

They had a nice conference. Capt. Roger of the raider had been very congenial. We were not to be prisoners of war but guests of his on the raider. But while we were guests, still this was a warship and we would have many limitations. We must obey rules and cooperate. We would be put on another ship, a German cargo or supply ship. That transfer would be in about one to four days. We would then be taken to a German-controlled port in Europe. No distinction would be made between neutrals and belligerents among the passengers. Passengers' belongings and baggage would be returned after transfer to the other ship. That seemed hard to those who were barefoot and had only pajamas, and practically no one had a comb or toilet articles.

Before lunch an officer had set up a small table and had us pass before him to turn in passports, money, flashlights. As my wallet was soaked, I turned in my travelers' checks and $29 cash and my passport. We were allowed to keep our pocket knives.

While at lunch a German brought a piece of chalk and said for each one to write his name on a bunk. This big room was really a big hold below the water line. . . . It was like a platform raised about 1 foot. Here the tables and bench for 100 were set. On both sides were rows of wooden bunks. Double-deckers and two tight against each other with only a 10-inch board between. Apparently the bunks accommodated the 202 passengers and 16 officers.

The women again went down early for supper and the men, too, went below before dusk. Supper again—thick rice soup, brown bread and tea. The hold was hot and was only bearable on account of air pumped in through ventilators. Again we sat in groups and conversed in low tones. About 8 o'clock someone said, "Why shouldn't we have prayers?" and another, "I don't see why we shouldn't sing, too."

So we gathered at two tables and started to sing. But the nonmissionary group were obviously annoyed and I heard Mrs. Robert A. Starling, whose husband was badly injured, saying, "there is a time for everything." Then one of the ambulance boys came and asked us to stop singing. So we prayed and committed ourselves to God and went to bed.

In our bunks were coarse mattresses and pillows. No blankets, no sheets. Some one had swiped my pillow, so I put down my life preserver, covered it with my shirt, took off trousers, shirt and socks and was ready for bed. There was a washroom off one side and a latrine off the other side of this hold.

Mr. McKnight tells of meeting the raider's supply ship at sea and the second transfer of survivors in excerpts from additional letters to appear tomorrow.

E. J. Armstrong, Indian Office Aide, Is Buried

E. J. Armstrong, assistant business manager and assistant finance officer of the United States Office of Indian Affairs since 1935, was buried yesterday in Forrestville, Md., following funeral services in Emanuel Episcopal Church, Alexandria, Va.

Mr. Armstrong, known to hundreds of Indians over the country and highly regarded by them, died Sunday in Garfield Hospital of a heart ailment.

He entered the Indian service in 1919 as a clerk. Previously he was employed by the War Department after serving with the Thirty-third Field Artillery during the World War.

He was educated at Eastern High School, Washington; Syracuse University, N. Y., and Michigan Agricultural College (now Michigan State College) in East Lansing, Mich.

A resident of 401 Jackson Place, Jefferson Park, Alexandria, Mr. Armstrong is survived by his wife, Mrs. Charlotte Hass Armstrong; a daughter, Joyce L.; his mother, Mrs. Grace Armstrong, of Upper Marlboro, Md., and a sister, Mrs. Louise Runkle, also of Upper Marlboro.

Victor Mature Weds Hall Kemp's Widow in N. Y.

New York, June 17 (AP).—Victor Mature, current glamour boy of the stage, and Martha Stephenson Kemp, widow of Hal Kemp, the orchestra leader, were married tonight in the bride's Park Avenue apartment by New York Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora.

Mature said a religious ceremony would follow in St. Paul's Catholic Church, Louisville, Ky., his home town. Mature is a Catholic; his bride an Episcopalian.

While the couple was exchanging their vows—Mature gave his bride a plain gold wedding ring—the bride's daughter, 11-month-old Helen Stephenson Kemp, slept in her bedroom. Kemp died in California last December from injuries suffered in an auto accident.

Russia also was said to have increased her air and sea patrols in the Black Sea, and to have ordered general mobilization and cancellation of all army leaves.

German armored divisions, aircraft and artillery, together with many infantry divisions, have been reported along the Russian border. One source points out that in the past the Germans have never built up such a formidable show of armed strength except to back up far-reaching political demands.

It also said the Soviet minister to Rumania has left for Moscow.

Tinkham Demands Ouster of Officers Backing Union Now

Copyright by New York Times

Officers of the Army and Navy who support the entrance of the United States into a Federal union with Great Britain and other sovereign powers were condemned yesterday by Representative George Holden Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Drawing attention to an organization called "Federal Union" which listed Admiral W. H. Standley, Rear Admiral H. E. Yarnell, both retired, and Maj. Gen. G. V. Strong on its council of advisers, Tinkham told the House that he had written to the War and Navy Departments asking for their dismissal.

Tinkham told the House that the War Department had reported to him that Gen. Strong had not authorized the use of his name by "Federal Union" but that he had not had a reply from the Navy Department.

They were thus invisible to the watching German aviators for they were indistinguishable from the desert bushes, whereas convoys of trucks would have betrayed that the British were massing troops. The Indians marched in the daytime, they ate one hot meal just after dark and then ate cold foods en route.

Arriving within striking distance of the escarpment early yesterday they lay motionless all day at the jump-off lines. The Germans evidently were completely surprised when the Indians along with other troops attacked them on the face of the escarpment after having slipped up to attack the position during the night. The attack, which began at precisely 6 a. m., was preceded 10 minutes earlier by a spirited British airplane bombardment of the Axis positions.

The Germans fought stubbornly. It was only by the greatest determination that the British gradually installed themselves in the gullies, occupying first one, then another, with a hard mop-up fight for each one.

Counterattack In Syria Cuts Allied Lines

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, June 17.—The situation in Syria changed overnight when Gen. Henri Dentz's army launched a sudden and swift counteroffensive from three directions, cutting behind the Allied lines to recapture Merdjayoun and threatening Kuneitra and the main communication lines of the Free French force fighting south of Damascus.

British military sources, while admitting this move will effectively delay any further advance for a few days, say it does not materially affect the main lines of the campaign or the advance.

The French counterattack came across the Hauran Plain, beating against the Allied line roughly established along Ezra Sheikmeskin down the Hermon Massif. The drive which enabled the defending forces to recapture Merdjayoun was made by a motorized cavalry detachment supported by small groups of infantry and Druse cavalary.

Allies Surprised

The Beirut radio at 6:10 p. m. asserted that "our forces" are now installed at Ezra and Kuneitra, and German sources here claim they have received direct reports from Syria stating Kuneitra has been recaptured. This, however, is denied by the British.

Beirut announces that a large number of prisoners and considerable material have been captured from the Allied forces.

There is no doubt that the Allies have been taken by surprise and that the line which they were carefully straightening out between Damascus and Damour—north of Sidon—will have to be rebuilt. The Free French troops of Gen. le Gentilhomme, who has sufficiently recovered from his wounds to reassume command, have their supply lines threatened from the rear. German sources report they are drawing back from Damascus, but this is denied by the British.

Jerusalem reports say that a French force holding Merdjayoun is not considered a serious threat, although it is supported by tanks. It is admitted that contact has been established with the French column attacking toward Kouneitra. A new British forward push is said to have been registered southwest of Damascus.

Air Arm Reinforced

The French reportedly have been bringing aerial reinforcements in some quantities to the Levant. These are flying from North Africa, making halts in Italy and Greece en route. It is reported by British military circles that between 40 and 70 have already arrived. One French freighter plane and one Italian bomber have made forced landings in southern Turkey and their crews have been interned.

The Royal Air Force again bombed Aleppo. The French attacked British columns in the central sector, claiming to have shot down four gladiator fighters, and one force tried to harry the British forces operating between Sidon and Beirut.

Beirut claimed one British destroyer was severely damaged and rendered incapable of movement and another set afire. There is a belief here that some French naval units have arrived in the Levant from Toulon.

The Ankara radio reports that the British have staged a naval landing near Beirut but no details are given.

British Take New Town

The fact that Gen. Jean-Marie-Josef Bergeret, the Vichy air secretary, has been named commander of the Vichy air force in Syria and the Lebanon is significant. The British admit heavier air battling and say two French bombers and an equal number of fighters were shot down while British bombers effected a series of raids. Six Allied planes were lost.

Meanwhile, the British claim to have taken Aatouz, another important point 6 miles west of Damascus.

Official French circles here admit that the French operations which have just taken place are on a small scale because there are not large enough forces available for major manoeuvres. The British describe the unit which took Merdjayou as "a small raiding party."

The claim that German planes with French markings painted on them are now operating in Syria and the Lebanon and that Stukas similarly disguished are now operating off the Lebanese Coast.

The British report that Gen. Dentz has ordered his men to fire on any Allied soldiers advancing with the purpose of parleying.

Nellie Sedgley, 88, Dies; Descendant Of John Alden

Miss Nellie Sedgley, 88, a sixth generation descendant of John and Priscilla Alden, died last night at her home, 2406 Massachusetts Avenue.

Long active in Washington official and diplomatic circles, Miss Sedgley came here in 1890 from Concord, N. H. With her sister, the late Miss Mary I. Sedgley, for many years she held weekly diplomatic gatherings.

Her father was James Sedgley, a prominent railroad builder, who was active in construction of the New York Central Railroad.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at her home with Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, officiating. Interment will take place Friday at Concord.

GIVE LIVER BILE FLOW A BOOST—

Start Tomorrow Morning and Keep This Up for 30 Days

Normally the liver should discharge about a quart of digestion-aiding bile juices a day. If it doesn't—a scanty flow—may cause Sick Headaches, so-called Biliousness, Poor Digestion, with that half-sick, tired, awful feeling and most probably Constipation.

There's no need to take a Calomel or other risky drugs. Just take a little daily dose of that world-famous Kruschen Salts—half a level teaspoonful in a glass of hot or cold water about half an hour before breakfast. This rouses the flow of bile with its gentle bowel action. Try it for 30 days and you too may shake off that "run-down" feeling and get a real "lift." But don't start unless you are willing to keep it up for 30 days. If then you do not feel 100% better get your money back.

Petain Asks French to Put Faith in Him

By Lansing Warren
Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, June 17.—On the anniversary of assuming power in the midst of the debacle Marshal Petain today broadcast a message calling Frenchmen to reason and asking for their faith and their patience.

"You have been neither sold nor betrayed nor abandoned," the marshal assured them. And, he added sternly, "You are suffering and must suffer for a long time still because we have not yet paid for all our mistakes."

A striking feature of the broadcast was the repetition of the phonograph record of the address in which the marshal, one year ago, had announced the gift of his person to the French nation to diminish its sufferings and in which he had told them it was necessary to endeavor to seek with the enemy the means of restoring peace in honor. As he pointed out his voice, as recorded in that year-old record, had preserved an emotion that was lacking in his words as they were spoken today.

Voice Is Stronger

"Today, my voice is stronger," he said, "because France is recovering."

This, however, a large number of French people refuse to admit, he said, and then asked everyone in Frnace to think back and see if they really thought that their situation was worse today than one year ago. If so, he said, their memories were short. He drew for them a picture of France as it was then, with soldiers in rout mingling with hundreds of thousands of women, aged and child refugees on the road, and the whole country in distress.

Since then, he recalled that they had, most of them, returned to their homes, industry was resuming, and agriculture, deprived of over 1,000,000 workers, had made a splendid effort.

Marshal Petain admitted the grave difficulties with food supplies and the need for further sacrifices.

"Need Your Faith"

"But, believe me," he urged, "the moment has not come to take refuge in bitterness and sink into despair. You are neither sold nor betrayed nor abandoned. And those who are telling you that lie are throwing you into the arms of communism."

The task of following blindly, he said, was hard, but the peasants and workers were aiding him, he said.

'But I need still more," he concluded, "I need your faith, the faith of your hearts and reason. I need your wisdom and your patience. Remember now that you are men, that you belong to a glorious nation. Banish your alarms and join me. Together we shall come out of the darkness into which this dreadful adventure has plunged us all."

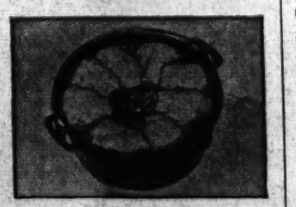
ELLERY QUEEN'S Mystery Potted Veal with Dumplings



2 pounds veal shoulder
1 onion, sliced
1 quart water
6 carrots, sliced
2 cups potatoes, diced
2 teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon Lea & Perrins Sauce
4 tablespoons flour
¼ cup cold water
2 cups biscuit mix
1 cup milk

Remove fat and cut meat into one-inch cubes. Simmer veal and onion in water for 1 hour. Add carrots, potatoes, salt and Lea & Perrins Sauce; continue cooking for 15 minutes. Thicken mixture with flour which has been blended with water. Combine biscuit mix and milk and drop by teaspoonfuls on top of meat and vegetables which are gently boiling. Cover closely and steam 20 minutes without lifting cover. This makes 4 to 6 servings.

No mystery at all to the hearty, wholesome goodness of this meal-in-a-dish. It's the touch of Lea & Perrins Sauce that turns the trick, and makes the family beg for more.

Try Lea & Perrins Sauce tonight, and see how this original Worcestershire points up the flavor of all your favorite meat and fish dishes. You'll agree there never was a better cook's assistant.

Aircraft Carrier Illustrious Nearly Destroyed in January

By the Associated Press

London, (Wednesday), June 18.—An admiralty statement based on official reports disclosed today that the aircraft carrier Illustrious was perilously near destruction when attacked by Nazi dive bombers in the Mediterranean on January 10.

At one time the ship careened in wide circles out of control under a rain of bombs while fires blazed aboard the ship and engine crews were barely able to remain below.

The Illustrious was attacked six times at sea and four more after it limped into harbor at Malta.

Seventy bombs fell in "the immediate vicinity of the ship" during four large scale assaults.

An official report said the work of the "engine room and repair parties saved the vulnerable ship after severe damage and in difficult conditions."

The rudder gear broke down after the second attack necessitating steering with the engines while a list developed as a result of an accumulation of water poured on the fires.

Numerous fires quickly were put out, but a serious blaze in one hangar repeatedly drove back the fire fighters who risked explosions from the fuel tanks of the aircraft.

"Down in the boiler rooms conditions were growing almost unbearable," the statement said. "Draught fans were pouring down thick clouds of black smoke and fumes from chemical fire extinguishers, but steam had to be maintained at all costs. Men in the boiler rooms held on doggedly. They had to breathe through wet cloths, gasping to get each breath."

Larry Allen, the Associated Press sea-going war correspondent, was aboard the Illustrious on January 10 when Nazi planes attacked the ship for seven hours. He wrote a vivid description of the attack he witnessed from the bridge until one of the bombs blew him down a hatchway to another deck.

He quoted a ship's officer as saying that the attack was "the most tremendous, terrifying thing I have ever seen. It sounded like all the fires of hell had been kindled."

Maj. Gen. Hinds Dies in Texas, Chief Of A.E.F. Artillery

Maj. Gen. Ernest Hinds, 76, chief of artillery of the A. E. F., died yesterday at San Antonio, Tex.

Gen. Hinds, who won numerous citations for gallantry in action and distinguished service during the Spanish-American and World Wars and the Philippine Insurrection, served 45 years in the Army. Born in Marshall County, Ala., he entered West Point in 1883 and served until his retirement for age in 1928.

Besides his World War post, Gen. Hinds commanded the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, Okla., the Second division and the Eighth Corps Area in postwar days. His widow, a daughter, Mrs. F. T. Cruse, wife of Col. F. T. Cruse, U. S. A., and a son, Maj. John H. Hinds, U. S. A., survive

Former Rep. Fisher Dies in New York

A man who collapsed and died on a midtown New York street corner was identified last night as former Representative Hubert Frederick Fisher, 63, of Germantown, Tenn., Democratic Congressman from the Tenth Tennessee District from 1916 to 1930, according to the Associated Press.

Identification was made by his son, Adrian, 27, of Arlington, Va., who went to New York after a card bearing his name was found in the dead man's clothing. The death, police said, apparently resulted from natural causes.

150 British Planes Attack Nazi Ports With Superbombs

London, June 17 (AP).—British bombers flying in a sandwich formation between layers of fighters attacked French coastal objectives tonight in fierce continuation of the R. A. F.'s new super-bomb offensive, stepped up by the increased flow of American-built planes.

Late tonight, authoritative sources said that 13 German planes had been destroyed over the English Channel and over Nazi-occupied France against the loss of ten British craft.

It was the seventh successive night attack across the Channel, and Boulogne seemed to be the chief target once more.

Watchers on the English coast said at least 150 British bombers and fighters participated. One fighter detachments flew 6 to 7 miles above the surface and the other low over the water, with bombers between.

The Kent coast was shaken for miles by shattering explosions across the Channel.

Royal Air Force planes carrying the huge new bombs last night attacked wide sections of German territory for the sixth successive night, directing their main blasts at Cologne, Duesseldorf, Duisburg, Boulogne and Dunkerque.

The arrival of American-made planes in Britain, it was stated, is permitting her to risk higher losses of planes, and is releasing her biggest bombers for attack.

The effect of these latest attacks has been much greater than those of last fall because now hundreds rather than scores of bombers are taking part, it was said.

Besides their super bombs, these big planes also carry ordinary fire bombs in great quantities. One unofficial estimate placed the weight of bombs dropped on Germany's Ruhr industrial targets during Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at more than 1,000 tons.

The British reported they left "many fires" last night in the industrial areas, bombed docks and harbors at Boulogne and Dunkerque and, during the day, attacked shipping off continental coast.

The Germans made small raids on England in the last 24 hours, it was announced, and lost 14 planes.

USO Luncheon Told $49,508 Is Subscribed in D. C. Drive

A total of $49,508 has been subscribed to date of the District's quota of $250,000 in the United Service Organization's local campaign, more than 500 volunteer workers learned yesterday at their first report luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel. The USO national fund has been set at $10,765,000 to provide recreational facilities for service men on leave.

Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, addressing the volunteers, declared "the problem that confronts us today is a new problem." Contonments and camps in 1917-18 were merely way-stations for troops leaving for France with recreational facilities virtually nonexistent, he said.

From all reports, Patterson asserted, the soldiers' morale today is excellent in the military posts, but when they leave these centers the problem of recreation is beyond the Army's help and that is the need for the USO.

Dwight F. Davis, former Secretary of War, chairman of the special gifts unit, reported collections totaling $31,554 from 556 subscribers. John A. Reilly, chairman of group solicitations, reported $4,115 subscribed, while Col. Thomas M. Spaulding, head of the Government solicitation unit, reported $13,325.

Anothre report luncheon will be held at the Mayflower Hotel next Tuesday, it was announced, and officials expressed the opinion that the goal of $250,000 would be reached by that time.

Also present at the speaker's table yesterday were A. M. McLachlen; Harry L. Merrick; Edwin N. Lewis, assistant director of the Community Chest; Bruce Allen, Benjamin Ourisman, Miss Elsa M. Peterson, president of the Y. W. C. A.;

"Water Follies" Expected To Make a Big Splash

Aquatic Spectacle for Capital Next Monday; Glen Echo Honors Californians Tonight; Items From Far and Near About Amusements

HAVING ENJOYED a triple dose of gay blades at play in the "Ice Follies" and "Ice-Capades," Washington soon is to have another spectacular amusement novelty spread out for its oh's and ah's. The "Water Follies of 1941" will open an eight-day engagement in the Uline Arena, Third and M Streets Northeast, next Monday.

BUSTER CRABBE

Although the "Water Follies" has been on tour for the past three or four years, this is the first time an attraction of this nature will have been presented in the Capital. It has caused a mighty splash in every city where it has been booked, playing return engagements in most of them. Solly Snyder, one of the owners of the aquatic pageant, described it to this column a day or so ago as a combination of all the best features that made such fabulous hits of the similar spectacles at the New York and San Francisco fairs and at Cleveland's aquatic carnival.

Buster Crabbe, up there with Johnny Weissmuller as one of the country's foremost swimmers and divers, heads the list of stars who will wallow for the wonder of all beholders in the company's portable, $25,000, 80,000-gallon tank. He will be supported by the cream of the crop from the New York, Frisco and Cleveland aquacades.

The setting for all this fluid fantasy should be something to see—unless the pictures of it Mr. Snyder spread out on the desk were all done with mirrors. It represents a Miami beach, with palm trees, tropical flowers and green grass growing all around, all around, to set off that oceanic tank.

Paging All Californians

Tonight is the night Glen Echo Park will stage that "California Night," at the instigation of Paul Kain, the Spanish Garden Ballroom's "Golden State" orchestra leader. The guest of honor will be Miss Jeanette Campbell, a native of San Francisco but a present resident in the Capital. Songs of the State will be played by the band and sung by Adele Van, its four-star thrush. It would be nice for the gagsters if Mr. Kain hailed from old Kaintucky!

All right, maybe it does happen once in a while down at Union Station, but, just the same, one of the most hilarious anticlimaxes out at the Roadside comes when the Mountain Central's Limited leaves for its historic run with the president's daughter riding in the engine cab. After the audience has been built up to a state of high expectancy that it is about to see one of the Roadside's famous cardboard trains, the profile of the mighty locomotive merely pulls in its nose and backs out. Engineer David Darrell needs to learn about his gear shifts. Or does he?

Dorothy Comingore, his leading woman in "Citizen Kane," is not the only "unknown" young actress Orson Welles has elevated to the spotlight. Anne Burr, blonde, 22-year-old feminine lead in his current Broadway production of "Native Son," has been signed to a long-term contract by RKO-Radio. She will hurtle across the continent for her film debut immediately following the New York run of her play.

The Forgotten City

When Paramount got ready to film "One Night in Lisbon," coming to the Earle on Friday, with Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray again costarred, it discovered, much to its chagrin, that Hollywood's famed film libraries carried no background shots whatever of the "escape hatch of Europe." So a special cameraman was sent over by clipper ship to make some. On his return, Director Edward H. Griffith had to reconstruct a whole Portuguese street.

When Director Henry Hathaway takes Walter Wanger's "Sundown" company on location 80 miles from Albuquerque, N. Mex., if he hasn't already, he will make the New Mexicans think Noah has landed somewhere in the vicinity. In addition to Gene Tierney and Bruce Cabot, heading the cast, he will have along 3 elephants, 15 dromedaries, a baby camel, 2 ostrichs, 4 zebras, 4 African antelopes, 3 pure-bred Arabian horses, a heron, 6 cows and a bull. Whose zoo?

HEDDA HOPPER

A Stylist at Home

Hollywood, Calif., June 17.—Robin, Janet and Adrian's 11-month-old baby, was riding his Great Dane, assisted by Adrian, when I went there for an early supper the other evening. What a football player that lad will make when he grows up!

ANN SOTHERN

There really should be a law against mothers growing younger after childbirth, 'cause you can't tell Janet from the new crop of ingenues, except that she's prettier. But we all sat spellbound before the finest example of Grinling Gibbons' wood carving which Adrian has just acquired. It's really a museum piece of fruit, flowers, birds, cupids—and should be studied with prayer. A's had his heart set on it for ten years, and now it's his'n.

Lee Marcus, who produced "Father Takes a Wife," the Swanson picture, is now angling for more old-timers, and is talking a deal with the Gish sisters and several others. Well, you're on the right track, Lee, and it can't come too soon.

If someone doesn't coax William S. Hart back, they're just plain dumb. He could show all our pseudo-Western heroes how to act—especially how to shoot a gun. New screen cowboys think they have to take a step forward, then shoot, when the reverse is true. You have to take a step backward for balance. The real cowboys have a merry laugh every time they see a glamour boy turn killer, when he doesn't even know how to hold a gun . . . Welcome to Rex Bell and Ciara Bow, who are visiting Dick Foran on his ranch in the San Fernando Valley section.

Gracie Fields, who's collected over a million and a half for British War Relief, tells me that in only two cities has she had rather unpleasant experiences. One was a letter, before she appeared in Cleveland, begging her not to, because the writer had been chosen to throw ripe tomatoes and rotten eggs, and he wrote that he was a gentleman and it was against his nature to hit a lady—so would she please not go on and sing. Gracie carried on, and took in $20,000.

On the "Ringside Maisie" set everybody gets a chance to use Ann Sothern's rocker but Ann. And where do you think I found Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom? Reclining on a chaise longue in his own dressing room!

The Eddie Robinsons are busy building an art gallery in their own garden, with an outside entrance so that more people will be able to see their paintings. I must say they've been mighty generous with them . . . Wish you could see Claudette Colbert spending her days making little cushions for her sailing ship . . . In "Wild Geese Calling," Warren William takes over Bart MacLane and his tough saloon in a crooked dice game, but between scenes it's different, Bart takes William at gin-rummy, and without marked cards.

If you have a little timber wolf in your home, you're just the guy Alexander Korda wants to see. He needs ten of these critters for the first of his "Jungle Book" series and only has four. So if you know where he can dig up six more wolves (no! not the Vine Street variety), write or wire Mr. Korda—not me!

Fibber and Molly McGee liked the trailer RKO gave them for a dressing room while they're working in "Look Who's Laughing" so well they've bought it and will take their vacation in it . . . Director Clarence Brown has developed a love for tea, and now, believe it or not, pauses every afternoon to have his cup.

Flagg and Quirt Battling Again

VICTOR McLAGLEN AND EDMUND LOWE, belligerent buddies of numerous earlier successes, will be reunited to resume their antagonisms in a new service picture, bearing the title of "The Marines Are Ready." It all started with the screen version of "What Price Glory," their first joint hit

Comedies and Thrillers Join Booming Summer Amusements

"LOVE CRAZY." William Powell and Myrna Loy are reunited in the new comedy opening tomorrow morning at the Palace Theater. This time no murders blight the joy of the popular couple; their adventure turns on a question of sanity. Topping the supporting cast are Gail Patrick, Jack Carson, Florence Bates and Sidney Blackmer. Also on the Palace screen will be a new "Crime Does Not Pay" subject, "Forbidden Passage" and "Willie and the Mouse," an M-G-M "Passing Parade."

Earle

"ONE NIGHT IN LISBON." Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray are again costarred in a topical comedy whose setting is London and the Portuguese capital. John Loder, Billie Burke, Patricia Morison, Dame May Whitty and Edmund Gwenn are the other leads. The stage revue features Paul Remos and his Toy Boys, comedian Romo Vincent, the Stuart-Morgan dancers and a perfumed dance creation for the Roxyettes, "Heaven Scent." Open Friday morning.

RKO-Keith's

"SUNNY." The Jerome Kern musical comedy which starred Marilyn Miller and Jack Donahue comes to the screen with Anna Neagle and Ray Bolger heading the cast. Kern's well-loved score includes "Who?" and "Sunny." John Carroll, Edward Everett Horton, Paul and Grace Hartman, Helen Westley and Benny Rubin are in the cast. Walt Disney's first Mickey Mouse cartoon in a long time also is programmed. Open Friday morning.

Capitol

"MAN HUNT." Geoffrey Household's widely-admired "Rogue Male" comes to the screen as a Fritz Lang melodrama costarring Walter Pidgeon and Joan Bennett. The setting is contemporary Europe, its subject a Gestapo murder and the ensuing chase for the accused victim. George Sanders and John Carradine top the support. On the stage will be "Crazy With the Heat," a shortened version of the New York revue, with Willie Howard, Diosa Costello, Sylvia Froos and Betty Kean supported by a chorus of 20. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"SHINING VICTORY." James Stephenson, recalled for his fine playing in "The Letter," and Geraldine Fitzgerald costar in this picturization of the play by A. J. Cronin. The story concerns a scientist whose success is barren until brought to life by his young assistant. Donald Crisp, Barbara O'Neil, Montague Love and Sig Rumann head the support. Opens Friday morning.

Columbia

"A WOMAN'S FACE." Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas and Conrad Veidt return to F Street in their melodrama of a scarred blackmailer and her attempted rehabilitation. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"SEEN IN SYRIA." Beirut and the eastern theater of war is depicted in this travelogue, chief short subject of the newsreel home's new incoming bill. Chile's Cavalry School forms the "Sportscope;" a "Popular Science" sequence and "The Prospecting Bear," a cartoon, are the other features. Opens Friday morning.

National

"FANTASIA." The Walt Disney-Leopold Stokowski-Deems Taylor adventure in music concludes its run at the E Street theater Saturday evening. Performances twice daily; reserved seats at all showings.

Little

"OF HUMAN BONDAGE" joins "George Takes the Air" as the latter continues into a second week on Ninth Street. The Bette Davis-Leslie Howard film is revived after 2½ years' absence. George Formby is the star of the latter, a farce filmed in cooperation with the R. A. F.

Tips to the Mighty

CORDELL HULL: Dean Acheson, your Assistant Secretary of State, is expected to be transferred soon, to the new Department of Economic Warfare . . . Wm. Green: Plans were being completed this past weekend for the introduction of a Congressional bill to compel labor unions to incorporate . . . Sonja Henie: Bob Moses is having pipes laid "somewhere in Central Park," for the establishment of a new large public skating rink. We won't tell the city officials where the job is being done . . . Gen. George C. Marshall: Congressman Merritt, of the House Military Affairs Committee, said in Washington last week that before August 1 a new ruling will be made, ordering all men in the service to wear their uniforms.

SONJA HENIE

JOHN GARFIELD: Don't worry about your being suspended by Warner Bros. Jack Warner was heard to say: "Let's settle with Garfield—why should there be two wars?" . . . Lepke: Your trial for murder probably won't take place until 1942—because of the new technical proceedings instituted by your attorneys . . . Ralph Holmes: Because you're being drafted into the army, your wife, Libby Holman, will become an entertainer again. She expects to start in a night club shortly . . . Charles Chaplin: Sylvia Fairbanks, widow of the late Douglas Fairbanks, is leaving for Hollywood, with her lawyer—concerning United Artists' litigation.

SOL. GEN. BIDDLE: Your elevation to the post of Attorney General is being held up—because of your feud with J. Edgar Hoover, who then would come under your supervision . . . A. Reles: "Buggsy" Goldstein and "Pittsburgh Phil," who were executed in Sing Sing prison last Thursday, made overtures to District Attorney O'Dwyer, on a deal to spare their lives. But the information they had to reveal wasn't of sufficient importance . . . Monte Proser: Ben Bernie, who now is working for you at Madison Square Garden, descended from the bandstand Saturday night and tried to dance in competition with the mad jitterbugs. Bernie gave up quickly, explaining: "I was handicapped—because I got underwear on."

WM. S. KNUDSEN: Harriet Elliott, head of the Government's Consumer Division, has a by-line story in Click. That by-line had to be changed three times, before the issue went to press, because her position in Washington kept changing, with the reorganization of the Defense Emergency bureau . . . Lord Halifax: The elevation of the newly titled Viscount Bennett—the former Canadian Prime Minister—is said to relate to a Washington Embassy post being prepared for him . . . Jack Dempsey: Hannah Williams' comeback may take place Thursday, at the Versailles . . . Phil Barry: Katharine Hepburn, who starred in your "Philadelphia Story," has been taking singing lessons because she'll sing in her next film.

DIST. ATTY. DEWEY: That mysterious "Sleeping Beauty" who made the front pages some months ago, when she was discovered at the Pierre—and whose identity you tried to learn—has just been the beneficiary of a large settlement. A prominent lawyer has assigned $130,000 in life insurance to her—on condition that, at the hour of his death, she still is unmarried . . . Myron Selznick: Sam Goldwyn, who came 3,000 miles, from Hollywood, to discuss a motion picture career for Danny Kaye, of "Lady in the Dark," told him: "If you're in a hurry to make pictures then I'm not the man for you" . . . Fifty-second Street Association: Jack White and his 18 club crew are being signed for a series of broadcasts, to be sponsored by Lever Bros.

BABE RUTH: WNYC, which will dramatize the life of Lou Gehrig on June 22, sent an interviewer to Joan Kieran, who was one of Lou's intimates. Kieran recited for him, from memory, a long list of the records Gehrig had established—Lou's batting average when he played for Hartford, to the number of home runs he hit, runs batted in, fielding averages—but Kieran couldn't supply a single, intimate anecdote . . . Hal Roach: Victor Mature received an offer, Saturday night, for a two-week engagement, in front of a band, at $4,000 a week . . . Ralph Ingersoll: Harold Ross has been reading so much personal-journalism in PM that he wants the name changed to R I.

CLARENCE DYKSTRA: Last week Newbold Morris, president of the city council, made a broadcast with Brig. Gen. Hershey, acting director of Selective Service—in support of the new army of draftees. Morris criticized the Conscientious Objectors, and pointed out that if some of the wealthiest wage earners refused to pay income taxes, on the ground that they have religious scruples against paying such taxes, the Government would be in a terrible mess . . . Gen. Hershey then startled Morris, in a reply which defended the Conscientious Objectors . . . Morris sat there puzzled, until a colonel seated on the platform behind him whispered into his ear: "I guess you didn't know it. Gen. Hershey was raised in the Mennonite faith."

Berlin Claims Lines Hold In Libya Attack

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, June 17.—The offensive which the British forces have begun on the Solum front in North Africa must, in the view of authoritative German military quarters, be viewed as a large-scale attack which has as its objective the reconquering of Cyrenaica.

Both sides are officially reported to be employing strong forces, but the Germans declare that all British attacks up to the present have been repulsed, although the battle is still continuing.

Enemy losses are reported to be extremely high and comparable to those sustained in several battles during the French campaign. Some 100 British tanks have been destroyed, the Germans declare. Both Italian and German air forces, moreover, appear to be playing an important role in the fighting, for they are said to have bombed and strafed troop columns and concentrations as well as tanks and supply depots.

For the first time since the war began, German military quarters declare, the British themselves are engaged in a large-scale battle with the Axis armies. The force of the enemy onslaught, even though the Axis line still holds intact, indicates not only that the British wish to offer some relief to their troops in Tobruk but also have designs on the entire Cyrenaica.

In this battle, however, the Axis claims air superiority and, although German quarters are reticent about prophesying further developments in this theater, the phraseology they employ—familiar from previous campaigns—suggests that their forces are enjoying satisfactory successes.

German submarines operating in the North and Middle Atlantic were reported by the official news agency tonight to have sunk five large armed merchantmen totaling 31,933 tons from strongly protected convoys. There is no indication, however, as to when these vessels were sunk.

Robin Moor Mate Describes Attacking Sub

By Robert St. John
Associated Press Staff Writer

Capetown, Union of South Africa, June 17.—Thousands of words of official statements were taken today by United States consular officials from the officers, crew members and passengers of the Robin Moor, telling exactly how their ship was sunk.

All of the 35 survivors who saw the submarine which torpedoed the American freighter were questioned at great length. The statements were cabled immediately to Washington where, it was explained, any disclosure of their contents would have to be made.

The chief United States diplomatic interest centered in the stories of Chief Officer Melvin Mundy, Bethlehem, Pa., who insisted in an interview with this correspondent last night that the attacking submarine was German, and of Capt. Edward Meyers, of Baltimore, who confirmed Mundy's version. Mundy had boarded the submarine for a talk with her officers before the tropedo was fired.

The United States Legation announced officially that examination of all survivors, who were brought here yesterday by a British vessel after having been adrift in lifeboats for 13 days, disclosed that none was expected to suffer any serious effects from the long ordeal under the tropical sun.

American jazz tunes and Scottish hymns sung in an unintentional duet kept up the spirits of the drifting survivors, it was disclosed today. In the bow of one of the lifeboats sat 61-year-old Mrs. H. G. Gemmell, of Scotland, while astern sat 25-year-old Mrs. Ben M. Cohen, of New Haven, Conn. For 13 days they kept up cheerful singing together.

"Prayers and hymns kept up the courage of me and my husband," said Mrs. Gemmell. "I sang swing music to make us forget our troubles," said Mrs. Cohen.

The best description of the submarine was given by Second Mate Robert Taylor.

"She was painted a dark grey," he said, "and had a large gun forward of the conning tower and a Swedish Bofors anti-aircraft gun just aft.

"A French word on the conning tower had been painted over in an attempt to hide it, and therefore there was confusion as to what the word was."

Taylor thought he saw the word "taureau"—French for "bull"—while another crew member thought it was La Touche."

Agreeing with others of the crew that 'the submarine most certainly was manned by a German crew," Tayor said that when it finally sailed away after sinking the freighter, the men shouted "auf wiedersehen!"

Army authorities would not reveal the charge

Trippe Sees 12-Hour Hops Over Atlantic

By the United Press

London, June 17.—Juan T. Trippe, Pan American Airways president, tonight predicted that within two years there would be "frequent, daily flights, operating on 12-hour schedules," between the United States and Europe.

Delivering the twenty-ninth Wilbur Wright Memorial Lecture before the Royal Aeronautical Society, Trippe spoke of the prospect of 3,000-horsepower engines and intimated that current difficulties of transatlantic flying would be conquered by a new type of clipper plane on which delivery is expected next year.

"I regret that I am not at liberty to disclose, here or at home, the technical details of these aircraft," he said. "I can, however, cite certain of the immediate and specific problems encountered in our transatlantic operation, the presence of which we had in mand in their procurement.

"1. During the months between October 1 and April 1, sea swells in the harbor of Horta exceed 3 feet on 35 days out of each 100, and exceed 2½ feet on 57 days out of each 100. The effective solution of this cause of delayed schedules is an advancement of the practical commercial range of transoceanic aircraft so as to permit the continent-to-continent nonstop operation.

"2. The consistently high velocity of westerly winds, particularly during the winter months, contributes not only to schedule cancellations but even when such flights are technically feasible, impose unreasonable restrictions on payload. Wind aloft records maintained through the past two years indicate that higher cruising speeds of at least 75 to 100 miles an hour greater than those now available, are desirable.

"3. Finally the recurring ice problem on the North Atlantic Coast points to the advantages of landplane operations. Landplanes could also permit direct service between metropolitan airports on both sides of the Atlantic."

In addition to 3,000-horsepower engines, he listed as aviation advances "in the offing" such developments as planes capable of carrying useful loads equal to half their gross weight.

"In these past two years," he said, "transatlantic passenger service has already become a fact. It has become a vital link between the New World and the Old.

"Before the next two years have passed, I believe we can, with confidence, look forward to frequent, daily flights, operating on 12-hour schedules to bridge what was once a great barrier ocean and to bring our two great democracies into still closer union."

Wheeler Out Against Seizure Of Islands

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, charged yesterday that the President is being urged by certain advisers in and out of the Government to seize the Azores, the Cape Verde Islands and Martinique.

Wheeler in a statement said he hoped the President would not listen, as it meant undeclared war.

"Whatever may be the justification for taking measures to prevent the Axis powers from taking Martinique," he said, "it would seem that there would be just as much excuse for us to invade Portugal, Spain and France as there would for us to invade their territories, either in Africa or near the coast of Africa, in the interest of national defense."

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, has urged in the Senate that the Navy occupy the Azores, the Cape Verde Islands and Dakar.

Wheeler's statement said he is "opposed to it first for the reason that it is wrong, second that it is not necessary and third, neither the Marines nor the Army are equipped for such an expedition."

Halifax's Daughter Flies to Visit Father

San Francisco, June 17 (AP).—The Countess Anne Dorothy Feversham, daughter of Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, arived by clipper today en route to visit her father in Washington.

The countess left London 14 months ago, and visited her husband, the Earl of Feversham, now in active duty with British forces in the Near East. She was in India eight months. Another passenger on the clipper was Dr. Alfred Sze, former Chinese Ambassador to the United States, also en route to Washington.

Armored Unit Takes Beating In Tennessee Maneuvers

By the Associated Press

With the Army in Tennessee, June 17.—Striking furiously at wave upon wave of tanks attacking their rear, the defending Blue forces today stemmed the vaunted power of the Second Armored Division and drove its heavy columns back, capturing scores of tanks and scout cars.

Persistent, fast-moving counter-attacks by antitank guns met the armored troops as they moved in a dozen separate columns, like so many fingers feeling for soft spots vulnerable to the mailed fist of the mechanized juggernaut.

The Second Division had struck at the rear of the Blues shortly before dawn, encircling both flanks to form a powerful pincer to squeeze the entire defending Army. Meanwhile the Fifth Division from Fort Custer, Mich., engaged the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions at the front along Duck River.

The mobility of the Blue's guns—hitched behind fast trucks and quickly rolled into position at hill-crests and road junctions—enabled the Blue Army to checkmate almost every move attempted by the tanks.

When the problem, the first in the Tennessee war games involving tanks, ended at noon, approximately 65 of the Second Division's (Fort Benning, Ga.) 325 tanks were reported captured by the Blues—composed of New York, Tennessee, Georgia, Carolina and Colorado troops.

Seventh Army Corps officers under Maj. Gen. Frederic H. Smith, commander of the Blues, had studied the armored force with active intelligence. The Blues had their defense pointing rearward and dug in hours before the Red tank attack actually came.

The Cross Roads Inaugurates Its Season With Laughing Hit

By Nelson B. Bell

Pulling the second trigger of the Capital's double-barreled inaugural of hayloft drama, the Cross Roads Theater, over at Bailey's Cross Roads, Va., last night scored a smash hit in the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman bucolic comedy of "George Washington Slept Here." A better selection of a first bill of "summer theater" could not have been made.

"George Washington Slept Here" is fashioned to order for this sort of intimate and informal presentation. Its subject matter, to begin with, fits the countryside perfectly, dealing as it does with city cliff-dwellers trapped by the seductive promises of life close to nature on a Pennsylvania farm. The fact that it was Benedict Arnold and not Washington who once slumbered in the ancient and rickety house they buy in the country is of minor importance, as it turns out. They have more pressing and immediate concerns.

These take the form of measuring worms, Japanese beetles, 17-year locusts, the drilling of wells that turn up nothing but mud, carloads of gravel, tons of manure and trying to coax an egg from their hen and a drop or two of milk from the cow. It is Newton Fuller who is sold on the rustic plan of life. His frank and vocal wife is not too much fascinated by it all—until it is practically too late.

Country Life Is Wonderful!

Their battle with the Fuller's earth, as things go along, also proves to be a problem of secondary importance. Their daughter, Madge, plans an elopement with a married actor from the nearby summer theater; an incorrigible nephew is wished on them for the duration, while his parents fight out their divorce; a "rich" uncle, who lost all his money back in 1929, plops himself down on them for an indefinite stay and the nearest neighbor, who is really occupying their land, instead of they his, threatens foreclosure, as a director of the bank holding their mortgage, and thats the way it goes. Just one continuous round of pleasure! How it all comes out gives the play a hurricane finish.

This may not be the best Hart-Kaufman collaboration that has come along, but it is easily one of the speediest, gayest and most ribald. The lines strike a high note of hilarity and there is sufficient action to prevent any of the five scenes in the three acts from ever becoming completely static. The second act is the least lively of the three, but it is lively enough to keep any audience, as it did last night's standing-room crowd, in a constant uproar.

Full of Fine Performances

The piece is skillfully and spontaneously played by one of the Cross Roads' best casts, headed by Catharine Ryan and the veteran Forney Reese as the harassed and almost-defrauded Fullers. They set a swift and sure pace for the capable players surrounding them. Leroy Gaintner turns in a well-nigh perfect job of characterization as Mr. Kimber, the man-of-all-work about the place where Washington didn't sleep, and Sidney Bassler is up there on the same level as Uncle Stanley, who loses the day first and saves it afterwards. Peggy Johnston has not too much to do as Madge, but does that little well, matched by Allen Andrews, as Steve Eldridge, her threatened lover. Julian Hatcher's matinee idol is a mere bit, but Josephine Orendorff places his wife, Rena Leslie, among the evening's surest sources of brittle comedy. Master Bobby Walters, in the role of Raymond, performs his juvenile devilties with such convincing naturalness that you would be delighted to wring his neck. A considerable number of others contribute splendid support.

Director Howard F. Wentworth has gaited the play to a swift tempo and Joseph Orendorff has turned out settings that make it a certainty that "George Washington Slept Here" might easily run beyond the single week for which it is scheduled.

We Set An Example

"I don't know where I am going to go," said Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, German consul general at San Francisco, after being informed of the Government's order closing all German consulates and propaganda agencies in the United States. It is not difficult to detect a note of sadness in this remark of the man who was Corporal Adolf Hitler's company commander in World War I. Even though, as he pointed out to newspapermen of the Bay City, "the times here have not been very easy," San Francisco is undoubtedly a far pleasanter place to live in at this time than Berlin. So far as the overwhelming majority of Americans are concerned, however, it makes precious little difference where Wiedemann and the other Nazi agents who have been ordered to leave the country go so long as they get out of the United States.

Yet it will hardly be to this Nation's interest or in the interest of hemisphere defense if those affected by the expulsion order proceed to set up shop in Mexico, the Caribbean area, or Central and South America. Many of the countries south of the Rio Grande are already riddled with Nazi agents and plagued by a great variety of Fifth Column activities which these agents inspire and direct. For reasons of self-interest as well as in the cause of hemisphere solidarity, accordingly, it would be entirely fitting and proper for the other republics of the New World to follow our example. And it is encouraging to note that precisely such action is being contemplated by the Mexican government.

A dispatch from Mexico City quotes a cabinet officer as saying: "We were the first country actually to seize Axis ships, weren't we?" thus suggesting that our southern neighbor may not hesitate too long before closing the German consulates and clamping down on the Nazi propaganda agencies within its borders as we are doing within ours. Failure on the part of the other American republics to fall into line in this particular would not only mean a weakening of the bonds of New World solidarity but would also tend to increase the Fifth Column peril which faces some of our fellow republics.

Unity Now

When Winston Churchill is in the right mood, few approach and none excel his superb use of the English language. On Tuesday, when he accepted, in absentia, the degree of honorary doctor of laws from the University of Rochester, he was unquestionably in the right mood. For seldom, if ever, has the moral urgency of Anglo-American unity been expressed with more conviction. Speaking by radio directly to the small assemblage at Rochester, and indirectly to millions of American listeners, the Prime Minister dwelt briefly upon his American ancestors. Then he went on to deliver a restrained but truly stirring appraisal of the forces which are shaping human destiny. When impulses at once all-striking and irresistible are on the move, impulses that confound men's souls, then it is that we learn "we are spirits—not animals—and that something is going on beyond space and time which, whether we like it or not, spells duty." How the story unfolding before our eyes will end, we are not allowed to know. "But," as Mr. Churchill said, "on both sides of the Atlantic we all feel—I repeat all—that we are a part of it, that our future and that of many generations is at stake. We are sure that the character of human society will be shaped by the resolves we take and the deeds we do."

This statement of the Prime Minister's has apparently been interpreted as implying that British dependence on the United States may grow till this country, whether it wants to or not, will have to assume greater responsibility for world affairs. Of course it will have to assume such a responsibility. We are obligated not only by the job of seeing Britain through the dark hours ahead but also by the steady and inevitable acquisition of world power, which we shall not be able to discard, even if we would. The chances are, however, that the Prime Minister's words were more especially a restatement of Britain's own sense of continuing responsibility. In either case, the import of his message must surely get Nazi teeth on edge. For more than two generations this same British moral sense has been the despair of ambitious Germany. Hitler has castigated it periodically ever since the early 1920's. In fact, he has frequently worked up his audiences to an enthusiastic frenzy by promising destruction, once for all, of Britain's right to assume such responsibility. But moral sense continues still to be a fundamental source of British strength. The Nazis recognize it, though they cannot understand it. Nor will they understand the deep hold which an appeal such as Winston Churchill's can have upon free men over here.

Murder In The Capital

The latest item in this city's appalling list of unsolved crimes is the abduction, rape and murder of a young woman employed by the War Department. Within the past four months three other murders have occurred in the vicinity of Dupont Circle, and in all three of them the police investigation bogged down almost as soon as it began. There is a rather startling similarity between the case of Mrs. Rose Abramowitz, raped and strangled last March, and this latest and even more frightening murder of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff. But as to whether or not any further connection exists between these two cases, the police seem to know no more than the rest of us. After pursuing various spurious clues in the Abramowitz case into as many blind alleys in Washington, Kansas City and elsewhere, the police have evidently been content to let it rest. Now after 48 hours they appear to have made little or no progress toward apprehension or even identification of the murderer or murderers of Jessie Strieff.

It is true that the social dislocations brought about in Washington by the recent tremendous influx of population to the city have created a set of conditions favorable to crime of every sort, including the most horrible and bestial. Every phase of police work has been enormously complicated. But this is scarcely an excuse for careless or perfunctory investigation of serious crimes. The haste, for example, of the police to dismiss the killing of Walter Krivitsky as a suicide and to close the case even before the identity and importance of the victim had been fully established may or may not be a fair sample of how Washington police conduct investigations. But if the investigation of the Strieff case is already beyond the abilities, experience and resources of our police detectives, Maj. Brown has not merely the right but the manifest duty to ask assistance of such Federal agencies as the F. B. I. or the Secret Service.

Much of the difficulty, of course, lies in the anomalous circumstance that the Washington police are in no wise directly responsible to public opinion. Since there is no responsible city government, the greatest single incentive to intelligent police work is absent here. That is to say, the citizens have nothing at all to say about the selection of those who order police appointments, assignments and promotions. However, the apprehension of the murderers who are now on the loose in Washington cannot wait until local autonomy has been restored. The plain truth is that the Capital of the Nation which is now gravely concerned about the safety of the world is itself an unsafe place in which to live.

Before The Storm

Except for the sporadic fighting in the western desert of Egypt and the slow-motion struggle in Syria, the war, in its military aspect at least, appears to be in a state of suspended animation. The British made a surprise attack near the Egyptian-Libyan border yesterday, but their activity is still described as being local. In Syria the Germans appear to be content to let the fighting be done for them by the French troops taking orders from Vichy. And during these last weeks the Luftwaffe has been strangely inactive—at least, over Great Britain.

It would be too much to expect that this lull is anything but a lull before another storm. Now as at all times in the past Hitler is under compulsion to make time his ally in order to prevent it from becoming his enemy. As the American industrial machine goes into high gear in the production of weapons of war, the margin of superiority Germany enjoys over the Allies will tend to diminish and, given enough time, will disappear altogether. Therefore, Hitler must either win the war before America's contribution to the Allies makes a German victory impossible or else so organize Europe as to give the Reich sufficient staying power for a long war.

From either point of view recent rumors of growing German-Russian tension are revealing. There appears to be no doubt that Hitler has been reinforcing his garrisons along the far-flung German-Russian frontier. It is much too early, however, to assume that this large German force—estimated at anywhere between 80 and 120 divisions—has been concentrated for an assault on the Soviet Union. A more likely hypothesis is that Hitler is again using a military threat to reinforce diplomatic and economic demands. In this instance the threat is the acquisition by the Reich from Russia of sufficient foodstuffs, oil and other raw materials which Germany must have if the war is to continue over any great length of time.

There is the other possibility, however, that the rumors of a German thrust in the direction of the Ukraine have been deliberately broadcast by Nazi agents, perhaps with the knowledge and consent of Moscow. We must never forget the "phoniness" in some of this war-making. Hitler may be broadcasting the rumors himself in order to draw a red herring across the trail of Germany's actual plans. In other words, Hitler, while apparently fixing his attention on the Soviet Union, may be preparing for that long-delayed frontal assault on Great Britain, as the reported concentration of troops in Norway suggests; for a drive through Spain to Gibraltar, or some other spectacular coup not anticipated at the present moment. All that can be said is that the goings and comings of Axis statesmen and their satellites of the captive countries which are filling in the military vacuum mean that something is in the wind.

The Ball Bill

The hope that Congress may soon enact constructive legislation to minimize delays in defense work has been strengthened by the introduction of a bill by Senator Ball. This measure would require disputants engaged in defense production to use the conference table before they could lawfully apply coercion. It aims also at consolidation of existing mediatory agencies.

One section of the measure appears to meet with almost universal approval. This is the section which provides a strikeless formula of collective bargaining. Both employers and employes would be put under obligation to give 30 days' notice in writing of any changes sought in wages, hours or working conditions in defense industries. Five days after the receipt of such notice direct negotiations for a settlement of the dispute would begin. Either party could call on the National Defense Mediation Board for mediation services, or the board could intervene on its own initiative if a stoppage of defense work appeared to be imminent. Throughout the negotiations employers could make no change in working conditions; employes could not strike or otherwise reduce the volume of output.

No penalties would be imposed for violation of these requirements, but any departure from the approved formula would bring an avalanche of public resentment upon the offending employer or union. In the great majority of cases, therefore, Government mediators would have an opportunity to assist in working out a settlement before the calling of a strike. Many difficult problems of face-saving could be avoided, and emphasis would be constructively shifted from the picket line to the conference table. In the present emergency such a shift is imperative.

Less hearty approval will be accorded the proposal to merge the Conciliation Service of the Labor Department with the National Defense Mediation Board. Senator Ball is right in assuming that these two agencies should work as a unit. Undoubtedly there have been too many fingers in the mediation pie. But critics of the bill point out that Labor Department conciliators now sit with Mediation Board panels on cases in which they have done preliminary work; that an advisory board representing the Conciliation Service, the Mediation Board and the OPM actually decides when cases should be transferred from one agency to the other; and that a liaison officer spends his full time coordinating the activities of the two units. Congress may decide that sufficient unity has been attained to justify continuation of the present setup. But in any event mediation functions should be concentrated in a closely knit organization. Particularly there seems to be no reason for the OPM to continue operating in this field apart from the Mediation Board.

While consolidating agencies at one point, the Ball bill would divide functions at another point by setting up a Labor Standards Commission. The need for coordinating national wage policies with the control of prices is obvious, and The Post has long been pressing for such coordination. But there is a question as to just how this function should be integrated with the settlement of labor disputes. So if Congress takes up this measure, it may be amended in various particulars. The important thing is for Congress to settle down to work on the problem. Certainly the fact that Mr. Ball is a Republican should not consign his bill to cold storage. It has been worked out with the assistance of experts in the Administration, and party lines ought to be obliterated, anyway, in times of national crisis. Congress should dig in, from this or some other starting point, and give the country a sound emergency labor policy before more serious domestic crises arise.

WHERE NO WIND BLOWS

No man's grave, however deep,
Is certain for concealing sleep.
Earth and grass may close him over—
Wind and water will uncover
What was buried and, unbidden,
Bring to light what men have hidden.
Wind has bared an ancient town,
Water leveled mountains down,
Thus revealing how and why
Men have fallen there to die.

Lest the martyred dead should speak,
Tyrants, dig their trenches deep;
Deeper down than water flows,
Deep . . . deep . . . where no wind blows!

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

Herr Schicklgruber

Why quiver and quibble? Let us call a spade a spade and a Schicklgruber a Schicklgruber. Why not throw the self-adopted name Hitler into the ash can of oblivion and unite in using the charming name of Schicklgruber? Let the radio and the press and the people join in a great Luftwaffe for Schicklgruber. The phychological effect would be enormous and would take care of his past, present and future. The legends of success associated with the name of Hitler would cease to awe and would be punctured overnight. It would take a stout follower, indeed, to champion one by the name of Schicklgruber. Shall the world grovel at the feet of A. Schicklgruber? Will future writers of history find space for Schicklgrubers?

This has been called a war of propaganda as well as of steel. Let us parachute from the air the name of Schicklgruber over the radio, from the platform and even in conversation. To paraphrase the current song, "Get under his skin and dance on his bones."

I appeal to you to help start this all-out-for-Schicklgruber movement without delay.

The Negroes In National Defense

The editorial appearing in the June 12 issue of The Post, captioned "Negroes and Defense," is a credit to any American newspaper. It imparts to some readers the hope that democracy, such as it is, will yet survive the totalitarian attack and continue on toward perfection.

The Council for Democracy has undertaken an admirable task and all truly democratic newspapers or institutions that profess a sincere interest in the perpetuation of democracy should vigorously support this program. Influence of the press is still an invaluable instrument in creating and maintaining social standards. It seems grossly inconsistent that with all of the intelligence and genius this country is credited with having, it should remain content to dissipate its resources, both physical and mental, on such devitalizing issues as group hatred and racial intolerance.

It is my hope that the Council for Democracy will continue its efforts to establish an economic, social and moral balance in the present American scheme of living, and that all other rational and progressive organizations will contribute to the actual enforcement of this program. Also it is necessary to have individual support so that all American citizens may eventually realize the intrinsic value of the virtues upon which his sovereign government was originally predicated, and so that we, as a nation, may prove to the rest of the strife-torn world that democracy can work here, if not elsewhere, and that it is the most enduring, the most logical, the most productive form of social order.

THOMAS E. KIRTON.
Washington, June 14.

Permit me to commend you on your editorial of June 12 entitled "Negroes And Defense," and for the courage which its publication evinces. Protests and denunciations against practices of totalitarian governments must necessarily fall upon deaf ears so long as our own practices are so pronouncedly undemocratic.

As you have said in your editorial, it is a stupid policy that would prevent the full and effective utilization of all our much-needed man power in a national emergency. It is to be hoped that firm steps will be taken to the end that our much-needed man power may be utilized. The dangers of friction to which you refer in your editorial many of us believe are in most cases more imaginary than real.

I am convinced that the first great need on the issue of race discrimination is firmness in the Government itself, beginning at the White House and filtering down to the remotest section in any Government agency. Such a course would give backbone to the timid industrialist and facilitate the integration of Negroes into shops and factories. This would be a great step forward toward a real democracy. It would greatly lessen our vulnerability as a target for totalitarian attack.

May I express the hope that other great dailies will join you in this advanced step. A. S. PINKETT.
Washington, June 14.

The Post's June 12 editorial "Negroes and Defense" was pertinent and seasonable. For example, its printing was timely respecting opening for service of the Federal Government Airport terminal at Gravelly Point. There is neither reason, occasion nor places for separate waiting rooms, cafeterias, and other terminal facilities upon these government premises.

RIENZI B. LEMUS.
Washington, June 10.

Your editorial, "Negroes and Defense," was very fine and timely. The efforts of the Administration to secure employment for the Negro in national defense has met with opposition by industry, labor unions, and unsympathetic Government officials. The latter is evident by the numbers of Negroes who have been certified by the Civil Service Commission, but have been refused employment and had their names removed from the eligible list because of the opposition of Federal appointing officers.

If the Government expects industry to treat the Negro fairly, the Government must set an example for fair dealing. During this emergency, an administrative order should be issued that the highest-rated eligibles on the civil service lists be appointed to fill vacancies. In all contracts for national defense materials, a nondiscriminatory clause should be included and enforced. The Negro is the largest and most loyal minority group in America and only asks the opportunity to contribute his share to national defense.

HOWARD D. WOODSON.
Washington, June 14.

The Post is to be commended upon its "Negroes and Defense" editorial. To end, however, upon an apologetic note, paying tribute to the existence of persistent hostility within the ranks of white, skilled labor and timidity of management, casts a doubt upon the unity of the democracy now being so vigorously advertised. Similar hostility has shown itself toward the colored worker since his emancipation and formed the attitude of even small capitalism toward mechanics since the republic's earliest days.

Despite the loyal aid of the fighting and laboring arm of the colored people, the fervor and reality of their religion, and the harmony and naturalness of their music since colonial days, interracial good will advances but slowly. In social evolution, however, patient endurance is God-like. The history of the struggle for human liberty shows slow but steady advance as men have learned that their freedoms must be self-imposed to fit masses to live together in mutual respect and toleration. Thus the ideal of democracy is worth every sacrifice.

A Plea For Adequate Fire Protection

In turning down the recommendation of Chief Porter for a new ladder truck company at No. 19 Engine House, Twenty-eighth Place and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, the House Appropriations Committee said that "if a new truck company is required at No. 19 Engine House, it should be provided by transfer of an existing company to this area."

Now that the committee has seen fit to deny necessary protection to a section that is growing in population more rapidly each month, it seems to me that it should attempt to justify its position by stating just what truck company is available for transfer. Frankly, I cannot see how any truck in the city can be transferred to this section without leaving a vital area unprotected. Many of the ladder trucks now in service have to make long runs of a mile or more and cannot be spared if the city is to have adequate protection against fire.

The committee's refusal to grant funds for the new truck company is predicated on the findings of a special board in 1939 that certain consolidations of fire companies should be effected in the interest of economy. The Appropriations Committee says that establishment of a new company "would be in conflict with the general purpose of the program recently adopted which would consolidate and distribute existing fire-fighting facilities."

Regardless of the merit of consolidating fire companies in 1939, and there was considerable question about it even then, the important fact is that since 1939 the defense program has brought thousands and thousands of workers to Washington, has stimulated a tremendous building program, and already has resulted in an increase in fires. To let a policy adopted before the expansion interfere with the obvious needs of the future seems to me to be short-sighted.

The District of Columbia appropriation bill has yet to pass the Senate. The establishment of this truck company can be brought about by restoration of $36,940 to the bill. Until it is restored, the lives of a good many thousand people will actually be in jeopardy, for the nearest ladder truck company to 19 Engine is at Eighth and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, a distance of a mile, and a good proportion of the area to be covered by the proposed new company is more than two miles removed from this existing company. The Fire Department has tempered all its requests with a scrupulous regard for economy. Now that it really needs something, why not give it a break?

Friendship Fire Association.

Nazi Humor

Repeated references have been made, since this World War started, to the constitutional lack of humor or the missing "funny bone" of the German people. Since it is the aim of that great nation, under its present regime, to emulate, acquire, control or possess all that has value in the minds and lives of the people of other nations, a campaign was straightway launched to create an appreciation of wit and humor in its doughty fighters. Circulars were issued and even the point of the story explained, we understand. The success of effort is measured by the result. Could anything be more humorous than the "laughing cow" on the conning tower of the submarine which torpedoed a defenseless freighter of a neutral nation, 500 miles from land, and left 46 souls in little lifeboats without keeping the solemn promise to radio their position? The 35 sun-parched survivors will fail to get the point of the joke, it is feared. Therein lies the difference in the Nazi ideology and ours. We know a German, reared under our democratic ideals, who carefully carries to the door, and sets free, the flies that he finds in his house.

The Post Impressionist

What's In A Name

As everyone who has written a book knows (and by this time that must include practically everyone), one of the most excruciating chores connected with scrivening is finding an acceptable title for one's brain-child. It is a comparatively simple matter to fill some thousands of sheets of manuscript, but what to call it all when you're finished is something else again. And it is a problem, it seems to me, that has been considerably complicated in modern times.

Time was, for example, when an author was pleased to name his novel forthrightly. There were such honest titles as "Tom Jones" and "Oliver Twist" and "Silas Marner" and "The Mayor of Casterbridge." Or with more descriptive implications, there were "Vanity Fair" and "The Way of All Flesh" and "Of Human Bondage," etc. There was no equivocation, no struggle for effect; yet who will say that these were not effective titles?

But all that is gone now. The modus operandi is changed. What does a writer do now, apparently, when he wants a name for his book? First of all, he summarily discards his "working title," which he thought was pretty good. (The publisher says it has no punch; "it doesn't grip.") Then he pores through volumes of poetry—Shakespeare, Milton, the Bible, and the Oxford Book of English Verse, for example—for some catchy phrase, something that is intriguingly impertinent to the contents of the book, something that might apply, but you're never quite sure how. It has gotten so nowadays that the first question you ask when you buy a new book is, "Where did he get his title?" You positively cannot enjoy the volume until you know.

Do you remember when that book, "Gone With the Wind," came out? That was in 1936. The whole country was in a dither until some snooping busybody discovered that Margaret Mitchell (whether she knew it or not) had taken her title from a poem called "Cynara," written by Ernest Christopher Dowson (1867-1900), an English poet who spent his brief life in rather sordid surroundings and wooed the muse in spite of illness, drink and drugs. The discovery cleared the air no end, and people began to settle down to reading and enjoying the book, and it sold quite a few copies and won a Pulitzer Prize.

Recently there was another case. Ernest Hemingway wrote a novel that he called "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Someone soon let the cat out of the bag that this strange title, containing one of the little-used relative pronouns, was lifted from the works of John Donne. Book titles had been taken from John Donne before, but that didn't matter. Who in thunder is, or was, John Donne?

Well, it turned out that he was an English cleric who, over 300 years ago, wrote profoundly religious and metaphysical verse. There was something intriguing about John Donne—the encyclopedia said that he was cynical, realistic, quite sensual, etc., and that the discovery of his secret marriage to his employer's niece resulted in the ruin of his career. The Rev. John Donne, indeed! His poetry might be worth looking into.

So booksellers who hadn't heard the name of John Donne in years began to be asked for his "Poems." The publishers cleaned up every copy, and it began to look as if John had stolen the show until, I suppose, people began to try to read him. It was pretty stiff going, so they went back to reading "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

Now, I don't want to start anything, but I've been doing a little title-searching on my own hook. A few weeks ago Little, Brown & Co. published a new novel entitled "Flotsam," by Erich Maria Remarque. The title fascinated me. From what gem of poesy had it been plucked? Here was a literary puzzle to baffle the inquisitive mind. Here was a novel already on the best-seller lists, and no one knew the origin of the title. Finally my researches were rewarded, and I herewith pass along my findings. The title, "Flotsam" was undoubtedly taken from a poem by Keith Preston, of the Chicago Daily News. I quote it in full:

We hear of it from South Sea roamers;
It's something gathered by beach combers;
We've not seen flotsam yet, nor jetsam,
But soon we're going out to get some.
Then all aboard for Honolulu,
For Tahiti, Fiji, Guam, and Sulu!
We'll not be back until we've got some
Genuine jetsam and some flotsam!

And that's not all. I have found out where Walt Disney and/or Leopold Stokowski got the title "Fantasia." There once lived in San Francisco a traveler by the name of Charles Warren Stoddard. He was one time correspondent for the San Francisco Chronicle and later professor at Notre Dame and Catholic University. Among his many works was a travel book entitled "Mashallah," and in it (p. 185) is this sentence: "Nothing is more difficult in the whole navigation of the Nile than weathering a coffee house when the barbaric music of the fantasia throbs over the waters and the voice of the al'men is heard in the land."

I am now working on two other puzzlers: "Collected Poems," by Walter de la Mare, and "Vitamins," by Henry Borsook. I'll let you know what I find. Also, I am about to suggest to the publishers of Webster's New International Dictionary that the title doesn't grip. Why not call it "Words, Words, Words" from Shakespeare?

Action In Africa

By Barnet Nover

Gen. Wavell's Surprising Move

IT IS STILL far too early to judge whether Gen. Wavell's thrust in the direction of Fort Capuzzo and beyond is more than a flash in the pan, more than a hit and run venture undertaken for the purpose of testing out the enemy's strength in the Libyan-Egyptian desert.

NOVER

It may be only that. But there is at least an offchance that it will prove more than that. The war in Africa has been full of surprises. The unexpected has happened far more than the expected. That was the case last December when the Army of the Nile began what was intended to be only a local action in the vicinity of Sidi Barrani but developed into a sweep across Cyrenaica to a point beyond Bengazi. That was equally the case last April when the German-Italian forces under the command of Gen. Rommel dramatically reversed the tide of battle in Libya and in less than a fortnight regained everything the Italians had lost except Tobruk.

NO FRONT in the present war has been more fluid than the Libyan-Egyptian front. Yet, for more than two months something like a stalemate has existed there. During all that time and until just the other day the only change in the battle line was the recapture by the Axis forces of Halfaya Pass and the escarpment at Solum. But the long-anticipated German-Italian drive across Egypt toward Alexandria and Suez has not developed.

If we keep in mind the cardinal fact that Alexandria is the key point in the eastern Mediterranean, since it is the only port capable of giving shelter to the British fleet, this relative inactivity on the part of the Axis in North Africa is surprising, to say the least. It is particularly so in view of the circumstances that during these two months the Germans succeeded in driving the British out of Crete—thus bringing the Luftwaffe closer than ever to Alexandria and the African coast—and the British have been embroiled in Iraq and Syria.

IN EXPLANATION of this inactivity various theories have been advanced. It is said that the fierce heat which beats down on the Libyan-Egyptian desert at this season has made it impossible for the Axis to mount a large-scale offensive against Suez. A further handicap in the same direction has been the repeated destruction by the British fleet of Axis convoys carrying men, materiel and supplies from Italy to Libya. Undoubtedly some convoys have gotten through but possibly not enough to give the Axis a clear-cut superiority over the Army of the Nile. And there is the additional fact frequently advanced that the German and Italian lines in North Africa have perforce been so long and thin as to make them a prey to the attrition tactics of the Royal Air Force.

Whatever the reasons, the fact is that the Axis drive of last April has had no sequel, with the result that Gen. Wavell has secured precious time in which to reinforce his army by the addition of men from the East African front, now largely liquidated, and of mechanized weapons brought from England through the Mediterranean to Alexandria in heavily protected convoys.

The fact that the Australian troops at Tobruk have managed to hold out all this time suggests that the Axis does not possess in the Libyan-Egyptian sector that superiority in the air or in mechanized force which the Germans have enjoyed in every encounter with the enemy thus far. On the other hand, Gen. Wavell's foray in the direction of Fort Capuzzo suggests that the fighting in Syria has not weakened the Army of the Nile to any marked extent, at least not to the extent of compelling it to remain completely on the defensive.

IN THE STRUGGLE for Crete the Nazis did not hesitate to resort to daring and reckless tactics to achieve their objective. They took great risks at that time. By taking those risks they succeeded in achieving very important gains. Yet these same tactics have not been repeated in Libya and Egypt although the ultimate stake there is far greater than was the stake in Crete.

For that reason explanations of Axis inactivity in Africa during the past two months that have to do solely with weather conditions, the length of the German-Italian supply line from Italy to Sicily to Libya to Egypt, and the handicaps imposed by the harassing tactics of the British fleet and air force probably do not tell the whole story. There must be another reason why Hitler has been content to pursue a policy of cautious approach in Africa rather than repeating in that theater of war the same all-out tactics that have won him so many spectacular gains in the 21 months of the present struggle.

THAT REASON may be that it fits in with his present plans to allow the British to reinforce their garrisons in the Middle East and even to win victories, such as those won in Iraq, Syria and, most recently, in Egypt.

The fact cannot be lost to sight that the strengthening of these garrisons, particularly with respect to planes, tanks, anti-tank guns and motorized equipment has been in greater or lesser measure at the expense of Britain's home defenses. In other words, to the extent that Great Britain has become stronger in the Middle East she may have become weaker in the islands and therefore less able to repel a frontal attack should Germany decide to launch it.

A year has passed since the threat of a German invasion of Great Britain first loomed menacingly on the horizon. These twelve months have witnessed an encouraging growth in Britain's strength, despite the fearful pounding which her cities have received at the hands of the Luftwaffe and the destruction of several million tons of British shipping.

But Germany, too, has grown stronger during that period. She has had time to organize at least part of conquered Europe's industrial resources and add them to her own. But, above all, she now faces the dangerous possibility that unless Britain is overcome soon the stand being taken by the United States in support of the British will make it impossible for her to win at all. That is why the fighting in Syria and Gen. Wavell's surprising and heartening offensive in Egypt must be considered as sideshows. The real struggle may soon break out elsewhere. Watch England!

The board panel is headed by Vice Chairman William H. Davis, with Gerard Swope as representative of employers and Thomas Kennedy representing labor.

The U. A. W. delegation, led by C. I. O. Aviation Division Director Richard T. Frankensteen, is seeking a revision of the wage minimum and general wage increases.

Other board panels also met yesterday on the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Co. and Marlin-Rockwell Co. disputes. Strikes in both companies were terminated at the board's request.

Yesterday's other major walkout was a jurisdictional dispute at the Douglas & Lomason Co., an auto parts factory in Detroit. A Michigan State labor mediator declared that Plymouth, Briggs, Ford and Dodge factories depending on the struck company for parts might have to throw 40,000 men out of work unless a speedy settlement were obtained.

The A. F. L. United Auto Workers has a union shop agreement with the firm and contended that the C. I. O. union tried to raid its membership.

This the C. I. O.-U. A. W. denied, describing the strike as a "spontaneous vacation period."

A. F. of L. President William Green accused the C. I. O. of making a "bare-faced raid" and said that there was 'absolutely no justification" for the strike.

Meanwhile, pickets continued to bar the gates of the Piper Aircraft Co. at Lock Haven, Pa., where A. F. of L. machinists called a strike on Mnoday which a union organizer has decleared to be unauthorized. The company has no defense contracts but employes 1,300 persons in making light planes used by the Government's civilian pilot training program.

On the lighter side was a grievous threat to the comfort of a goodly part of Chicago's newest citizens. It arose from a labor dispute among 10 truck drivers who deserted the wheels of trucks belonging to the Wee-Folks Diaper & Laundry Service, an enterprise which caters to the sartorial demands of 2,000 Chicago babies, supplying them 40,000 clean diapers a week.

The Newspaper Guild

SOME READERS of these dispatches may think I have exaggerated the importance of the American Newspaper Guild and the influence of the Communists and party-liners who dictate its policies and dominate its affairs. This is a relatively small union, and I am conscious also of the fact that I have had a personal interest in the case, having been a member for some years, in the role of "innocent."

But it must be remembered that the guild wants to be a big union and that if it reached full growth it would be one of the most dangerous in the country as a Communist agency. And it is the one union of which I am able to speak from the experience of one who has sat in meetings and seen the Muscovites in action. I know who the Communists are, and I waited a long time before I became convinced that they were actually enemies of the freedoms which are inherent in Americanism.

I may have seemed impetuous, although I waited years to quit the guild and fight the Communists in it. Other newspapermen kept quiet for the sake of unity, and many of them even continued to deny that Communism was an issue, even after Communism had become the only important issue, in last year's national convention. If I was impetuous, I nevertheless was right, as events of the last ten days have shown and as will be shown more emphatically in the impending convention in Detroit, where again the American element will try to break the power of the Communistic key officers and their clever and indefatigable cells of conspirators.

THE COMMUNISTS have been sneaking up on our journalism, the stage and the movies through organizations of writers and actors. Anyone who denounces them as Communists knows in advance that he will be vilified as a red-baiter, a disrupter, a stooge and a traitor to the cause of Labor with an upper-case L. The rebel against the Muscovites must learn to take it and keep piling into them. But if nobody had fought them, they would now dictate all our news and disangle all our movie entertainment so as to argue the futility of trying to make Americanism work. They would also build up as great writers and guest stars those mediocre men and women of the Kremlin who are of their own pernicious group.

How does one identify a Communist, anyway? Well, how does the United States Government identify a Communist? In the case of Harry Bridges the Government has held two long, expensive and highly legalistic hearings, and the decision is not yet, although he has been placed in the company of the Communists, and his California C. I. O. is constantly sympathetic with every policy of the Stalin government. The common man in a labor union can't do that. He hasn't the money or the facilities, so he must proceed by conviction, as the Government itself finally will have to do in the case of Bridges, because there is apparently no documentary proof. The two trials of Bridges cannot be duplicated for every bolo and suspect.

IN THE CASE of the guild there have been many positive indications, a number of which have been cited here from time to time. I was particularly impressed by the slick manipulation of political strength in national conventions so as to defeat any condemnation of Communism. I was impressed also, more than most others, by the fact that in California the guild did not repudiate the C. I. O.'s indorsement of the ham 'n' eggs referendum, which would have revoked the whole State constitution and the entire Constitution of the United States as well.

Presented in the guise of an old-age pension scheme, which is one thing that it was not, this long and devious document would have wiped out the whole American economic system and would have placed an upstart political adventurer in command of the State, above the Governor and responsible to nobody, and with the power to name his own successor in case of impeachment. The Communistic C. I. O., including the guild organization, supported this proposal because it gave promise of actual civil war in California. And the situation was so grave that the entire voting strength of the nonmendicant and non-Communist population was required to save the State.

LAST WEEK during the North American aviation strike one of the leaders of the mob, or picket line, was Philip M. Connelly, president of the California C. I. O. industrial council. If you will look at the masthead of the guild Reporter, the official organ of the guild, you will observe that he is listed there as an international vice president of that organization, too.

Last week, also, the New York guild, by a snap vote of a small minority, adopted a resolution upholding the picket-line mob and denouncing the use of soldiers to disperse the mob.

So I may exaggerate the importance of the guild as a union, but I submit that, as a part of the whole Communist effort, the guild is no more to be ignored because it is small than a small cancer.

The Problem Of Weeding Out The Reds

ADMINISTRATION officials seem determined to see through a "purge" of obstreperous red leaders from labor unions in defense industries. They would prefer, of course, to have the weeding out done by the unions themselves, under the direction of responsible labor leaders.

LINDLEY

A week ago it looked as if national labor leaders were ready to act, especially in the C. I. O., where most of the left wing trouble lies. Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, denounced three West Coast strikes, and castigated "Micky" Orton, head of the International Wood Workers, on account of the Puget Sound loggers' strike. He got the national officers of the United Auto Workers to suspend a handful of local officers at the Inglewood, Calif., plant of North American.

THEN MURRAY suddenly appeared to weaken. His position admittedly is difficult. His salary comes from his job in the United Mine Workers, firmly controlled by John L. Lewis. In the months since he became C. I. O. president, Murray has kept Lewis' lieutenants in key positions in the national C. I. O. headquarters staff. Some friendly observers doubt that Murray can ever free himself of the Lewis influence until the C. I. O. presidency is paid.

But it is doubtful whether that would do much to increase Murray's independence. The fight between the left and the right in the C. I. O. is rather fierce. As long as John L. Lewis collaborates with the left, there is no assurance that the more moderate elements can retain control.

Some experienced observers of Lewis have suspected for several weeks that he was about to reverse himself once again and come out stalwartly for national defense and the elimination of the Communists from the C. I. O. He still recalls frequently, with some evidence of pride, that for years Communists have been banned from the United Mine Workers. Knowing the extent of his vanity and ambition, some former friends of Lewis have predicted that he was only waiting for others to fail in handling the labor situation, so that his indispensability would be recognized.

LACKING LEWIS' support, Murray's alternative seems to be to cut loose and fight to make himself a really powerful labor leader.

The internal political problems which hamper Murray also are bothering the heads of several unions. R. J. Thomas, president of U. A. W., is credited with being extremely uneasy about holding his own job. On the moderate side he has potential rivals in Walter Reuther and Richard Frankensteen. Any politician in that position would be reluctant to alienate support which he can get, but which rivals on the moderate side cannot. Administration officials in close touch with the labor movement believe, however, that Thomas would carry through a discriminating purge if Murray insisted on it.

The struggle between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. is another obstacle. Elections in some of the aircraft plants have been rather close. The penalty for "purging" a local union may be to have the "purgees," with as many followers as they can hold, welcomed into the arms of the competing union movement. Both sides are welcoming renegades and engaging in intensive raiding. These obstacles to an effective purge probably could be removed only by a firm agreement between the C. I. O. and A. F. of L., made binding on all members unions.

THE MOST DELICATE question is determining who ought to be purged. John L. Lewis's consistent reply to those who have charged him with harboring Communists in the C. I. O. has been that the C. I. O. organized workers whom it found employed: if there were Communists among them it was because the employer hired them. In the same vein, persons close to him assert that if there are dangerous men employed in aircraft or other defense plants, it's the Government's job to make the employers get rid of them. That ignores the fact that employers are tied by the Wagner Act.

If the union leaders now under fire had indulged in sabotage or other illegal acts, the remedies would be simple. What they have done is to engineer strikes, which they have an undoubted right to do. Legally there is not much the Government can do with them, if they are American citizens, without violating fundamental liberties. Yet responsible officials, long sympathetic to labor, are convinced that a certain number of them are under the influence of the Communist Party. They believe that if these men were removed, most of the stoppage in defense production due to labor trouble would cease.

THE PROCEDURE proposed by one Government official, and spoken of favorably by some others, is this: Call to Washington the national heads of the major unions in defense industries. Show them the Department of Justice dossiers on some 200 or 300 union officials believed to have Communist ties. (The Department of Justice findings should not, and would not, be taken at face value.) Request the national leaders to displace immediately officials whose Communist ties are clearly established. Inform them that if they do not act, their refusal will be publicized, and that the Government will step in.

This and all other methods suggested have obvious flaws. But Administration officials are convinced that if responsible labor leaders do not assert their influence, the Government will have to. They fear the ultimate alternative may be stringent legislation, which will cost organized labor many of its gains of the last eight years.

Text of Petain's Broadcast

By the Associated Press

Vichy, June 17.—The text of Chief of State Marshal Petain's broadcast today on the first anniversary of his elevation:

Frenchmen: June 17, 1940, a year ago today, I addressed my first call to France.

The record which registered it will now be played to you.

Listen to it. It gives you back the feeling of that day when the call was made:

'Frenchmen: At the call of the President of the Republic, I assumed today direction of the government of France, sure of the affection of our admirable army, which fights with a heroism worthy of its long military traditions against an enemy of superior number and arms. Sure that, by its magnificent resistance, it carried out our obligations towards our Allies, sure of support of the veterans whom I have been so proud to command, sure of the confidence of all the people, I make France a gift of myself.

"In these sad hours, I think of the unhappy refugees who, in extreme want, are streaming along our roads. To them I express my compassion and my solicitude. It is with a heart full of anguish that I tell you today it is necessary to cease the fight.

"Tonight I asked the adversary if he was ready to seek with us, as soldier to soldier after battle and in honor, means of putting an end to the hostilities.

"May all Frenchmen stand firm behind the government which I head during these heavy times and silence their own sorrows in order to hear only their faith in the destiny of the fatherland."

That is what I told you June 17, 1940, in a voice broken by emotion.

My voice today is again firm, because France has risen again.

But a considerable number of Frenchmen refuse to recognize this. Do they really believe their condition is more tragic than it was a year ago?

French, you truly have short memories. Remember columns of fleeing refugees, composed of women, children and the old, perched on all sorts of vehicles moving forward willy nilly, dominated by fear and the wish to escape the enemy, stopping each night beside the road, men and beasts dropping with fatigue yet obliged to take the road early the next morning in order not to lose their place in the column. What hardship for those worthy people and what anguish when machine-gunners came to fly over the columns.

Today for the most part you have gone back to your homes. Undoubtedly there are prisoners not yet returned, women work and suffer, food is difficult to get, taxes irritate you, your children do not always have enough to eat, but France lives, her houses, her bridges and her factories are being rebuilt.

Must I remind you of the immense effort of our agriculture which, despite the absence of a million farmer prisoners, has put a million hectares of new land in cultivation?

Must I remind you that our youth has stiffened its muscles and its soul, that purity of ideals and spirit of sacrifice are being imposed each day with more force and more radiance?

Must I remind you of that judgment of neutral nations passed on our country, of the tribute they have paid to our first recovery?

Believe me the moment has not come for you to take refuge in bitterness or to founder in despair. You have been neither sold out nor betrayed or abandoned. Those who tell you so lie to you and throw you into the arms of communism.

You are suffering and you will suffer a long time still because we have not finished paying off all our mistakes.

Hardship is heavy. Many good Frenchmen, amongst them peasants and workers accepting it with nobility, are aiding me today to bear my heavy tasks.

But I need more still.

I need your faith, faith of your hearts, faith of your reason. I need your understanding, your patience. You will find it only in the disciplining which I impose on you and which only those who forget our history, our enemies and our unity seek to evade.

Remember above all you are men, men of an old and glorious country. Take stock of yourselves. Dry your tears. Come to me, we will lead you forth from the darkness into which this horrible adventure has plunged us.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Our Democratic Army

Dear Ma:

I serpose now and then you get a idea from my letters that I'm all the time squawking and that it is awful being in the Army but it is not as bad as it sounds and I am writing this time to say that all in all it is pretty much okay. The squawker is a exception and most of us have a pretty good time even if we do a little grousin. One of the things witch I like is the democratick side of Army life. As I told you before there is no leveler like a Army.

In my company there is a former president of a oil company, a garbage collector, two insurance agents, a son of a steel king, two artists, a sideshow barker, a movie actor, a oyster opener, a poet and a dog track ushers. And in my tent just now a former street cleaner, a fellow who had his own restaurant business, a bank clerk, a flagpole sitter and a former college football star sleep side by side.

You can speak any language in the world in my company and find somebody who understands it flewently. One of our corporals is an author and another used to work in a flea circus. There is a sergeant here who was a department store manager and believe it or not he takes orders from a captain who in civilyun life was a clam digger. You wood never find so much democracy in any other place on earth, ma.

Sometimes I think it must be terrible to be in private life these days where it must be hard to meet any interesting people. Believe you me all the fellows I used to know before I was in the Army seem uninteresting compared with those witch I meet here working for Uncle Sam. As a rule they are all fine fellows two as the wise guy don't get to first base before he is found out. There is no place I gess where you can get another feller's number as quick as in a Army.

I think the Army is a good thing for me mentally I mean it takes a lot of things off my mind like worrying over my job and so forth. In civilyun life I was always worrying that I wood get fired but there is no chance of that in a Army. I used to worry two about whether my clothes fitted swell, where I wood spend my summer vacashun and things like that all of which I do not worry no more about now. Speaking of clothes the Army is doing better. At first a lot of the boys used to look like they had been asked only one question "Do you like a coat two sizes two big or a pair of pants three sizes two small?" and I have seen boys witch looked like all Army tailors was former Indian blanket designers, but the outfitting is pretty good now.

It is funny how in a uniform some boys look good from the start even in a uniform witch dont fit two well while others look comickal even in a uniform witch is perfect. I see some jeeps who would get a laugh even if they had been in the Army all their lives and had everything tailor made. It must be their necks or the shape of their faces or something. I look very good as my pictures show. It must be personality.

You know back home I gess everybody is up in the air over whether the Army will have to fight or not but here in the camp most of the boys are getting sick of just drilling and wish there could be more action. I guess more people who aint in the Army are afraid of war than the boys in the Army are. All sorts of roomers are heard every day and the last one was that we would go to Dakar wherever that is. It is funny how no places mentioned in this war is any place I ever heard mentioned in my geograty class.

Well, I must close again from Your loving son, OSCAR.

P. S.: Ask Minerva Rosenbaum to drop me a line. If I get put on duty taking over a factory the camp will forward any letter to me there.

Well, President Roosevelt now has his Supreme Court within a Stone's throw of where he always wanted it.

The Robin Moor

By Mark Sullivan

Its Meaning For Us Now Clear

ON MAY 6, an American ship sailed out of New York. It was called the Robin Moor. Aboard the ship were American passengers, including women and a child. The ship had an American crew, some from seaboard cities, but mainly from little interior towns — Bowie, Tex.; Newberry, S. C.; Wichita, Kans.; Altoona, Pa.; Maywood, Calif., a dozen such towns.

SULLIVAN

In the hold was cargo from America. This cargo had been selected with special care, to make sure it contained no guns or ammunition, or other materials that might be contraband of war. Before the ship sailed, a carefully itemized list of its cargo had been submitted to the American Government, to the New York Custom House, a branch of the United States Treasury. At the Custom House, the list of cargo had been gone over with a fine-tooth comb by men expert in the law of contraband, not only American but international, familiar with the latest rulings and decisions. Until the American Government was satisfied the ship contained no contraband, it would not permit the ship to sail. This is standard practice of the American Government.

THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT had been likewise scrupulous about the destination of the ship. It was going to Cape Town, South Africa, and the American Government had approved its going there. Had it been going to any place in a war zone, the American Government would have forbidden it, upon penalty of crime.

The American Government had been scrupulous, the captain and owners had been scrupulous. The captain had reason to feel safe. The crew had reason to feel safe. The passengers had reason to feel safe.

The ship sailed for 15 days. Then, in early dawn of May 21—read the statement of Chief Officer Mundy, here abridged:

"I had just taken over 4 o'clock watch and was drinking coffee on the bridge when I saw blinker lights on the horizon. The lights said, 'AAA,' which means 'what ship?'

"I answered, 'American steamer Robin Moor.' I was very careful to signal the word 'American' first, because I had a suspicion it was a submarine. I sent someone down to wake the captain. The captain ordered the signalman to signal, 'Who are you?' The answer came back immediately, 'submarine.'

"A minute later the submarine flashed 'LRL,' which meant, 'I am pursuing you.'

"A minute later the submarine signaled: 'Don't use your wireless.' We stopped our engines and so informed the submarine.

"Then the submarine flashed, 'Send a boat to me.' The captain sent me to the submarine. The commander of the submarine was waiting on the deck. [He was a German.] He asked what our cargo was. 'General merchandise for South African ports,' I told him.

"The submarine commander then said what he frequently repeated before we saw the last of him: 'You have supplies for my country's enemy and I must sink you.'

"I asked him then how much time he would give us. He replied, 'Only 20 minutes.'

"I pleaded with him. I pointed out that one of the passengers was a little child. He only shook his head. I tried to impress him that we had women aboard. He still shook his head. I told him about a man and a wife who were in their sixties. 'We can't get people like that in boats in a hurry' I told him.

"'Well, maybe I'll give you 30 minutes,' he said."

THAT is the story of the Robin Moor—the conclusion, everybody knows. No amount of care and scruple by the United States Government is enough to assure safety. No amount of conformance to law is enough. No amount of care by captain and owners is enough.

No kind of cargo is assured safety. The submarine commander did not see the cargo on the Robin Moor nor any list of it, he knew only what the chief officer told him. If this cargo condemned a ship, any cargo would condemn any ship.

No spot on the ocean is safe. If a spot in the middle of the South Atlantic midway between Africa and South America, thousands of miles from Germany, thousands of miles from any war zone—if that spot is not safe, no spot is safe.

What then? Shall we retire from the sea? Call every American vessel home and forbid any ever to sail again? Surely the most powerful Nation in the world won't do that.

WHAT ELSE, THEN? We must make our ships safe where they have a right to be. We must make them safe by force. The force must be the American Navy. We can put naval guns on merchant ships and train the merchant crews to use them. That will be something but not enough. To some extent we can have our American ships accompanied by American naval vessels, wherever that is practicable, on routes where our merchant ships travel in numbers. Elsewhere, on all the seven seas, we can do the final thing—have our Navy act as a police force, seeking out menaces to our shipping wherever menaces are to be found.

125 Play Centers Ready—

Washington school children today celebrate the end of classes, the beginning of summer vacation. To make their celebration last all summer, the District is starting anew its full vacation playground schedule, with 125 grounds ready to receive the children at once, and 44 more opening July 1. Among those who will see that an estimated 95,000 children have a real vacation is pretty Betty Rawley, 22, pictured at left, whistle in hand directing activities of girls at the Park View playground. She is one of 175 playground teachers charged with leading and instructing these thousands of children. Like her colleagues, Miss Rawley is an athlete. At the University of Maryland, she majored in physical education, also played on the varsity basketball, volley ball, archery and hockey teams. Since her graduation in 1939, she has been engaged during the summers at the Park View Playground, where she supervises between 400 and 500 youngsters daily. Playground instruction is no hit or miss matter. Even with such credentials as a degree in sociology or physical education, all teachers are required to attend the Community Center and Playgrounds Department Summer Play Institute. This course, held at Wilson Teachers College, consists of eight days' intensive training during June in every phase of group recreation leadership and new techniques of instruction. Playground teaching is hard, but popular work and every summer, officials say, more than 300 persons apply for about 30 vacant jobs.

LIKE SHEAVES OF WHEAT are the long strands of reed held by Ruth Randall, a playground department employe. They are a portion of the 1,000 pounds that will be used on playgrounds in the city this summer in basket-making programs. Below—Mary Litner, an employe of the playground department in the Force School, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, surveys a portion of the 2,500 paddle tennis balls and 140 rackets that will be supplied playgrounds this summer.

FRED SCHWANER, stock clerk for the playgrounds department, checks over the 40 shuffle board sets that will be distributed among local playgrounds this summer. Shuffle board is a popular indoor game and is played a great deal in rainy weather. One of the 100 volley balls to be used by romping youngsters on playgrounds this summer is lifted by Schwaner (below). Last summer the department issued nearly 3,277 ping pong balls, 1,500 tennis balls, 1,300 arrows and 4,000 softballs.

Map Safest Walking Ways—

Thirty-four youthful traffic researchers at Thomson School—the authors of a novel safety campaign that has resulted in an absence of injury despite the congested area—are determined to continue the campaign as a summer playground project even after school is out. The keystone of the campaign carried on by members of Class 3-B is a six-foot map of the traffic clogged area in which they live. On this map, which the students themselves made, they have plotted the safest route from the school to their respective homes. The youngsters started the map following a talk by Patrolman William L. Green, of Second Precinct, one of 13 District officers assigned exclusively to guarding lives of school children against automobiles. Green pointed out the means of determining the safest routes, on the basis of where policemen or safety patrol boys are stationed, and where traffic lights and safety zones are located. Then the youthful safety crusaders got hold of a large piece of brown paper and pasted to it strips of various colors, in criss-cross fashion, illustrating streets, avenues, circles and landmarks in the neighborhood of their homes and school. Under the guidance of their teacher, Miss Helyn Lewis, each of the children in the class was made to figure out the least hazardous way to the school. For instance a child living at Sixth and I Streets Northwest learned that the shortest route, north to Massachusetts Avenue and along that thoroughfare, was not the safest. It was better, according to Green's principle, to walk west on I Street to Tenth, north on Tenth to K which is split into three sections by safety zones and where safety patrol boys are stationed. The latter assist their fellow students in crossing Tenth Street, and down K to Twelfth and thence to the school at Twelfth and L. As the youngsters successfully figured out their safest route, they drew in homes on the map. Now the map is peppered with these dots. And incidentally, there has not been a child from Thomson School injured in traffic this year, despite the school's location in the heart of some of the city's heaviest traffic.

Bill Cunningham's Column: Cunningham Says It's Joe Louis—So Bet on Conn

By Bill Cunningham

This particular Boswell of Bash hasn't called one right since the Second Battle of the Marne, but here we go again—hold on to your hats and the side rails! Billy Conn is a nice boy. He's kind to his parents, is on cordial terms with his pastor and is considerate of old folks and orphans, but he has about as much chance with Joe Louis Wednesday night as a tennis racquet has with a concrete mixer.

They've galloped the handsome Pittsburgh youngster in there just about a year too soon, for my mythical money, and they'll be going through the sad rite of scraping him loose from the deck along about the middle of the sixth stanza, for more of it. If the fight, perchance, goes along and even runs the regulation distance, I still can't see the principle of Nordic supremacy emerging triumphant, despite the fact that Conn is favored by many critics to win in case it settles down into a sustained quadrille.

Conn isn't going to slap that diadem off the lofty Louis conk for any one or any combination of the following reasons:

1 On any evidence offered to date, he can't hit hard enough to reduce Mr. Louis to a prone study in still life. Who ever has but Max (I Am Not a Nazi) Schmeling? And didn't the erstwhile Black Uhlan have to work at it steadily from the fourth round to the twelfth, knocking Louis down so many times before the Brown Bomber would stay there that the sight of him going down and getting up began to look like a movie of a Mohammedan saying his prayers?

Louis can be hit. Schmeling, Braddock, even the clownish Galento and, recently, the astounded young Jacob (Buddy) Baer have all caused the colored gentleman to descend to the calico, but how many have kept him there, and for how long? Compared to the night sticks swung by the above coterie of gentlemen, Conn's heavy persuader is the tickling brush of a butterfly's wing. The net result of all this is that, unless the champion has disintegrated all at once like the wonderful One Hoss Shay, Conn's not going to do any knocking out.

2 In the matter of out-dabbing and out-dancing the champ to a decision, there are two or three stumbling blocks. It's pretty generally overlooked that Mr. Louis is far more than just a green country hand at boxing himself. The fact that he's a hitter has been so sensationally publicized that his handiness with his dukes has never been much in the stories. I've seen him do some pretty fancy stepping while he was waiting around. I didn't like the way Buddy Baer bounced some heavy blows off the Louis features, but, until proved otherwise, we can call the mellowing champion merely careless in the early rounds of that one.

3 It's entirely possible that the proud and explosive Conn temperament is exactly in the way of any victory-on-points. The fistic log is studded with instances of where the cute and skilful boxer outpointed the lunging and desperate slugger, but that type of campaign calls for a type of patience and poise that it's doubtful young William possesses. It calls for the ignoring of all invitations to wade in, a tight control of the emotions, the ability to disregard the hoots of the bloodthirsty throng, the majority of whom would yell "More action" at a lynching.

Principally, it calls for the ability to bridle the temper when stung. Conn's never been that way. It's doubtful that he can wage that type of war. Tunney and Corbett were ideal in this assignment. Conn is the more volatile type, and when anybody gets volatile with Louis, it's usually a case for the coroner and the next of kin.

4 To win a property as big and as valuable as the world heavyweight pugilistic championship on points, a man will have to pile up an impressive pyramid of them. No close decision, no little panty-waist outpointing, will turn the trick against a champion such as Louis. It's been the history of such cases, one could almost call it the unwritten law, that the champion gets the breakage in a close one. Conn will have to have Louis broken, bloody, stumbling, clearly beaten and obviously on his way out to swing the psychology of that one.

5 It'll be better for future business to have Louis win. I don't know how much water that particular tug draws, still it rates considering. It's true Louis will stand in the middle of a heavyweight desert if he wins, barring a few humps on the landscape such as Lou Nova and return engagements with Simon and Baer, and it's likewise true that Conn might bring out some new faces who figured that now they had a chance.

But the crowd wants a hitter. Conn isn't the type to excite them in sufficiently paying qualities, and there's nothing in his past to promise that he'd fight anybody, anywhere, the way Louis has done.

6 When Louis hits 'em, they stay hit.

I say about the sixth, but on my record as a swami, you'll be wise to bet on Conn to win the title by a knockout.

Natural Look Is Sought by Young Actress

Helen Parrish Sets Example for Teen-Age Girls

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU are a teen age girl and are still using very bright nail polish or heavy make-up, you're behind the times. Out in Hollywood, the young actresses who set national styles in beauty are going out for the country-fresh brand which suggests sun, wind, and plenty or soap and water.

Helen Parrish, the attractive brunette in "Too Many Blondes," is my authority for this return to natural beauty on the part of the film colony's younger set. When Deanna Durbin married Vaughn Paul, she asked that her bridesmaids—of whom Helen was one—wear no polish on their nails. The bride herself went further and wore no perfume or jewelry.

Foregoes Make-up

On her recent trip to New York, Helen's fresh, unabetted beauty created quite a sensation. She uses scarcely enough powder to keep the shine off her perky nose. She doesn't use any rouge on her cheeks, and there's not enough lipstick to keep you guessing whether it might not be natural. Except for a tiny space just above the bridge of her nose, she doesn't tweeze her eyebrows—she used to, and says it made her look half-awake!

Like one or two of the top-notch older stars, Helen has mastered the trick of setting her own hair. She says any girl who wants to appear well groomed and to look her best always should go to work and learn to do her hair.

Having watched her in the act, I can tell you she does a professional hairdressing job. She uses the forefinger of her left hand to hold the lock in place, then winds it about that finger with the right hand.

Bring Out Hair Brush

And here's a beauty tip: If you can't wash your hair and you want to look especially good, put in 30 minutes at brushing your hair. You can read a book or listen to the radio at the same time, but keep brushing. Helen says it gives the hair a lovely sheen and is better than a shampoo.

Her other beauty tip is for the tall girls: Stand tall! Stand tall, no matter if your "date" is short. He likes 'em tall, or he wouldn't have asked you to go out with him.

Helen says that thanks to a vigilant brother she never stooped, but that she is just beginning to realize how important it is to a girl's appearance to stand up straight.

One of the reasons tall girls stoop is to bring themselves down to the level of the average, which is 5 feet 4 inches minus. But the girls who make a career of acting or modeling appreciate posture and height too much to stump. Helen is 5 feet 6½ inches without shoes and she towers—gracefully—over the crowd.

Crossed Knees Bad for Ankles

Hollywood, Calif.—Pretty knees are as important as a pretty face now that the beach season is on.

Priscilla Lane would improve them, first of all, with a more decorous sitting position. She says:

"Legs will never have a lovely contour as long as we cross them at the knees and create ugly bulges around the calves. What's more, this position hinders free circulation and causes flabby muscles. Ankle crossing is much better for leg beauty.

"And knees are very bold-faced in these days of skimpy play frocks and bathing suits and short skirts. Give them a thought. Occasionally take a handful of wet salt and massage them. Use half a lemon for a quick bleach. Keep your knees and legs soft with cream and lotion. Be feminine and use a depilatory."

Returns to Nature for Beauty

Helen Parrish is one young movie star who believes in natural or no make-up at all for the teen-age girls. She uses only enough powder to cover the shine on her nose, no rouge, and very little lipstick. She thinks that any young girl to be well groomed, should above all learn to set her hair at home

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Conversational Menace

AT LAST something is to be done about the woman who begins, "Oh, that reminds me of what happened to a girl in my hometown," and goes on from there endlessly.

Mrs. DeGoofey

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted crusader and president of the Do Something About It League, announced yesterday at her press conference that she was starting a campaign to silence feminine reminiscers.

"While I prefer to reform men rather than women," said Mrs. De Goofey," yet conversational bores are increasing so rapidly among my own sex that I feel something drastic must be done at once."

"You mean women who talk about their diets?" asked the editor of The Vitamin Review.

"No, those women are comparatively harmless beside the ones who go in for personal incidents and who invariably have a phobia for detail."

"I scarcely ever go anywhere," continued Mrs. DeGoofey, "that some woman doesn't get the floor—and hold it—telling about some Mr. and Mrs. Whoosis she used to know who were such lovely people and who have just bought a home over in Ragweed Heights and who have just had twins—or perhaps haven't had them . . . anyway you get the idea.

Names of Bores To Be Published

"Men are bad enough with their shopworn anecdotes, but women are even worse when they start going into all the ramifications of what happened to somebody they knew somewhere and that none of their listeners knows, or wants to know."

"How do you plan campaigning against this threat to our Nation's security?" asked an editorial writer.

"Through the legitimate channels of publicity," was the reply. "I am now publishing a general descriptive list of the main offenders in this matter, and I shall ask all lovers of interesting conversation to aid me by turning in the names of those who fit the descriptions. Later I will publish the names."

Mrs. DeGoofey drew from her mammoth handbag a printed outline." Here are the general types of reminiscers against whom I am conducting my crusade," she said.

"First—those who have ancestors. Those are the women who in response to the slightest stimuli are set off telling about how some John Doe buried at Fog Hollow was the second son of the fourth grandson of Baron Hocus Pocus who was at Runnymede and who is the tale teller's great-great-grandfather on the maternal side, according to the records some sister-in-law has unearthed at Thistle Point courthouse.

Tales of Schoolmates And Diseases Taboo

"Second—Those who knew a girl at school or had a roommate who used to eat bananas and beer at midnight and who subsequently married one of the Dizzle boys, either Tom or Henry, and how the Dizzles were the big gravy manufacturing people and had a daughter who was a little off, etc.

"Third—Those who tell in exhaustive detail of their children's diseases and their own ailments and how the summer they were at camp somebody broke out with chickenpox and there wasn't a doctor for 10 miles and how some man who used to be a druggist prescribed, and what happened, etc.

"Fourth—Those whose husband's relatives out in Wyoming or New Mexico are always having something happen to them such as high school graduations or weddings or motor trips on which they get food poisoning from canned artichokes, or ivy poisoning from cactus, etc.

"Fifth—Those whose neighbors 'back home' or in a former community were always cutting up some kind of hi-jinks, such as raising guppies or having things taken out of them in hospitals, and being put on jello and peanut diets for six weeks, etc.

"Sixth—Those who meet 'interesting couples' on boats, trains or hotels, or live near them on the beach and how they have darling little boys or wonderful motor-cars and turn out to be related to somebody's sister-in-law in Detroit who has a star sapphire as big as an egg, etc.

"This completes my list at present but I expect to add to it, concluded Mrs. DeGoofey. "However, right now I shall have to get along as I have an engagement with a Mrs. McPish I used to know back in my home town of Utopia, Nebr. She is a very lovely woman. Before she was married she was a—— a—— well the name has escaped me, but I will give it to you at my next press conference."

Bette Davis Dodges Sun

Hollywood, Calif.—Bette Davis this summer is repeating her decision not to tan because of her allergy to strong sunlight. Allies to the resolve are the current wide-brimmed hats, some as large as archery targets. Although none of Bette's reach those proportions, she does haxe extremely wide hats this summer, including an unusual one in "tweed" straw predominating in yellow. For future reference, make note of this chapeau and a yellow linen shirtmaker with four small matching straw buttons on each short sleeve.

Light Weight Cosmetics Best For Air Travel

NOW THAT vacations are in full swing, the eternal problem of how to arrive at your destination fresh and lovely confronts you. You've settled all the intricacies of making up in the pullman dressing room and berth and of whisking out your beauty kit at the end of a long automobile ride. But this time you're traveling by airplane and you aren't quite sure of what you'll need and how much of what to take. Also, you've heard that high altitude does ugly things to your skin.

Miss Orcutt

Miss Evelyn Jean Orcutt, director of the Woman's Department for Pennsylvania Central Airlines here, and five of her hostesses, who were selected as the most typical American beauties resembling well known movie stars, have a ready answer for all these perplexities. Tomorrow the five hostesses thus designated, Miss Geraldine Grimm (Chief), Miss Joy Wadleigh, Miss Ann Shaughnessy, Miss Jean Morgan and Miss Ethel Rouke, will be on hand at a local store to tell you about skin care in the air. And as representatives of a widely known cosmetic company they will present free beauty kits. In the meantime here are a few helpful suggestions from Miss Orcutt.

Light Kit Needed

"On the planes," said Miss Orcutt," you'll find a well lighted dressing room. In the daytime, you'll have natural light through a sky roof. There is plenty of running water, towels, soap and facial tissues. Therefore, omit these items in your beauty kit and baggage. This will save space and poundage—two important considerations when traveling by airplane. But if your hair gets straggly and unmanageable, tuck a pair of electric curling iron's in your make-up kit, for there's a handy plug in the dressing room."

Dark sun glasses and a hand lotion are musts. You'll need the dark glasses to prevent glare and the hand lotion to ward off chapping of hands as you wander around the airport on stopovers. Occasionally, the stopovers are windy, according to Miss Orcutt.

How to Pack

Here are other things to remember when packing your make-up products:

Pack your cleansing cream, lubricating cream and foundation lotion in a small kit along with your powder, rouge, lipstick and mascara. Include suntan lotion if you're going to the beach or Florida. A small kit that leaves room for your roll-up curlers (if you're going by sleeper) or electric ones if it's a short or daytime hop. Be sure your kit is large enough to carry a comb, hair brush, tooth brush and tooth paste. And don't pack the make-up kit in your baggage. Take it along with you to your plane seat. Besides being convenient, there's no charge for the kit when its in your hand as you board the plane. Put in with your dresses, it is weighed and counted on the 40 pounds alloted to each passenger. Bottles and jars soon add up to lot of weight when tucked among your shoes and dresses.

To counteract the drying effects of varying altitudes on the skin when flying long distances either use a powder base that is lubricating and fairly heavy or leave a good oily, nourishing cream on the face a few minutes when refreshing your make-up or while sleeping.

New Booklet Tells How to Get Government Jobs

EVERY DAY Uncle Sam adds to his list of workers, a list including all ages and all levels of education—and all types of training, from mechanical to professional. Could you be next on this list? Perhaps.

The age limits for many clerical jobs in U. S. Civil Service range from 18 to as high as 53. And for much needed defense workers the limit is up to 62.

If you're a clerical worker you may be interested in the job of junior telephone operator or of junior typist. Each starts at $1,260 a year. The principal requirement is that you pass a test of your skill.

If you have mechanical training, chances in the defense program are many. Boat builders and boilermakers ma ymake $8.88 a day.

With inspection experience or training you may get a job as inspector of textiles or explosives, paying up to $2,600 a year.

To qualify for a professional job at $2,000 you must have specialized in your subject at college. Jobs included are enginer, chemist, librarian and social worker.

Many jobs for men and women are listed in our 40-page booklet, "Gide to United States Government Jobs." Describes requiremenes, examinations and pay; tells how to apply. Gives information on pensions, regulations.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, GUIDE TO U. S. GOVERNMENT JOBS, to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Celebrates Her 12th Wedding Anniversary By Writing Letter Championing 'H.O.'s' Shocked Attitude Toward Fiancee's Story of Early Affair

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You so often dip deep into psychologically sound causes and effects, in your analyses of problems, that it is the exception, proving the rule, when you evidence shallower thinking, as you did June 13, in your reply to "H. O."—the college senior who described his "violnt surprise" (leading to "long periods of depression and sadness") at hearing from his fiancee about a former illicit love affair. Weren't you in a bit too much of a hurry to dismiss the discussion, when you wrote off the whole delicate problem with a half-answer from your friend, the "specialist in human behavior?"

Here's hoping you won't be influenced to a lopsided view of life by the opinions of well meaning, but too "naturalistic" specialists. Wouldn't it be wise to take care that physical or biological factors are not permitted to outweigh other, equally legitimate, factors, when searching for the balanced answer to such questions as his? "H. O." is a sweet, clean, idealistic boy—obviously the product of an old fashioned belief that chastity and sexual appeal are compatible in one and the same girl. Obviously, too, his love for his fiancee is even stronger than his "old fashioned" ideals; or he would not ask your advice, saying, "We are still so much in love that we cannot call the whole thing off."

Why classify a boy as a prig because he is experiencing a perfectly natural bewilderment at this sudden call to reconcile his finest instincts about his own and the girl's character with this startling new fact about her? . . . If the double standard of morality is wrong for women, why can't a man be granted as much right as his mother to revere chastity and sexual fidelity? Surely you are liberal enough to concede "H. O." as much right to be "natural," spiritually, as you concede the girl to be natural, biologically.

I think "H. O.," if given proper sympathy and guidance, is man enough to come through this experience with clearer vision and more (not less) peace in his heart. If this girl is the right one for him, a day will come when he will be thankful she told him the truth—thus proving that her Honor Balance is higher than that of many another girl who may never have an illicit love affair, yet is hardened against truth and decency in other important phases of human relationships.

Won't you print this for "H. O." to mull over? I am celebrating my twelfth wedding anniversary by writing this letter—my first, incidentally, to any editor! Sincerely yours, L. P. E.

Says Double Standard Must Always Prevail

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your articles usually seem to me to contain extraordinarily good sense; and to be of real value in the intricate affairs of modern life. But I have been abashed by my children (to whom I have often quoted you), pointing with great enjoyment to your remarkably tolerant attitude toward girls who have "erred" (to put it mildly); and yet seem to regard themselves (and to be considered by you) as being equally as desirable, matrimonially, as those who have managed to remain chaste.

In the latest case discussed (I refer to your column of June 13), you take a justifiably appalled young man to task for his shocked reaction to his fiancee's confession of a previous "affair." You consider that he shows great lack of faith in her. Well, just why should he have faith? She has demonstrated not only weakness of character; but also cunning, as witness her waiting until the eleventh hour before the wedding to salve her conscience with a belated and foolish confession—giving the young man no chance to retreat without shattering her reputation. What man wants that kind of a wife?

As for such lapses in general, the double standard, unfortunately, must always prevail—unless women choose to lower themselves to adopt that accorded to males. Nature herself seems to provide that women must pay for such transgressions; but in compensation, Nature (in making woman the guardian of her virtue), gives her, in normal cases, more natural resistance to this form of temptation. It is generally accepted that women's biological urge is less strong than man's.

As a happy and, I venture to say (with all due modesty), successful mother of a family of young people, I ask you to consider your responsibility and to use your very great influence to urge upon lonely and often adrift young people the necessity of self-control and self-respect. Tell girls that it is foolish—nay, fatal to a happy life either as wife, mother or even unmarried woman—to yield to such temptation.

M. A. B.

Correspondents Overlook 'H.O.'s' Leading Question

DEAR CORRESPONDENTS: What was the most significant question in "H. O.'s" letter? It appears you have overlooked it. That question was: "Can you help us in such a way as to repair all the damage that this (confession) has caused?" Your views and the manner in which you express them suggest that you are less concerned with helping "H. O" and his fiancee find happiness together than you are (1) eager to cast a strong vote in favor of chastity; and (2) anxious to forestall the possibility of lapses from rectitude, on the part of those near and dear to you.

To both of you, and also to "H. O.," I propose for consideration these words from St. Paul's letters to the Corinthians, thirteenth chapter, first to thirteenth verses: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

"Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up; Doth not behave itself unseemingly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked; thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

"Charity never faileth; . . . And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three: but the greatest of these is charity." M. H.

Definite Theme Is Needed In Decoration of Room

By Elizabeth MacRea Boykin

IF YOU really want the decorating secret, in a nutshell, of the too, too lovely rooms you see trip off from talented fingers, here it is—these rooms have a theme. That's why they get somewhere, instead of wandering all over the place as so many places do. Remember this the next time you have some redecorating on your mind—begin with an idea and keep it weaving in and out of your plans.

For example, Mrs. A. L., who is thinking about doing over her living room, asks for our help. Our answer is to begin with a garden theme, for here is what she has: a high back chair in a fine green, a flowered chair on a coral ground, a sofa, a love seat and easy chair to be slip covered. The walls will be repapered but the woodwork, painted in French gray with a greenish tinge, must stay as it is. There will be a new rug—and eventually new draperies. She likes the idea of a light rug, perhaps beige or sand or rose beige, but can't get anything that will clash with the present rust draperies which can't be replaced at once. The room is large and bright with five windows across the west front and two on the side facing north. That's why we suggest a garden motif for the room and this is how we'd achieve it—why not get a pale rug that is neutral really but toned with green. . . . really green-beige you could call it. Then select a misty light green wallpaper, a celadon green perhaps, without persistent pattern. For slip covers and draperies use a riotous floral on a pale green ground and swathe everything in it. For accent use accessories of green in all tones from pale to deep.

Mrs. K. R. writes: "I have a light blue bedroom—blue walls, a blue rug, mahogany furniture. What would you suggest for curtains and for spread? What chaise longue and accessories?"

Answer: Why not have the curtains in pale blue taffeta over lace net curtains, then a flowered sateen spread on a pale blue ground—something with wine red in the pattern. Have the chaise longue covered in plain light blue, then repeat the wine red in some of the cushions and have a quilted throw made of the flowered chintz. Have accessories of wine red.

Suds for Swim Suits

If last year's bathing suit smells musty after the long winter in a box or trunk, wash it lightly in cool soap suds, rinse, and dry. Bathing suits should be given a suds washing and rinse after every wearing to rid them of salt, sand, and soil.

Crown Princess Juliana Again Visits Capital, This Time With Consort

Fanfare Is at Minimum as Royal Couple Arrive; Spend Night at White House; Will Leave City Today

By Hope Ridings Miller

WITH SUCH A MINIMUM of fanfare that most persons waiting near Track 18, Union Station yesterday afternoon didn't even know royalty was expected, Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and Prince Consort Bernhard stepped off a train at 5:30 o'clock, to begin a 24-hour visit to Washington.

It's a "return engagement" for the Princess, who was here for a two-day visit last November; but it's Prince Bernhard's first trip to Washington. He made the most of it last night when he and the President had a long talk after dinner.

A few hours earlier he had begun his Capital experience in the traditional manner of facing a barrage of cameras, both at Union Station and at the White House. Receiving the royal visitors at the door of the Executive Mansion was Mrs. Roosevelt, who wore a sky blue shantung frock, cut on simple lines.

Later—at 7:30 p. m., to be exact—the President and the First Lady entertained at a dinner in honor of the royal couple, who were overnight guests at the Executive Mansion. The visit here was arranged hastily when, on advice of his physician, the President canceled a scheduled trip on which he was to meet Princess Juliana and Prince Consort Bernhard in Philadelphia and take them on to Hyde Park. The visitors were asked, instead, to come here. And they did.

Arriving with them in Washington yesterday were the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, Willem van Tete, private secretary; Mme. van Tete, lady-in-waiting to Princess Juliana; George Abell, press relations adviser, and a couple of Dutch detectives.

Greetings between the visitors and the small corps of officials on hand to meet them were brief and apparently to the point. Capt. John R. Beardall, the President's naval aide, and Stanley Woodward, Acting Chief of Protocol, were on the reception committee, as were several members of the Netherlands Legation staff, including the Counselor, Count van Rechteren Limpurg, and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg; Capt. J. E. Miejer Ranneft, Naval Attache, and the Commercial Counselor and Mme. J. H. Daubanton.

The princess, who seems to have taken on several pounds since her visit here a few months ago, wore a figured print frock in pastel green, blue and black; a silver fox cape and a small black hat. A black purse, with gloves to match, dangling earrings in a soft blue shade and a double-orchid corsage completed her costume.

Much more attractive than any of his photographs indicate, is Prince Bernhard in person. Youthful (his thirtieth birthday falls on June 29), he has clear-cut features and an engaging smile. Yesterday he wore a dark brown suit with a soft-collared white shirt, an English club tie and brown suede shoes, with a Homburg hat. A white carnation (I understand that's his favorite flower) stemmed from his lapel.

With other members of the party he obligingly posed for photographs, but the eyes behind his rimless spectacles looked right over the heads of the ring of cameramen, both at Union Station and at the White House. "I've always wanted to see Washington," he commented quietly to a member of the Legation staff, and obviously he was losing no time in viewing as much of it as possible.

Prince to Meet Press Today

Princess Juliana and her husband will leave the White House this morning at 10 o'clock for the Netherlands Legation, and half an hour later Prince Bernhard will hold his first Washington press conference. At 1:15 the visitors will be feted at a luncheon given by the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, and at 4:15 p. m. they will leave Washington en route back to Ottawa, where the Princess and her children have been living the past ten months.

Making a surprise flight across the Atlantic in a bomber not long ago, Prince Bernhard accompanied Princess Juliana on her recent trip to Holland, Mich.; Boston, Mass., and Princeton, N. J. Shortly before his departure from England he earned the honorary rank of wing commander in the British Royal Air Force. He is a licensed pilot.

Returning Soon To London

While the invasion of the Netherlands was on, Prince Bernhard took his wife and their two small daughters to London and then returned to the Netherlands, where he further distinguished himself in fighting in the Province of Zeeland. After the culmination of struggle the prince returned to London where, ever since, he has been an aide to Queen Wilhelmina as well as a ranking officer in the Netherlands Legion in England. He expects to return to London soon.

As head of the Prince Bernhard fund, he has had the personal satisfaction of receiving from Netherlanders in all parts of the empire voluntary contributions in excess of $6,000,000. This sum has been turned over for the purchase of 25 Hudson bombers and more than 90 Spitfires as a Netherlands public contribution to the Allied war cause.

Barbara Underhill Off to West Coast

Miss Barbara Underhill, daughter of Col. Underhill, U.S.M.C., and Mrs. Underhill, left yesterday for San Francisco where she will be a bridesmaid for her cousin, Miss Leslie Lockwood, of Berkeley. The bride-elect, a recent graduate of the University of California, will be married on Saturday to Robert Reynolds of San Francisco.

Miss Underhill will return by plane on Sunday to resume her work at the Navy Department.

New U.S. Envoy Is Honored

The Ambassador of Uruguay, Dr. Jose Richling, entertained at a luncheon in the Garbo room of the Shoreham yesterday in honor of William Dawson, newly appointed United States Ambassador to Uruguay. Mr. Dawson left his post as Minister to Panama to become this country's first Ambassador to Uruguay.

Among the guests were the Ambassador of Panama, Dr. Carlos Brin; the Uruguay Minister to Mexico, Dr. Hugo de Pena, who is vacationing in Baltimore; the adviser to the Secretary of State, Breckinridge Long; the political advisor to the Secretary of State, Lawrence Duggan; the director general of the Pan American Union, Leo S. Rowe, and members of the Uruguay military mission in the United States, Col. Hugo Molins, Lieut. Col. Medardo R. Farias and Capt. Gulio Cesar Poussin.

Also present were Stanley Woodward, Fernandez Artucio, the Secretary of the Uruguayan Embassy; Juan D'Aniello, Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank; Leon M. Pearson, Robert H. Patchin and Capt. Thomas L. Crystal, jr.

MRS. ROSS CAMPBELL SHAW

Bethlehem Chapel Ceremony Is Performed By Rev. C. L. Glenn

Masses of lilies on the altar of the Bethlehem Chapel of the National Cathedral formed the setting yesterday for the marriage of Miss Charlotte Jane Burchell to Ross Campbell Shaw. Miss Burchell is the daughter of Mrs. N. Landon Burchell, of 1808 Twenty-fourth Street, and Mr. Shaw is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Shaw, of Gladacres, Chester Springs, Pa.

The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Church, performed the ceremony. The bride, who was given in marriage by her guardian, C. F. R. Ogilby, wore antique ivory marquisette made with a sweetheart neckline and a full skirt ending in a fan shaped train. The bodice was beaded with pearls, which extended over the shoulders and down the sleeves, and beading also trimmed her tulle veil.

Her sister, Mrs. Earl McFarland, jr., was matron of honor, and Mr. Shaw's sister, Miss Nancy Marie Shaw, was maid of honor. They were attired in shell pink marquisette made with full skirts and wore hats trimmed with bands of shell pink tulle. Their flowers were old fashioned bouquets of roses and dephinium.

George F. Shaw was best man for his son and the ushers were Woodford Eames, of New York; Walter H. Hayden and Arthur P. Hayden, of Media, Pa.; Howard Murray, of Newtown Square, Pa., and Lieut. Earl McFarland, jr., of Fort Benning, Ga., brother-in-law of the bride.

A reception at Mrs. Buchell's home followed the ceremony. The bride's mother wore a frock of sea foam green crepe with a leghorn hat and corsage of orchids, and Mrs. Shaw had chosen a white dress with a blue hat and a corsage of orchids.

After a honeymoon at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., the couple will live in Princeton, N. J. As her going away costume the bride chose a soft blue gabardine suit with a matching hat and a cluster of gardenias.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Hayden, of Media, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Baker, Cynwyd, Pa.; Mrs. Fred A. Hoyt, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. S. Woodford Eames, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Greenwood, Newtown Square; Miss Charlotte Toland, Malvern, Pa.; Miss Joan Lucas, Paoli, Pa.; Miss Jean Welterald, Philadelphia, and Edward A. Parker III, of Philadelphia.

The bride attended Mount Vernon Seminary and the Potomac School and is a member of the Washington Junior League. Mr. Shaw studied at the Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia and is a member of the class of 1942 at Princeton University, where he is a student in chemical engineering.

McNarys Consider Trip

Senator and Mrs. Charles McNary have made tentative plans to go to their ranch in Oregon for the month of July. Their trip will depend on the course of events, and they are not definitely going to say goodby to their friends until the last minute.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Jan Ciechanowski, Polish Ambassador, will leave by plane today from Cuba to return to Washington. He recently presented his credentials to President Fulgencio Batista.

The South African Minister and Mrs. Ralph William Close were among the guests at the dinner given last night in Manhattan by the Associated Canadian Organizations of New York in honor of the Canadian Prime Minister. They are staying at the Plaza and will return on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes, jr., of Alexandria, are at the Savoy Plaza Hotel in New York.

Arthur Bradley Campbell has gone to California to spend the summer. Later he will visit Hawaii.

Dr. William Gerry Morgan has returned to Washington after a month in New Hampshire and at Dr. Arthur Christie's home in Maine. Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Myra Morgan Stump and Comdr. Charles Wellborn will go to New Hampshire June 25 for an indefinite stay.

Mrs. James Powell Clay and her son, Jimmy, have taken an apartment at 2301 Cathedral Avenue and will live in Washington while Commander Clay is on duty as assistant Naval Attache in London.

Capt. and Mrs. Frank W. Govern announce the birth of a son on June 15 at Carlisle Barraks, Pa. Mrs. Govern is the former Miss Patricia Wehr, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Arthur Wehr, of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hechinger and their daughter, Miss Lois Hechinger, have gone to New Haven, Conn., to attend the commencement at Yale University. Their son, John Hechinger, will be graduated.

China Relief Fete to Greet Luces in N. Y.

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, is among those who will welcome Mr. and Mrs. Henry Luce back from China at a big banquet tonight in New York. Aside from being a "welcome home" affair, the function is also a benefit for United China Relief.

Mr. Luce and his wife, Clare Boothe, the playwright, have only just returned from a trip to China. They visited Gen. and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek and gathered material for articles. The Luces made the trip by clipper.

Several other Washington officials are expected to attend tonight's dinner, among them Dr. Stanley Hornbeck of the State Department. Wendell Willkie, whose friends say he, too, will be off shortly for China, will serve as toastmaster. He will be host at a large cocktail party beforehand at the Waldorf-Astoria, where the banquet is being held.

Dr. Hu Shih will make a brief address at the function. He recently returned from Middlebury, Vt., where he was awarded an honorary degree at the commencement of Middlebury College.

Mary Taeusch To Wed in July

Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Taeusch announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary, to Edwin Huddleson, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin E. Huddleson, of Oakland, Calif. Mr. Huddleson is president of the Santa Cruz Fruit Packing Co., in California.

Miss Taeusch was graduated from Vassar College in 1939. She studied at the Sorbonne and the Institut d'Art et d'Archeologie of the University of Paris and recently has studied at the Corcoran School of Art.

Mr. Huddleson is a graduate of Stanford University, class of 1935, and of Harvard Law School in 1938. He was law clerk for Justice Frank Murphy and later was associated with the office of Solicitor General Biddle. He is now in the Army and is stationed at Fort Bragg.

The wedding will take place in July.

The performance will take place at 8:15 at the Chevy Chase Women's Club and funds will go to the British-American Ambulance Corps to buy vitamins for British children.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman will include Count and Countess Castellane, Gen. and Mrs. John M. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Walter West, Capt. and Mrs. Illarion Mishtowt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Price Wright, Mme. Griffin de Mauduit and Mrs. French Meyers.

Boothe-Klotz Nuptial in N. Y. Of Interest Here

Of interest to Washington was the wedding yesterday in New York of Miss Helene Klotz, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Herbert Klotz, of St. Moritz, Switzerland, and Carlton House, New York, to Gardner Lloyd Boothe, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Boothe, of Alexandria, Va. The ceremony took place at St. James' Episcopal Church, the Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan officiating, assisted by the Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church.

The bride was given by her father. Her gown of white satin was made with a fitted bodice, and with her tulle veil she wore another one of lace which had belonged to her mother. Her flowers were gardenias.

Miss Elizabeth Campbell, of New York, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids, also of New York, were Mrs. G. Keith Funston, Miss Gen Funston and Miss Margaret Polk Yates. They were dressed in pale yellow and carried delphinium and deep yellow roses.

Armistead Lloyd Boothe, of Alexandria, was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Anthony Drexel Duke, Pomeroy Tucker Francis, G. Keith Funston and Herbert W. Klotz, brother of the bride, all of New York; Thomas Livingston Turner, of Washington, and Joseph Nickerson, of Boston. A reception at the Ritz-Carlton followed the ceremony.

The bride was educated abroad and studied art at the National Gallery in London. Mr. Boothe was graduated from St. James' School, Maryland, and attended Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. He is a member of the Racquet and Tennis Club and is in business in New York.

Georgia Nordeen Will Be Married To E. L. Becker

Mrs. Heller Named District C. A. R. Head

By Lucia Giddens

Mrs. Frank Heller, of Washington, yesterday was named president of the District of Columbia Children of the American Revolution at a national board meeting over which the new national president, Mrs. Louise Moseley Heaton, of Clarksdale, Miss., presided for the first time.

At the same time Mrs. Robert V. H. Duncan, of Alexandria, was confirmed as State president of the C. A. R. for Virginia.

The board confirmed the following new national chairmen of committees: Exhibits, Mrs. Helen Wright Kim, Orange, N. J.; American Indian, Mrs. John Francis Weinmann, Little Rock, Ark.; correct use of flag, Mrs. J. F. Cassell, Staunton, Va.; C. A. R. grandmothers, Mrs. Thomas Smith, Summit, N. J.; C. A. R. grandfathers, Frank B. Steele, Washington, D. C.; C. A. R. Magazine editor, Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, Washingtotn, D. C.; cradle roll, Mrs. B. A. Stewart, Reedsville, Ohio.

Patriot education, Mrs. Longo; publicity, Miss Imogene Philbert, Washington; radio, Mrs. G. E. Price, LaGrange, Ohio; Red Cross, Miss Sue Handy, Manville, R. I.; Moore House, Yorktown, Va., Mrs. Weinmann; Tomb of the Unknown Revolutionary Soldier, Mrs. Josiah A. Van Orsdel, Beatrice, Nebr.; insignia and ribbon, Mrs. Harry Melville Howard, Washington; printing, Mrs. Ray E. Brown, Bethesda, Md.

After Mrs. Heller was confirmed as State president for the District, she received the ribbon of her office from Mrs. Carl H. Giroux, past president and the newly elected organizing secretary.

At the board meeting in Memorial Continental Hall Mrs. Heaton announced that Miss Alice Waldron, of Washington, junior national vice president of the C. A. R., will accompany her to two State conferences, in West Virginia and Ohio. Bill Berner, of East Orange, N. J., junior national president, also will attend.

The C. A. R. has expanded in the past year, with 58 societies having been admitted to the national organization between April 1, 1940, and last March 31. In the same period 2,618 members were added.

In attendance at yesterday's meetings were the following new officers of the National Board of Management: Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, Bethesda, Md., recording secretary; Mrs. Giroux, organizing secretary; Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, Washington, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ray E. Brown, Bethesda, Md., treasurer; Mrs. Catherine B. Strong, Washington, registrar; Mrs. Harry Melville Howard, Washington, historian; Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy, Grosse Point Farm, Mich., chaplain. National vice presidents in attendance were Mrs. Sidney H. Miner, New London, Conn.; Mrs. Willard I. Kimm, of Washington, honorary national president, also attended.

The new president, Mrs. Heaton, has a long record of activity in patriotic work. She was for eight years organizing president of the State of Mississippi Society of the C. A. R. and has served as national vice president.

She is now writing the history of the C. A. R. in Mississippi. She is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and numerous other societies, including Colonial Dames of America and United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Third Doll Tea in Series Is Held At New York Avenue Church

"I just have to buy my girl a toothbrush. She won't be content without one since going to those doll schools."

This was the remark of a mother of an 8-year-old child to the guests at the third in the series of doll teas held yesterday at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. It was repeated by Miss Etta Mai Russell, Juvenile Court worker for the Council of Church Women, illustrating that the "doll adoption" program carried on by the Council for the past three years serves a broader purpose than that of providing toys. The lessons in how to be good "mothers" to the dolls are carried home by the little girls who receive them, she said, and, in many cases, the results are far-reaching in improvnig care of the children in their homes.

Two hundred and sixty dolls were contributed yesterday by church women of the central area. Among them were countless baby dolls, Red Cross nurses, handmade calico rabbits, a sailor boy and his bride, which will go to two children from the same family, and twins, triplets and brother-and-sister dolls which are also given out to little girls of the same household.

Many of the dolls had notes from the women who dressed them to the children who would receive them, some with advice and others with only friendly greetings.

One of the women brought a "cry-baby" doll which, she said, she carried with great care on the bus to keep it from crying on the way down. She said she had been in Washington hardly a fortnight, but last week she read of the doll teas and promptly decided to have part in one.

Mrs. Clyde Reed, jr., chairman of the area, opened the program and introduced Miss Russell. Mrs. George Ross, president of the council, and Mrs. Harold B. Rogers, general chairman of the Juvenile Court department.

The dolls were arranged on eight tables with rose-covered tellises as a background. On one of the tables the setting was a park, with the dolls arranged as children playing around a lake, on which there were swans. The arrangement was one of the most elaborate that has been planned at any of the doll teas.

Mrs. Reed was assisted by Mrs. Raymond Hust, of New York Avenue Church; Miss Eva Conway and Mrs. Donald Woodward, of National City Christian Church, and Mrs. Dwight Terry and Mrs. George Cummer, of Calvary Baptist.

Maryland P-TA To Hear Visitor

"The Function of the Parent-Teacher Association in the Present World Situation" will be discussed by Mrs. Walter H. Buhlig, of Chicago, field secretary, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, Monday morning at the opening session of the Maryland State Parent-Teacher Conference at the University of Maryland.

Mrs. Buhlig has served as president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, associate editor of "Child Welfare Magazine," now the "National Parent-Teacher," chairman of the advisory committee to the National Publicity Division.

Miss Esther Lomb, of Washington, supervisor-teacher of weekday religious education, Council of Churches and Christian Education, will take part in a symposium on "What is a Character Education Program?" at the closing session of the conference Friday, June 27.

Self-Help House Garden Viewed By Church Unit

In spite of the rainy afternoon, guests at the tea of the Women's Volunteer Church Committee of the Washington Self-Help Exchange yesterday viewed the new garden at Self-Help House, 3213 Q Street.

The committee, headed by Miss Susan Craighill, provided the fund for the purchase of plants and shrubbery. Men who live at Self-Help House and work for scrip have planted and tended the garden and already several of them have been able to get self-supporting jobs after practising the gardening technique there on flowers, hedges and lawns.

Miss Rose Greely, landscape architect, advised in the laying out of the garden, which has now been planted with hollyhocks, petunias, larkspur, phlox, verbena and forsythia bushes.

The committee, whose secretary is Mrs. William M. Swift, and treasurer, Mrs. Jerome K. Lyle, invited former members and friends to the tea to see the transformation which has been made in the surroundings since the building became Self-Help House last November.

Other ways in which the committee has assisted the Self-Help Exchange include contribution of tools for use in the fuel wood project. It also provided a special paint for spools salvaged from the sewing room and strung together for children's toys. Several of the committee members serve as volunter interviewers for persons seeking work at the exchange.

HadassahGroup Hears Rabbi

Citizens of a democracy too often tend to allow logic to overshadow sentiment for their country and adopt an appeasement attitude in the face of obstacles, Rabbi Henry Segal, of B'nai Israel Congregation, said last night to the business and professional women's division of Hadassah.

Speaking on "Mind or Heart—Which?" at the officers' installation dinner at Wesley Hall, Rabbi Segal said that it was important for the Jew to build up a sentiment for a national home, rather than to reduce Zionist thinking too largely to strict logic.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

NO MATTER how far from the home town a girl may have come to take a job in Washington, the Capital offers plenty to do to keep her from being lonesome and having time on her hands.

The education department of the Y. W. C. A., for instance, recently issued a gaily decorated little announcement of the classes in its education department for the summer.

Classes in astronomy are being conducted by Bevan P. Sharpless of the Naval Observatory, on Wednesday evenings from 8:30 to 9:30 Mondays and Thursdays, there are morning classes from 11 to 12 and evening classes from 7 to 8 o'clock in flower arrangement, under Neal W. McCormack. For those interested in brushing up on stenography, there are classes in dictation Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, as well as in Gregg review, conducted by Dorothy Golladay Norris on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Alice Hutchins Drake, whose "Little Talks on Large Topics" always are popular, is giving a series of these again this season. "New Biographies" was the topic Monday of this week and "I Carry My Satchel Still" is that for next Monday night.

Dressmaking also is on the list, with a class on Thursdays from 10 to 12 a. m. or 7 to 9 p. m. There girls may learn to make good looking clothes for themselves, under the guidance of Valerie French Ward, who gives individual instruction to the class members.

Sketching classes are being conducted by Robert Ades Wednesday mornings and Saturday afternoons. Beginners in Spanish may enroll for language classes Monday and Thursday mornings and evenings.

In addition to all of these opportunities in the education department, for which a small fee is charged, there are also the clubs and other activities which offer recreation and a place to get acquainted.

COMPLETES COURSE—Another local chapter of the National Delphian Society has just completed the prescribed nine-year course of study embracing history, music, literature and art. The members celebrated the completion of their work with a luncheon last Wednesday at Woodward & Lothrop's Tea Room in honor of the retiring president, Mrs. C. B. Heinemann, following a visit to the National Gallery of Art.

The members included Mrs. H. B. Blanchard, Mrs. H. A. Burch, Mrs. William L. Evans, Mrs. G. W. Fike, Mrs. Frank Gillis, Mrs. I. W. Hufford, Mrs. William Liddle, Mrs. George Lilly, Mrs. Ellis Logan, Mrs. E. G. LeSteourgeon, Mrs. G. P. Rawley, Mrs. A. J. Schumacher, Mrs. Warren Spencer and Mrs. John Wright.

B.-P. W. Delegates To San Francisco Conclave Named

Delegates and alternates from the Business and Professional Women's Club here to the biennial convention of the club's National Federation, July 6-11, in Los Angeles, were announced yesterday by Mrs. Laura Waters, local president.

Miss Nelle Ingels and Mrs. Edith Eckert, who were originally elected as alternates have advanced to delegates. To fill one other vacancy among delegates who are unable to go, Mrs. Brownie Kerr was chosen at the board meeting this week.

The board named as alternates Miss Mae Murray, Miss Margaret Sweeney and Miss Lucetta Stockbridge.

Mrs. Waters will be chairman of the delegation to the convention.

Alumnae Entertain Academy Graduates

The 61 graduates of Notre Dame Academy were honor guests last night at a banquet given by the alumnae at the Willard Hotel. The Rev. Henri Wiesel, S. J., was the guest speaker, and Miss Anne Veihmeyer presided as toastmistress.

The program also included compositions by Miss Elizabeth Healy, which were sung by Miss Marilyn Koch and Miss Judy Klingenhagen, with Miss Healy at the piano and original skits presented by Miss Louise Murphy.

Columbia Chapter To Install June 30

Army Intends To Keep Ahead In Super Planes

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, June 17.—The Army Air Corps, it was learned today, has launched a long range program designed to perpetuate its present world superiority in the heavy bomber field.

It has quietly ordered a new "super bomber" which is expected to render obsolescent all present aircraft of this class in the next two or three years. It is a ship of vastly superior performances, intended to supplement, if not to replace, all the bombers now contemplated under the President's program.

The new plane is said to have progressed already from the drawing board to initial construction stages, although prototype models may not be ready to fly for two years. It is described as combining and surpassing the best features of the Army's latest four-engined bombers and of the admittedly obsolete Douglas B-19, which is still waiting to make its first test flight in California.

In other words, the ships planned as eventual replacements for all of the Boeing B-17's and Consolidated B-24's now on order for the Air Corps and the British Royal Air Force are expected to approximate the 7,000-odd miles maximum range of the 212-mile-an-hour Douglas B-19, yet have a top speed of at least 350 miles an hour, or substantially more than that of either the B-17 or the B-24. They could, if desired, carry out bombing raids against the continent of Europe from bases in Newfoundland, though the amount of fuel required for a round-trip trans-Atlantic flight would, of course, greatly reduce their tremendous bomb capacity on short flights.

The new ships will be generally similar to the new four-engined model 49 Lockheed transoceanic transport now being built for Pan American Airways which is expected to have a gross weight of about 86,000 pounds, fully loaded. They probably will be somewhat heavier than the model 49 but, like it, will be equipped with engines of at least 2,500 horsepower each, highly supercharged for maximum performance at the upper level altitudes where modern air fighting takes place.

Air Corps May Get More Autonomy

Copyright by New York Times

A major reorganization of the Army Air Corps to provide a greater degree of autonomy and to answer a growing popular demand for a separate air service is being planned by the War Department.

Present plans call for a greater degree of autonomy for the Army's flying units within the framework of the War Department. They do not contemplate the establishment of a third service having equal rank with the Army and Navy.

The new setup would coordinate all Army air activities under a single head. Grouped together they would be known as United States Army Air Forces and occupy within the framework of the War Department much the same autonomous position as that occupied by the Marine Corps within the framework of the Navy Department.

The deputy chief of staff for air would still act under orders of the Secretary of War, the Assistant Secretary of War for air, and the chief of staff, but under him would be grouped both the operating forces the present GHQ air force and the procurement, training and other functions, now exercised under the command of the chief of the air corps. Thus the air services of the Army now in one sense split would be united under the command of a flying officer.

Even more important, virtually an air general staff would be created.

A small intelligence section has been started and if the present plans are finally approved this section would be enlarged and would be in a sense independent of G-2 or the present intelligence section of the general staff. A war-planning section would also be set up for the Army's flying service under the planned reorganization.

Aid Arriving, Says Capt. Roosevelt

Lisbon, June 17 (U.P.).—Capt. James Roosevelt said at a press conference today that "United States war material is coming through in Egypt and the United States will do its best to help the British."

Smiling and cheerful, young Roosevelt received the Portuguese and foreign press at noon at the United States Legation in the presence of United States Minister Bert Fish. He is en route home from the Middle East.

Canada in War for Freedom, Mackenzie King Declares

By the Associated Press

New York, June 17.—The Canadian Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, declared tonight that Canada went to war because "we saw clearly that Canadian freedom, that North American freedom, was one with British freedom."

In his first major speech in this country since the war started, he took occasion to reply to criticism that Canada demanded cash for her aid to the mother country.

He told the Associated Canadian Organizations of New York in a prepared address broadcast by N. B. C. and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, that such criticism overlooked the fact that the Dominion's direct war effort was entirely at her own expense and was in addition to huge credits advanced as well as Canada's contribution in human lives.

Greeted by Wallace

Vice President Henry A. Wallace, welcoming the prime minister in behalf of the United States, asserted that Mackenzie should receive a degree "of captain of the keepers of the bridge, for that is what you represent to us."

"It has been asserted," Mackenzie King said, "that Canada is demanding cash on the barrelhead for its aid to Britain' and that 'Canada still sells to Britain for cash at a profit,' while the United States is leasing and lending to Britain.

"Such a statement ignores entirely Canada's direct participation in the war at her own expense. It takes no account whatever of what we are contributing in human lives, as well as in those material things which it is possible to lease or lend.

"If our war effort is to be construed as a contribution to Britain, rather than what in reality it is—our contribution to the common cause of freedom, the 'cash on the barrel-head' statement overlooks the fact that the whole of Canada's direct war effort is a contribution which is neither leased nor lent, but is an out and out free-will offering—a gift to the hard-pressed people of Britain, gladly and proudly made, to assist them in maintaining the world's citadel of freedom, and in fighting freedom's battles in other parts of the world . . ."

Committees Named

Copyright by New York Times

Plans for speeding collaboration between the United States and Canada for utilizing their resources in greater degree in order to aid Great Britain and strengthen the defenses of the Western Hemisphere will be pressed by joint economic committees appointed by the two governments yesterday.

The committees will explore the possibility of a greater degree of economic cooperation between the two countries both during the war and in the postwar period.

The United States committee consists of William L. Batt, member of OPM; Harry D. White, director of monetary research of the Treasury; Prof. Alvin H. Hansen, of Harvard University, who is connected with the Federal Reserve System, and E. Dana Durand, member of the United States Tariff Commission. A. A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, will participate in the committee deliberations as occasion may render desirable.

The Canadian committee consists of R. A. C. Henry, of the department of munitions and supply; Prof. W. A. Mackintosh, special adviser to the department of finance; J. G. Bouchard, of the department of agriculture, and Alex Skelton, head of the research division of the Bank of Canada. H. L. Keenleyside, of the department of external affairs, will sit with the committee from time to time.

Leroy D. Stinebower will serve as liaison officer from the State Department, and similar officer will be designated from the Canadian department of external affars.

Municipal Strikers Reject Work Plea

McKeesport, Pa., June 17 (AP).—Striking municipal employes tonight rejected a proposal of 74-year-old Mayor George H. Lysle to return to work while "council seeks some means" of meeting their demands for higher wages.

Alex Paul, president of Local 306 of the C. I. O. State, County and Municipal Workers of America, said the vote was 146 to 2 against acceptance and that the union demands it be recognized as a collective bargaining agency and that promises of more pay be "more specific."

Trash, meanwhile, is piling up in streets and alleys and garbage is accumulating in restaurants, hotels and private residences.

Only 12 of 30 Draft Appeals Win Deferment

More than half the Selective Service registrants who brought their cases before the District Board of Appeals for reclassification during June were either turned down or their papers returned to the local boards for additional information, local draft headquarters disclosed yesterday.

Thirty appeal cases in all were reported by the board. Twenty-two of these requested reclassification from Class 1-A (available for immediate military service) to Class 3-A (deferred for dependency). Of this group only two, a War Department clerk and a bricklayer, were granted such deferrment.

Nine of the remaining 20 were retained in their original classification of 1-A; 7 were returned to local boards for additional information; 1 case was held over, and 3 were reclassified to Class 2-A (occupational deferment).

Seven registrants asking to be changed from Class 1-A to Class 2-A were granted such occupational deferment. Included in this group were three members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a student, an auditor in the General Accounting Office, an owner of a weather-strip business holding defense contracts and an English and Latin teacher.

Raymond M. Brannon, 907 U Street Northwest, who was classified by his local board as a conscientious objector, appealed for reclassification as an ordained minister. He is now employed as a radio serviceman and his case was referred to the District Attorney's office.

Meanwhile, the War Department announced yesterday that Selective Service trainees will be permitted to volunteer as parachute troopers after their 13-week training period at Infantry replacement centers was completed. Previously, parachute service was restricted to Regular Army soldiers. Only those who have been trained in replacement centers will be allowed to voluntere for this service, it was said.

This morning 112 white and 61 colored registrants will leave Washington for induction centers at Richmond and Baltimore, respectively. The last group to be inducted this month under the June quota will be on June 19 and 20, with 68 colored registrants reporting each day.

Names of men to be inducted today, together with the highest order number from each local board, follow:

The Gallup Poll

Public by 3 to 1 Majority Favors Legislation Forbidding Membership in Communist Party

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 17.—Legislation forbidding membership in the Communist Party—a step which would be tantamount to outlawing the party—is approved by a majority of approximately 3 to 1 in a Nationwide survey of American voters.

Whether such an extreme step is ever taken, of course, may depend on the outcome of current investigations of the Communist Party's role in U. S. defense strikes, the degree to which the party takes its orders from a foreign government, and other factors.

But the survey makes it clear that the average American has little sympathy for the Communist Party and its program—though that party has often presented itself as the spokesman of "the people."

7 Per Cent Are Undecided

Voters in a carefully selected cross-section of the 48 States were asked:

"Do you think membership in the Communist Party in this country should be forbidden by law?"

For the Nation as a whole the answers were:

Believe Membership Should be Forbidden	71%
Believe Should Not be Forbidden	22
Undecided	7

Though it may upset a good many preconceived ideas of the Communists themselves, the survey indicates that the upper income groups tend to be more tolerant of the party—as a political party—than the lower income-groups, where Communist ideology might be expected to make the largest number of converts. In the upper income-group 28 per cent opposed a ban on the party, 16 per cent in the lower income-group.

Analysis By Incomes

	Forbid	Don't Forbid	Undec.
Upper Income Group	70%	28%	2%
Middle Income Group	71	24	5
Lower Income Group, Including Persons on Relief	72	16	12

Though the survey found a substantial number of persons unwilling to ban the party, almost invariably their reasons are traceable to deep-seated convictions about freedom of speech and freedom of association, rights guaranteed by the Constitution, rather than to actual sympathy with the party itself.

Typical of this point of view was the comment: "I don't believe in Communism, but our country was founded on the idea that a man can believe as he pleases. You can't beat an idea by driving it underground, but only by putting up a better argument—in this case, by proving our way of life is better."

Many voters added, however, that it was one thing to advocate a radical political theory and quite another to "sabotage defense." If the latter were proved in connection with the Communists, they felt, it would be right to take steps against them.

U. S. Birth Rate Nears Germany's

A national birthrate for 1941 of about 18.5 per 1,000 population is indicated by reports received by the Census Bureau, the bureau announced today. This is the highest rate since 1930 and approaches the last reported birthrate for Germany. That was 18.8 per 1,000 in 1937.

About 20,000 more babies were born in the United States during the first four months of this year than in the corresponding period last year, according to J. C. Capt, director of the census.

It had previously been reported that the long-range tendency of the national birth rate was downward. However, Dr. Halbert L. Dunn, chief statistician for vital statistics, Bureau of the Census, said that "if another forecast were made, using the current indices, it would be found that the Nation's population is now being reproduced at a greater rate than in the last decade and that there will be an increase of about 7 per cent in population per generation."

1-Legged Convict Ends Sitdown

He Wanted Speed

Army paperwork, growing as the Army grows, has produced an example of what it calls "ingenuity."

Out at Fort Belvoir, an officer found that letters distinguished by red borders and marked "Immediate" were receiving no more attention than ordinary letters. To those requiring prompt action he attached a green card with the word "Frantic."

A cushion fell off—fluttering gold notes—$180 worth in tens and twenties. The auctioneer turned it over to the administrator and went on selling. The chair sold for $2.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

U. S. Plans to Move Some Units From D. C.

• President Roosevelt said yesterday at his press conference that it appeared that some agencies would have to be moved from Washington to make room for expanding defense bureaus. He emphasized, however, that there had been no determination of any individual bureau, or unit to be moved. Asked to comment on a letter sent him from the House Interstate Commerce Committee that opposed the transfer of the ICC, the President said he didn't know why the committee had sent the letter without checking up on the report. Who picked the poor old ICC to be moved, the President commented, he didn't know.

The President said he understood that the ICC Organic Act required its principal office to be here and he indicated that legislation would be necessary to shift the agency. However, some of his advisers disagree with him on that point. They believe the President has the authority to order the shift but that an office must be retained here.

It's a fact, however, that ICC is one of the many agencies here being studied by the Budget Bureau as a possibility for being decentralized. Budget Bureau sent out questionnaires to most all departments and agencies last week and one of the questions asked was: "Why can't your agency move from Washington?" The questionnaires are due back at the Budget Bureau Friday. It's presumed that they will be analyzed and a list of agencies recommended for removal will be given to the President for his O. K.

At Agriculture it's known, for example, that serious consideration is being given to the transfer to Philadelphia of the seventh regional office of the Forest Service which is located at 724 Ninth Street Northwest. The office serves many surrounding States, and officials say there isn't any particular reason why it should be located here. Some thought is understood to have been given to the merging of the regional office with a field office of the Farm Security Administration at Darby, Pa., which is near Philadelphia. The Forest Service office here has more than 300 employes.

St. Louis Building Option

Meantime, the Government has taken an option on the huge Mart Building in St. Louis, which has led to reports that the Railroad Retirement Board and the Farm Credit Administration will be moved there. The Army has the option on the Mart Building and it plans to use it as a supply depot. Also, many letters have been received at the executive offices here who want to be moved back in the States. Most of the letters, no doubt, are from new employes who haven't got settled here.

E. C. Smith, jr., has been appointed director of WPA's Project Control Division. He replaces Frank A. March, who resigned to accept a position at the Budget Bureau . . . Alfonso Smith, one of the city's rankins tennis stars who is an Agriculture information specialist, leaves today for active naval service in the Caribbean . . . Coast Guard is setting up a new division of reports and statistics. Frank Eldridge probably will head it up . . . Employes report pressure is being placed on them to contribute to the USO.

Senate and House conferees on the Interior appropriation bill have agreed on a 1942 appropriation of $3,200,000 for the Bituminous Coal Commission, which will allow the agency to hire approximately 200 additional employes. The conferees also agreed on $170,000 for the General Land Office which will permit it to hire additional help . . . Justice's Criminal Division has been shaken up by Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge. William W. Barron has been made chief of the new section of indictments and pleadings. Henry W. Schweinhaut is the new chief of the commercial frauds section; Oscar A. Prevost has been made chief of the appellate section, and Victor W. Rotnem is chief of the civil rights section.

Representative Gore has stymied temporarily the bill that would give police authority to building guards and raise their salaries to decent levels. The guards are now paid around $100 a month. The bill would raise the entrance salary for guards to $1,500 and they would be guaranteed a raise of $100 a year until they reached $1,900. Representative Lanham explained that the bill would merely place the guards on the same basis as Park Police but Gore insisted on objecting.

Senate Unit Sets Hearing On D.C. Fund

Commissioners, Department Heads To Testify Today On Amendments

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee at 10 a. m. today will begin hearings on the House-approved District budget bill in an effort to complete Congressional action on the measure before July 1, beginning of the new fiscal year.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the District Appropriations Subcommittee, said the District Commissioners and several department heads would appear today to explain proposed amendments to the 1942 supply bill.

The heads of the District government are expected to request restoration of several of the items stricken from the bill by the House District Appropriations Committee, which reduced the budget total by approximately $1,000,000. The House on Monday approved the $52,547,061 outlay recommended by its appropriation committee.

Overton declined to estimate the duration of hearings before his subcommittee, but said that in order to conserve time all witnesses would be requested to avoid repetition of testimony already given before the House committee.

With this understanding, he said, the Senate subcommittee will receive testimony from representatives of civic groups, as well as from District officials.

Overton said the subcommittee would admit the press to the budget hearings, which is rarely done when a Congressional committee is considering an appropriation bill. He said that since Washington was "voteless," he thought it particularly important that citizens be given full day-to-day information on the progress of the measure.

2,000 Receive Diplomas in 13 D. C. Schools

More than 2,000 students received diplomas and certificates yesterday at 13 commencement exercises in District public schools. They comprise almost one-third of the students graduating this week.

At the Eastern High School graduation yesterday morning, David Allison Rhodes, class president, was presiding officer. Rene Agatha Honey gave the valedictory address. Awards were presented by Charles Hart, principal of the school. The George Westinghouse scholarship to the Carnegie Institute of Technology went to Anthony Bernard Marmo and David Allison Rhodes won a scholarship to Princeton University. Two scholarships to George Washington University were awarded to Rene Agatha Honey and James Edward Huddleston.

Anacostia Awards

At the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School commencement last night, Elizabeth Talbott and Gerald Simmerman won the American Legion citizenship awards. C. Melvin Sharpe, member of the Board of Education, addressed the graduates.

At the Langley Junior High School exercises last night, Harold Clark, director of vocational education, was the presiding officer. Patricia Frances Delbridge, president of the class, gave the welcoming address.

Students of the Macfarland Junior High School presented a pageant called "Appreciate America" at their graduation. American Legion citizenship awards were won by Donald Kolodne and Doris Mae Owens. Barbara Marie Harris and Reed Frank Maier were the recipients of D. A. R. prizes.

Charles Garfield Eichler was named as the student with highest scholarship at the Paul Junior High School graduation yesterday afternoon. Diplomas were presented by Miss Jessie LaSalle, assistant superintendent of schools.

Stuart Junior Program

At the Jefferson Junior High School exercises, Portia Spiridopoulos won the citizenship award. Helen Hansher was valedictorian.

Other American Legion citizenship prizes were given as follows at these schools: Gordon Junior High, Munson Lane, jr., and Sallie Fort; Eliot Junior High School, Doris Williams, John Preston and Herbert Penskie; Dennison Vocational School, Doris Winters.

Theme of the graduation exercises at Gordon Junior High School was "Democracy and Youth." Speeches were given by members of the graduating class. Elizabeth Rosser and Bryan Bell, jr., received G. A. R. awards.

Today's graduation exercises have been scheduled as follows:

White—10:30 a. m., Randall; 2 p. m., Deal, Powell; 4:30 p. m., Roosevelt, Western; 5 p. m., Woodrow Wilson; 8 p. m., Central and McKinley.

Colored—2:30 p. m., Shaw, and 8 p. m., Dunbar.

Terry's Creator Gets Defense Job

Terry and the Pirates have been called to do their part for national defense.

More precisely, the creator of Terry, Burma, the Dragon Lady and other characters in The Post's famous comic strip has started work on a special job of illustrating material for Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, director of the Office of Civilian Defense.

The artist, Milton Caniff, reported here for duty yesterday. The exact nature of the illustrations on which he is working was not disclosed.

C. T. I. Graduates—Robert Norton and Julia Maxine Price, graduates of Columbia Technical Institute, receive their diplomas from Capt. John H. Donoghue, U. S. Army Engineer Corps. Commencement exercises were staged last night at the Shoreham Hotel

Columbia Tech Graduates 250 Men, 30 Women

"A plumber can get along without professors but professors cannot get along without a plumber," said Capt. John H. Donoghue of the Army War College, in stressing the value of a technical education to the 250 men and 30 women who were graduated from the Columbia Technical Institute last night in the Shoreham Hotel.

"I have more faith in you than if I were talking to a group of university graduates," the captain told the class. "You have learned to use your hands and your heads. I am afraid of what would happen if we turned our Army over to a doctor of philosophy."

Sixty graduates were not present at the ceremony last night because they were on night shifts in Government defense work, Principal Paul J. Leverone later told the students and their guests. Approximately 75 per cent of the graduates have already been placed in Government and private positions, he said. More than 100 graduates are now working in the Army War College.

The graduates were presented for their certificates by L. E. Reed, dean of the school's engineering department, and the valedictory was given by Robert Norton of the aeronautical class. Norton also received a gold insignia pin for highest scholarship.

Capt. Donoghue, who awarded the diplomas, was assisted by Gordon Malcolm, registrar of the school, and Joseph Symanoskie, auditor.

Miss Armstrong Gets Radcliffe Degree Today

Miss Charlotte Orr Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Syng Armstrong, 3113 Woodley Road, receives a bachelor of arts degree in English today from Radcliffe College, Cambridge, Mass.

Miss Armstrong

Miss Armstrong is a member of Idler, the college dramatic club, and the Choral Society.

Master of arts degrees will be awarded by the graduate school to two other Washingtonians, Miss Margaret Wyman, daughter of Mrs. H. S. Wyman, 3612 Newark Street, and Miss Helen R. Steel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Steel, 4422 Lowell Street. Miss Wyman's field is history, Miss Steel's astronomy.

Ritenour Elected To Controllers

Election of O. H. Ritenour, controller of the Washington Gas Light Co., as president, was announced yesterday by the District of Columbia Control, Controllers Institute of America.

He was chosen at a meeting at Exedra, Purceville, Va., home of Franklin H. Kenworthy, outgoing president.

1,000 Colored in 6 Schools Here Get Diplomas, Awards

More than 1,000 colored students were graduated from six District high schools, junior high schools and vocational schools in Washington yesterday.

Commencement exercises of the Armstrong and Cardozo High Schools were held last night in their respective auditoriums. The principal address at Armstrong was made by James C. Evans, vocational training assistant of the OPM. Mrs. Velma Williams, member of the Board of Education, presided. Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools, announced the following awards:

Howard University $150 scholarship, Anita G. Ford; Anna L. Costin scholarship, Jean Southall; Charles Bailey industrial arts prizes, Ralph V. Newberry, Jean Southall; Phi Delta Kappa award, Anita Ford; Kober prize, Alvajeanne Foster; Walker medal, Robert Lineberger; American Legion award, Anita Ford; Optimists Association medal, Robert Lee Twitty.

Diplomas were presented at the Cardozo High School by Col. West A. Hamilton, member of the Board of Education. Honors were awarded by Dr. Wilkinson. Mary Ellen Melvin received a $200 Cardozo faculty scholarship prize. Eunice Cecilia Johnson and Mary Gurry were valedictorians.

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, director of the Division of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration, addressed the graduates of the Margaret Murray Washington Vocational School yesterday afternoon. Outstanding vocational student and winner of the Northeast Women's Civic Association prize was Dennie Lee Cotmon.

At Browne Junior High Schools commencement yesterday, Gloria Tapscott was valedictorian and Doris Haizlit was salutatorian.

Juanita Brent received honorable mention for highest scholarship at Francis Junior High School, and Cozette Carter and Joseph Minor won the American Legion awards at their graduation yesterday.

Mary Magdalene Dixon was valedictorian and Rita Ann Buckner was salutatorian at yesterday's exercises at Banneker Junior High School.

Keystone Board Urges Cafeteria Traffic Court

The advisory board of the Keystone Automobile Club last night urged establishment of a "cafeteria court," by which traffic offenders could plead guilty, waive trial and accept a uniform penalty without having to appear in court.

Other high lights of the 16-point program adopted by the organization include agitation for removal of the traffic menace at the Georgia Avenue underpass, opposition to the proposed downtown parking ban, advocacy of more playground facilities and reexamination of drivers involved in personal injury accidents.

The platform opposes an increase in the gasoline tax for new highway projects, diversion of motor vehicle tax funds and creation of traffic vigilantes.

It advocates removal of the ban on driving to left of streetcar loading platforms, increase of police personnel, selective enforcement of the traffic laws, the antinoise drive, use of more visible street signs, continuance of safety education program, improvement of park roads, establishment of staggered hour and pay days.

Montgomery Blair Exercises Tomorrow

Two hundred and twenty-seven graduates of Montgomery Blair Senior High School, Silver Spring, will receive their diplomas tomorrow at 8 p. m. at commencement exercises in the Silver Spring Armory.

F. K. Metzger of the board of education will present the diplomas.

Cab Driver Held By Coroner's Jury

Charles O. Hadenfeld, 61-year-old cab driver, was ordered held for grand jury action yesterday by a coroner's jury investigating the death of Mrs. Wilhelmina C. Wetzel, 77, of 1343 Monroe Street Northwest.

Mrs. Wetzel, a pedestrian, was knocked down by Hadenfeld's taxicab at Fourteenth Street and Park Road Northwest June 10. She died at Emergency Hospital last Saturday.

It was testified at the inquest that the taxicab, traveling to the left of a streetcar loading platform, struck the woman as she alighted from the platform.

Md. Fugitive Caught; Pleads Homesickness

Hagerstown, Md., June 17.—Herman Paulsen, 25, who escaped from the State penal farm near here last Friday night, was apprehended at his home at McKeesport, Pa., yesterday and was returned to Baltimore today to complete his original sentence. Paulsen told officers he had become homesick and intended to return to the penal farm after spending a few days with his folks.

Woman Balks Own Lawyer At Her Trial

Mary Sibley Clashes Twice With Attorney; Tells of Marriage To Murdered Man

Mary Elizabeth Sibley, 26, who is on trial for her life in the District Court, clashed twice with her own lawyer yesterday.

Miss Sibley is accused in the fatal shooting of Oscar Rush, 42, at 1234 Good Hope Road last September 16.

Between spats, Defense Counsel Charles E. Ford announced that the defense would be accidental shooting. The evidence would prove, he said, that Miss Sibley took her pistol out of her handbag to show it to two friends of Rush and that it went off by accident.

Assistant District Attorney John L. Laskey said Miss Sibley planned and premeditated the death of Rush and indicated he would ask the one woman and 11 men on the jury for the death penalty.

Since she went on trial Monday morning before Justice Jesse C. Adkins, Miss Sibley has followed the testimony closely. Scores of times she would prod Ford with a pencil, to get his attention for her comments.

Yesterday, John A. Milburn, a Government witness, testified that he had not seen Miss Sibley the night before the killing, when she is declared to have been with the victim. She began clapping her hands at this testimony.

Ford asked for a recess and he and his client exchanged several intense remarks, which could not be heard away from the counsel table. Miss Sibley was led away, highly upset, murmering, "Oh, God!"

She was more composed when she came back. Later she took the stand and for nearly two hours told the jurors how she was married to Rush the night she met him in 1938, although she was at that time already married to Wallace Pruitt, once a candidate for Congress and now a Navy Department employe. Both she and Rush were drunk, she said.

Following the illegal marriage to Rush, she said, she came back to Washington and got a job. Ford asked her three times where she got the job and each time she said: "I don't want to say. I don't think it is important.' When Ford pressed the question, Miss Sibley snapped, "I don't remember."

Most of Miss Sibley's testimony concerning beatings she said Rush gave her when he was drunk. She told her story without interference from Prosecutor Laskey, who asked an occasional clarifying question. He took extensive notes.

Ford had indicated in questioning prospective jurors Monday that he would seek to show that the shooting was manslaughter, rather than murder. The indications were that Miss Sibley insisted upon claiming the shooting was an accident, as she made several emphatic statements in a whispered conference with her lawyer just before he made his opening address.

Want the Time? Dial DI. 2525

Dial District 2525 and a musical feminine voice will give you the time—but no date.

The time teller is called an "audichron girl." She's made of machinery, consequently no dates.

The lady, brought to town by Hecht Co., can handle 10,000 calls an hour and never a discourteous word. She's on duty 24 hours a day, and no wage-hour law is violated.

Oh yes. And she gives interesting intelligence on what the department store is selling.

Defense Housing Contract Let For 200 Units in Anacostia

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING of "Stoddert Dwellings," to be constructed near Ridge and Anacostia Roads Southeast

Award of a $742,104 contract for construction of a 200-dwelling community in Anacostia for national defense workers was announced last night.

The Federal Works Agency revealed that the District Alley Dwelling Authority will act as its agent in the project, under the Lanham Act, which makes funds for defense housing available through FWA.

To be known as Stoddert Dwellings, in memory of the first Secretary of the Navy, the homes will adjoin the Alley Dwelling Authority's Fort Dupont Dwellings near Ridge and Anacostia Roads Southeast. The land is owned by ADA and was originally bought by the Public Works Administration several years ago.

The community will be built by the Construction Engineering Corporation of Baltimore. The contract price includes cost of street grading, utilities and other facilities. It is provided that the dwellings be completed within 120 days.

They will be of frame construction, except for those fronting on East Capitol Street. These will be of brick. The houses will contain from one to three bedrooms. Occupancy probably will be by civilian employes of the Navy Yard.

Ross Wins Contract to Build First Unit of Central Library

A contract for construction of the first unit of the new Central Library on Pennsylvania Avenue between John Marshall Place and Sixth Street was awarded yesterday by the Commissioners to the Ross Engineer Co.

The Ross bid was $894,165. Work will be started in about 10 days and the contractor was given 480 days to complete the four-story building.

The Leo Butler Co. was awarded a contract to begin preliminary work on the proposed grade separation structure at Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest.

The concern's contract price was $248,995.55 to widen and replace the railroad trestles which cross Maine Avenue just east of the Fourteenth Street intersection. This job comes under the Federal grade crossing elimination program and will be paid out of Federal funds.

New directors were elected yesterday by the Better Business Bureau at its annual meeting, held at the Willard Hotel.

They are F. G. Addison, jr., C. A. Aspinwall, Edward C. Baltz, Meyer Barnett, Hulbert T. Bisselle, Y. E. Booker, Everett J. Boothby, B. B. Burgunder, George B. Burrus, Lee D. Butler, John H. Davis, Charles B. Dulcan, jr., Joshua Evans, jr., Ralph L. Goldsmith, Miss Margaret Gollan, Gerald D. Grosner, James W. Hardey, J. J. Hasley, Col. Leroy Herron, R. B. H. Lyon, L. P. McLachlen, E. D. Merrill, Charles Carroll Morgan, Arthur G. Newmeyer, Thornton W. Owen, William N. Payne, jr., John A. Reilly, Herbert J. Rich, Charles A. Robinson, H. L. Rust, jr., Charles H. St. John, Andrew Saul, C. Melvin Sharpe, C. G. Sheffield, Frederick P. H. Siddons, Arthur J. Sundlun, Harry E. Ullman, F. Reid Wallace, Henry E. Woscester and Dewey Zirkin.

Miss Sheriff Wed To Missionary

With ten of her high-school-age wards serving as bridemaids and ushers, Miss Pauline Sheriff, one of the house mothers at the District Baptist Children's Home in Bethesda, was married last night to the Rev. Stephen P. Jackson, of Clayton, Ga.

The ceremony was performed at the National Baptist Memorial Church, Sixteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest, by its pastor, Dr. Gove G. Johnson.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

O'DONNELL'S FARMS, the countryside home of "plantation dinners," will open for the summer Saturday evening. Massa Tom O'Donnell is also figgeratin' on some real "plantation entertainment"—right from New York's Harlem, to go along with the dinners. The names weren't exactly on the dotted line at the moment of writing, but you may expect to see the Harlem Plantation Syncopators, a lively crew of sepias, on the O'Donnell's Farms bandstand. They'll all wear deep South costumes . . . The Farms will be open from noon until after midnight every day in the week, with entertainment in the evenings.

Maurice and Cordoba, one of the country's most notable dance teams, will appear on the Shoreham Terrace next week in a sequence of Pan-American specialties. Here's hoping they do the spectacular numbers they've presented in the cinema.

A JULY TREAT will be the opening of an open-air terrace and restaurant at Washington's new airport. Here you will be able to dine luxuriously while watching the big airliners take off and come nosing down. The question of music and dancing at the airport hasn't been settled yet because there's some doubt about how much the roar of planes would interfere with an orchestra. But room for dancing and a bandstand are available and it's more than possible that such gayeties will bloom in cooler weather when the restaurant windows will be closed. A tentative opening date of July 1 has been set and it's hoped that the necessity for Government defense priorities on material will not require a postponement of the restaurant's debut. At any rate, it'll open some time in July.

MUSICIANS' MOVES. Arsenio Ralon and his glistening violin cadenzas are back in the Madrillon luncheon sessions. Arsenio had a long and serious session at Mount Alto Hospital but is again as brisk as a bobolink . . . Bob Stickney, formerly with the Troika and Earle Theater orchestras, is now doing solo pianistics at the Silver Fox.

THRILLER-DILLERS. "Sitting in the Shoe Shine Shop," a slick bit of Dixie rhythm being put out by Don Taylor of Restaurant "823" . . . "Yours," as sung by Matt Windsor and Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, will give you delightful shivers especially when Eileen gets away down in the indigo notes . . . And when the Mayfair's Chordsmen add swing furbelows to "Old Kentucky Home" you'll feel like getting up and cutting a pigeonwing . . . For pure and undiluted glamor, take a listen to Eve Knight caroling "Argentine Skies" in the King Cole Room. It was written just for her by Maestro Hughie Barrett . . . And for the essence of tinkling charm, bend an ear to Bert Bernath's arrangement of "Toy Piano Minuet" in the Pall Mall Room.

JEANNETTE CAMPBELL, of WJSV, who'll be the guest of honor at Glen Echo's "California Night" this evening

Rodd Raffell, of the Nightingale, is planning a new sextet in soft swing. It'll be a "band within a band," feature what Rodd inspiredly calls "the five version of chamber music."

HORTICULTURAL DEPARTMENT. Jimmy Summerville, leader of Hi Hat's Four M's, says that the huge bouquet of vegetables he was handed at a recent party in his honor was the nicest present he's ever received. "I took it home and made a wonderful salad," he says . . . Leader Milton Davis, of the Rainbow room, who's a rose fancier on the side, claims he's reared a rose of such a dark red that it looks black under electric light.

SUICIDE ON SUNDAY seemed understandable after we'd looked at the copy of "Gloomy Sunday" owned by the Plymouth's Michel. This is the famous song banned by the Austrian government because so many people listened to it and went home and turned on the gas without lighting it. The song's morbidity lies in the lyrics, not the music.

STARLIGHT PERSONNEL. For those folks who've been asking the names of lads in Dick Wilson's band on the Starlight Roof. They're Accordionist Johnny Meklus, Saxist Jack Condon, Pianist Sylvester Sprague, Drummer Billy Hill and Bassist Wally Shulan. You're verra welcome.

 Don Baker, leader of the Neptune Room's new Musicomics, is one of the huskiest maestros who've come to town. He looks like a combo of Barnee, of the Shoreham; Maxie Baer and Tom Mix. He has dimples, too!

CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS DUE. Some of the pleasantest dance music around town is being presented by the Lotus Continentals who include Violinist Harry Albert, Accordionist Eddie Whitesel and Guitarist Jack Norman. Their soft string harmonies contrast admirably with the vibrancy of Bill Strickland's band . . . While Jack Schafer's hot trumpet dominates the Casino Royal picture late in the evening, you'll also enjoy the unusually fine sweet trumpet played by Roy Wood at the earlier dinner session . . . The Mayflower Hotel says we should give credit to Burton, their diminutive page boy, for being the busiest lad in town. He pages dozens of people every hour in the Mayflower Lounge and lobby, is vowing that he's going to look for a train-calling job as a rest cure.

RIVER BEND GOES VIENNESE. Band Leader George Stein, of River Bend, tells us that he's playing quantities of Viennese waltzes in the authentic and old-time Vienna style. "It's the youngsters who make the most requests for Viennese waltzes," says George, "and they certainly do some fancy whirling."

INTERIOR DECORATION. The new chairs in the Lounge Riviera are the most comfortable ever. They're low, soft and big enough for Kate Smith . . . Olmsted's Grill is fresh and crisp for the summer in bright flowered cretonne slip covers . . . The pine paneling at Hogate's makes it seem like a big play room . . . The Harrington Tavern makes you think of a cool grotto. It's that combination of twilight lighting and dark wine colored leather used on doors, walls, banquettes and chairs.

Kavakos Grill has its own song. It's called "Kavakos" and is sung to the tune of "When You Wore a Tulip."

'Perfuming' Liver Will Cure Halitosis, Doctor Discovers

By Howard W. Blakeslee,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cleveland, June 17.—Perfuming the liver is the newest, scientific way to control halitosis.

Swallow, for example, one drop of wintergreen, and in about two hours you should have a breath slightly perfumed with wintergreen. This scent may last two days.

Oil of peppermint works similarly, except that the breath scent is peppermint.

The perfume, in both instances, come from the blood, into the lungs to be exhaled. But the storehouse is not the blood. The liver appears to be the place where the scent gathers.

Both these perfumes are rather faint, too ladylike, in fact, to mask the odor of garlic.

Important results are a new theory of this kind of bad breath.

These experiments were described to the American medical Association by Dr. Burrill B. Crohn. They started with an observation that the sleep-producing drug, paraldehyde, may leave its disagreeable odor on the breath for two days.

Obviously the odor does not remain in the mouth for that long time. Dr. Crohn chose garlic as his guinea pig for finding out more about this scent puzzle.

He tried garlic in the mouth only. That is, none was swallowed. Either chewing it vigorously, or painting it on the teeth, resulted in a garlic breath for never much more than 1 hour.

Then he introduced garlic directly into the stomach, without touching the mouth. There was no garlic breath at all until about 2 hours. Then it appeared and lasted for 2 days.

The next expriment was on a surgical case, where it was possible to place the garlic directly in the small intestine. This time the garlic scent showed on the breath in about 1 hour. That is, the time in the stomach was eliminated.

Conn Hopes to Cow Louis at Weigh-In Today

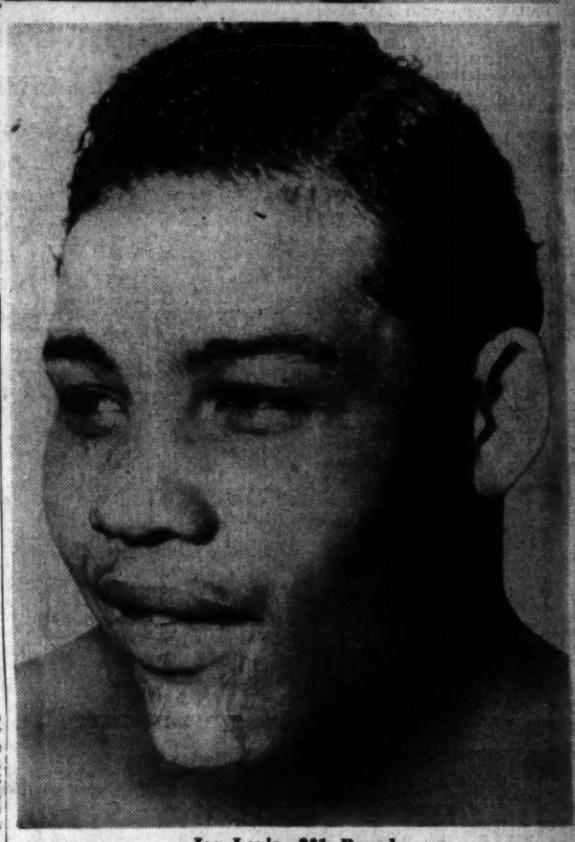
Billy Conn—177 Pounds



Joe Louis—201 Pounds

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Wait a minute. Billy Conn wasn't supposed to have a chance against Joe Louis when the match was first suggested six months ago. Downright amazing is the fact that today the champion is scarcely better than a 5-to-2 shot in the odds on tonight's fight. The surge of support for Conn borders on the phenomenal.

Originally, Conn was acceptable as a challenger only because there wasn't a heavyweight on the fistic horizon who seemed to belong in the same ring with Louis. Promoter Mike Jacobs, desperate to schedule an outdoor match, before Louis was drafted into the army, swallowed his misgivings and gave the bout to Conn. But he was weakening as late as March when Lou Nova emerged as a knockout winner over Max Baer.

Nova, who had been knocked out by Tony Galento, appeared to be a more logical challenger than Conn, and Jacobs hinted as much when he declared that a Louis-Conn fight was not yet a certainty. He indicated he was ready to shelve Conn, because the match had no great appeal. Conn is the fellow, then, who has suddenly burgeoned as a serious threat to Louis' title at this time.

Nothing that Conn has accomplished has been any factor in lowering the odds against him. All of the doubt that he can beat Conn has been engendered by Louis himself. When Abe Simon lasted 13 rounds with him, and Tony Musto lasted nine, and Buddy Baer knocked him down for a six-count, Louis lost stature. Folks were ready to believe that he is slipping. The Conn fight suddenly took on new importance. Conn was being given a bright chance.

I wouldn't say Louis has slipped. Against Simon and Musto his title was never in danger. He was always far ahead on points, and had no reason to risk battering his hands on those thick skulls. His fists are too valuable. Against Baer, in Washington, there was no evidence, either, that the champion had retreated along the fistic trail despite the fact he was knocked down.

Louis has been knocked down more times than any heavyweight champion in history, in fact. Max Schmeling had him on the floor several times. Jimmy Braddock put him down with a right uppercut the night he lost the title to Louis in Chicago in 1937. Tony Galento had him on the floor, and so did Buddy Baer, of course. The trick is to keep Louis down.

Joe's ability to clamber out of the resin would seem to testify to his greatness, and against Baer at Griffith Stadium that night I thought he was a better fighter than on any night save the one in which he butchered Schmeling in 2 minutes and 40 seconds. He took that punch by Baer, climbed back in the ring, and all but murdered Buddy Boy who incidentally was probably the bravest guy who ever fought Louis.

Conn is supposed to outbox Louis tonight, but that also is something of a trick. Nobody ever accused Louis of being any dolt in there. Before he became champion and thus became fair game for the critics who searched for flaws, Louis was supposed to be quite a fancy boxer, himself. He has certainly picked up some ring lore in the four years since he won the title, and there is no evidence that he has lost any of his speed. A clean liver, Louis is still only 27. Jack Dempsey always claimed that the normal fighter was best at 28.

Since he became champion, Louis has never been in there with any man who was supposed to outbox him, unless it was John Henry Lewis. All of John Henry's skill couldn't save him from a quick knockout. Louis' own boxing skill has never been thoroughly tested, because he never had to resort to boxing. He simply stalked his man and, sooner or later, tagged him out in most cases.

Louis has been flustered, on occasion. He didn't know how to deal with Arturo Godoy's crouch, and Godoy lasted 15 rounds. Galento a few months later used the same crouch and got himself knocked out. Against Conn, Louis does not figure to get hurt. Conn doesn't hit that way. Louis will be in there against a fellow who is giving him a 25-pound weight advantage. That certainly is no drawback to Louis' chances of retaining his title.

Conn never before has been asked to take the sort of a punch that Louis can fire. A middleweight, Fred Apostoli, had Conn in distress not so far back, in a furious punching exchange. When Louis tags Conn, it will be no middleweight's punch. He will have been hit by one of the finest punchers in heavyweight history. I think that sometime during tonight's affair Louis will tag Conn and tag him out.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, June 17.—Portrait (slightly on the Dali side) of a fight fan's brain on the eve of the Louis-Conn fight, after fan has consumed two weeks of advance ballyhoo:

Louis will knock him stiffer than a poker . . . Conn will dance around him, out-jab him and win the title . . . Louis hates Conn . . . Louis doesn't hate Conn . . . Conn thinks Louis is dumb . . . No he doesn't, he has great respect for Louis . . . Conn will break away from Mike Jacobs if he wins . . . Conn won't.

CONSIDINE

The fight will draw $400,000 . . . The fight will draw between $250,000 and $300,000 . . . Conn will warm up in his dressing room before the match, because he is a notoriously slow starter . . . oop! No he won't . . . Conn will try for a knockout . . . Conn will confine himself to boxing and won't take a chance . . . Donovan will referee . . . Donovan is through as Louis' referee . . . Conn is as heavy as Dempsey at Toledo and Corbett at New Orleans . . . Conn's losing weight . . . Conn's gaining weight, and developing a punch . . . No, Conn couldn't knock Whistler's Mother's top-knot askew.

Get your odds right here: 1-to-2 in Louis' favor in Dallas; 1-to-3 in Louis' favor in New York; no, wait a minute, $17 to $5 if you want to bet on Louis to win; but if you want to bet on Conn the odds are $5 to $14; 8-to-5 on Louis by a kayo . . . Joe's madder at Conn than he was at Sergt. Schmeling . . . He gets a secret kick out of good-looking Billy The Kid . . . Joe is not 75 per cent of the fighter he was when he first burst across the fight horizon . . . "Joe's every bit as good today as he was the night he fought Carnera," says Good Time Charley Friedman . . . Then what about the way Musto, Simon and Buddy Baer handled him? . . . A last minute rush of Conn money will drop the odds to 13-to-5 at ringside . . . A last second rush of Louis dough will lengthen them to 5-to-1.

The heavyweight title never changed hands in a National League ballyard . . . Louis' 20-pound weight advantage and superior punch will tell the story . . . "He can't hurt me if he can't hit me, can he?" asks Conn . . . Joe is bigger and better in every department . . . Nope, Conn's neck is a half-size larger, 17 to 17½, and his biceps measure 15 inches to Louis' 14 . . . The slap-happy Conn training camp hurt Billy. He even found a guy asleep in his bed when he tried to get a little sleep one afternoon . . . No, that's the kind of stuff Conn likes; it keeps his mind fresh . . . Louis is burnt out from too many bums of the month . . . Louis' diligent fight program has sharpened his fighting beyond compare.

Hunch players are stringing along with Conn for this reason: The two greatest fighters developed in years have been Louis and Henry Armstrong. Armstrong lost to a Pittsburgh bloke, Fritzie Zivic. Conn's from (give us a roll of drums, professor) Pittsburgh, too . . . Hunch players are swinging over to Louis, because every one Billy has fought has tagged him—but not like Joe can tag . . . Conn's another Corbett, but who among the writers saw Corbett? . . . Conn's another

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New Haven, Conn., June 17.—In a ball game which would have pleased even a major league fan, Joe Wood, jr., of the baseball family of the same name, shut out Harvard, 1 to 0, this afternoon before a jubilant alumni crowd of 6,000.

It was Wood's last appearance on the mound for Yale and after he had completed his chores there was a question whether Yale or Harvard would forget him first. For the Crimson, however, there will be nothing but unpleasant memories when Wood's name is mentioned.

Ahead of the batter most of the afternoon, Wood fanned 13, one short of the Eastern collegiate league record. He issued only two passes and allowed two singles, one in the sixth and another in the eighth.

All this magnificent hurling might have gone unrewarded if Bill Parsons, Harvard's right fielder, had moved a little faster for a lazy fly ball in the last half of the ninth. Not until then was a run scored as

Steers Again Breaks World Jump Record

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 17.—Les Steers, of Oregon, the world's greatest high jumper, broke his own record tonight when he leaped 6 feet 11 inches in the dual meet between the Pacific Coast Conference and the Big Ten.

Steers cleared the bar on his second try and it was placed higher for another jump. Steers several weeks ago in the same coliseum jumped 6 feet 10⅞ inches. The old world record is 6 feet 9¾ inches, held by Cornelius Johnson and Dave Albritten.

Conn's Tongue Is Joe's First Hazard Today

Billy Expected to Start Strife 10 Hours Before Bout at Polo Grounds

By Bob Considine.

New York, June 7.—Joe Louis and Billy Conn will begin battling at noon tomorrow, 10 full hours before they go to bat before a crowd of 45,000 and a gate of $400,000 at the Polo Grounds.

At the noontime weigh-in, Conn is expected to provoke a skirmish with his proposed vitriolic tongue-lashing of the sleepy champion. There will also be a prolonged wrangle between the Louis and Conn camps over Billy's request that he be permitted to put on his fighting mittens in the locker-room, and enter the ring just in time to start swinging on Louis.

This request will be made in order to guard against Conn's cooling out. At big title fights, it is customary for the fighters to enter the ring, then for the announcer to introduce every living champion in the audience except my own Brucie, the dog-show champ. During this time the fighters sit huddled on their stools, trying to keep their muscles warm, while their seconds adjust their gloves under the sharp scrutiny of a suspicious gent from the other corner.

Conn Slow Starter

Conn is a slow starter, and knows that a slow start against the quick-starting Louis will mean his doom. Despite the disfavor of the New York State Athletic Commission, which for some inherently screwy reason opposes the idea of a fighter warming up in his dressing room before a match, Conn will dance through the equivalent of perhaps ten rounds of shadow boxing, before he starts against Joe. He and his manager, Johnny Ray, fear that he will cool out badly under the night skies at the Polo Grounds, unless he is able to skip the lengthy pre-fight ceremonies.

There was a responsible report around Jacobs Beach today that Conn's weight had dropped to 172 pounds. He looked drawn and short-tempered at his final light workout at the Pioneer gymnasium. Louis' weight also is down. If it is a hot day tomorrow, the champion will weigh just under 200 for his eighteenth defense of the title he won 4 years ago from Jim Braddock. Louis' young army of seconds, bodyguards and managers will do what it can to ward off the effects of Conn's almost inevitable flare-up at the weigh-in.

Not Much Betting

By raising a scene at the weigh-in, Conn hopes to trip Louis out of his cold equanimity, and make him overanxious to win. Some of Conn's advisers have advised against this, but Billy, when last heard from, was going ahead with his attempt

Conn's Weight Big Mystery Before Flight

By Al Hailey

New York, June 17.—Agog with excitement on the eve of Billy Conn's long-awaited assault on Joe Louis' heavyweight championship, the lads along Jacobs Beach tonight debated a new question and looked for startling events to pop when the two meet tomorrow at the noon weighing-in ceremony.

The question was the closely guarded secret of Conn's weight, and the suspicion was that "Uncle Mike" might pull a few tricks at the New York State Athletic Commission offices when Conn steps upon the scales.

Word has leaked out that Billy won't even make the light-heavyweight limit, 175 pounds, and reports are that he probably will come in at no more than 172.

The truth of this report remains a mystery. But rumor No. 2 stated that Jacobs is planning to ask the commission to permit the fighters to weigh in with their shoes on—a ruse which would make Billy a little heavier and much more fearsome, on paper.

Manager Johnny Ray has kept Conn's weight a camp secret, but as winsome Willie strode joyously about his midtown hotel this afternoon there was a general clacking of tongues of the "he was such a nice young man" variety.

Billy will be outweighed by the Brown Bomber a good 25 pounds. Louis, who chose to remain at his Greenwood Lake training camp until tomorrow morning, expects to weigh 199 for the eighteenth de-

Tony Shucco Wins

Columbus, Ohio, June 17 (AP).—Tony Shucco, Boston heavyweight, won a 10-round decision here tonight over Jack (Buddy) Walker, Columbus Negro. Matchmaker Whitey Morrett said the winner has been offered a chance at Joe Louis' crown.

Conn Applies for Marriage License

All Appear Vague About It Except Her Father; He's Mad

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 17.—Billy Conn, Pittsburgh heavyweight boxer, who battles Joe Louis for the title tomorrow night and the daughter of a former major league baseball player, have applied for a marriage license, it was disclosed tonight.

The application was filed May 28 before Register Walter Evans in Brookville, Jefferson County, Pa., by Conn and Mary Louise Smith, daughter of Jimmy Smith, of Pittsburgh. Miss Smith's father for 11 years was an outfielder with the Cincinnati Reds and the New York Giants.

At Conn's request, Evans said, the application was not filed until yesterday, to be issued tomorrow under the Pennsylvania three-day law.

Conn gave his name as William David Conn, his age, 23, his occupation, pugilist. Miss Smith said she was 21 and that she lived in Elbon, Elk County.

Earlier, Conn denied his engagement at his training camp and later said "my private business is my own." His sister said tonight he told her on the telephone there was "nothing to those marriage rumors."

Tribe Beats Macks, 3-2, On Wild Pitch in 8th

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 17.—A wild pitch by Phil Marchildon permitting Gerald Walker to score from third base in the eighth inning shattered a 2-2 tie and gave Cleveland an uphill 3-to-2 victory over the Athletics at Shibe Park tonight.

A crowd of 19,236 that turned out despite the heavy downpour an hour before game time, saw the A's score their two runs in the first inning on Bob Johnson's fourteenth homer of the year with Wilson Dee Miles on first.

After that Joe Heving settled down and, aided by two double plays, gave up only five hits in the last eight innings.

Marchildon held the Indians for three innings, but in the fourth Hal Trosky clouted a homer over the right field wall. In the sixth the Tribe tied the score when Jeff Heath beat out a bunt, reached second on Clarence Campbell's single, third on an infield out and scored on Ray Mack's long fly.

Walker led off in the eighth with a single to center. After Heath sacrificed, Campbell beat out an infield single. Then came Marchildon's wild pitch that broke up the game.

Chisox Halt Yank Winning Streak, 8-7, With Run in 9th

John Rigney Chased in Last Effort

Prospective Draftee Goes Wild in 7th; DiMaggio Extends His Hitting Streak

By the Associated Press

New York, June 17.—The pell-mell rush of the New York Yankees was interrupted today by the Chicago White Sox with an 8 to 7 victory after the Yankees had won eight straight games.

It was a wild, see-saw struggle with each team using three pitchers and the ordinarily light-hitting White Sox getting 11 of the game's 20 hits. Nineteen of the blows were singles and the only extra base knock was a two-run homer by Charley Keller to tie the score in the eighth inning.

This spoiled the farewell appearance of Johnny Rigney, the Sox's sterling righthander, who expects to be inducted into the Army on Friday.

In his first six innings Rigney allowed only three singles and two runs, all in the third frame. He went to pieces in the seventh, to allow three runs on four hits, one a single by Phil Rizzuto with the bases loaded, and another a single by Joe DiMaggio to extend his hitting streak to 30 consecutive games.

The Sox had routed Steve Peek with a four-run outburst in their half of the same inning, however, and Rigney survived this trouble only to be chased by Keller's clout in the next frame.

Hubbell Beats Pirates, 6-3, For Giants

By International News Service

Pittsburgh, June 17.—The New York Giants defeated Pittsburgh, 6 to 3, today, with the veteran Carl Hubbell scattering ten hits.

Truett Sewell was the victim of a quick opening blast by the Giants, who scored a pair of runs in the first inning on a walk and singles by Danning and Ott. Three walks and two hits, plus a wild pitch, produced three more New York runs in the third inning and Sewell went to cover in favor of Bowman.

The Giants pushed over a single run against Bowman in the seventh, and, in all, collected nine hits.

Young's error and two hits gave the Pirates a run in the fifth and in the sixth they tallied twice on Fletcher's homer and two singles.

GREAT TURF MATRONS ON PICTURESQUE BLUE RIDGE FARM

(This is the sixth in a series of articles by Anne Hagner on horse farms in this area. Tomorrow's will deal with C. V. B. Cushman's Windsor Farm at Upperville, Va.—Editor.)

By Anne Hagner

Suggest the name of Mrs. George L. Harrison's Blue Ridge Farm, near Upperville, Va., to most horse-minded folk and their first thought concerns Happy Argo, whose get won 63 races and a total of $76,400, last year.

The bay stallion's worth, as a sire of both race and show horses, is undisputed, but few people realize that Blue Ridge's collection of brood mares has played equally as important a part in making the name of the farm synonymous with good horses.

One of the best is Modification, who has produced seven stake winners out of eight foals. Among these are Stage Whisper and Stage Beauty, both by Imp. Strolling Player, and Conservative, by Happy Argo. The big mare is now totally blind but, with bells attached to her various colts during the past five years, has managed to raise all of them.

She Heads the List

Another famed matron is Celebration, dam of Accolade who, if one judges by financial statements, heads the list by winning more than $50,000. Others are Ringle, Third Party, Rough Pariy, Joyride, and Mixed Party, all stake winners.

One product of Blue Ridge did virtually nothing at the races, but was still the most talked-about filly of her time. She was War Feathers, by Man o' War out of Tuscan Red, who brought $50,500 at the Saratoga yearling sales in 1925. Hamilton Farm was the unfortunate purchaser.

Bruce Dusenberry, manager of the farm, is sending only four yearlings to the August sales this year. His own particular choice of the crop is a bay colt by Imp Challenger II, half-brother to the winner, Teddy's Comet, winner of more than $30,000, and never out of the money as a 2-year-old. Because he is exceptionally racy looking, Dusenberry prophesies that "this colt is really going to run."

Colt to Go to Saratoga

Others to be sent to Saratoga are a chestnut colt by Bold Venture, a chestnut filly by Balladier, and a brown son of Rosemont. The quartet will be shipped North during the last week in July, and will be sold August 5.

Best of the home stallion Happy Argo's get is Augury, 4-year-old now racing on the Pacific Coast. He is out of another beloved Blue Ridge mare, Minnant, who also foaled Magnificent. Dusenbury looks proudly upon Augury's career; the little chestnut weighs only 900 pounds and carried 124 pounds to victory in his last outing. Blue Ridge parted with him at Saratoga for only $1,000 in 1938.

Although there are only 10 yearlings currently romping about the farm's 500 acres, old-timers recall the days of Admiral Cary Grayson when 35 youngsters were the average crop. Then, too, the farm was made up of 1,500 acres and Grayson colors were regularly appearing on the track. After the admiral's death his wife sold various parts of Blue Ridge to her next-door neighbor, Paul Mellon. Recently she wed George L. Harrison.

The emphasis has always been upon breeding for racing, but occasionally an excellent show horse has been sold from the farm. Best known is Miss Charlotte Noland's brilliant hunter, Rokeby, who serves as his owner's regular mount when she is afield with the Middleburg Hunt, of which she is ojint master.

Reds Hammer Rookie, Beat Braves, 5-3

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 17.—Young Art Johnson, sensational young southpaw up from Hartford, Conn., lasted just long enough to get one man out today as the Cincinnati Reds reached him for four runs on four hits in the first inning and went on to defeat Boston, 5 to 3.

And it was just as well that the world champions made hay while they did as Johnny Hutchings, released a week ago in a deal that brought Lloyd Waner to the Reds, turned on his old teammates with three-hit ball the rest of the way.

Father Bahlman, Purple Sport Head, Moves to Loyola

After a year of gradual change, the athletic set-up at Gonzaga High School arrived at a complete turnover yesterday when it was announced that Father George H. Bahlman, S. J., athletic director and prefect of discipline, is being transferred to Loyola College of Baltimore.

From La Plata, Md., will come Father James F. Ruffy, S. J., to take the place of the popular guide, who came to Gonzaga from Georgetown University two years ago.

First alteration in the Purple's veteran athletic staff came late in the 1939 football season when "Horse" Holbrook, former coach at St. John's, was named aide to Coach Orrel Mitchell. At the start of the 1940 basketball season it was announced that Mitchell no longer would coach the cage team, his place being taken by Holbrook.

Recently Mitchell retired completely from Gonzaga's coaching staff to accept the head coaching position at Georgetown Prep. Holbrook assumed full responsibility for the 1941-42 season

Cardinals Get Jump, Defeat Phillies, 11-3

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 17.—The St. Louis Cardinals thumped the Philadelphia Phillies, 11 to 3, today in a continuation of their drive toward a pennant, but for all practical purposes the game could have ended after the first inning.

Before a Cardinal was retired four runs had been scored, enough to win.

Eddie Lake walked. On the hit and run—which the Birds are working very well this year—Terry Moore singled Lake to third. When Dan Litwhiler fumbled the blow in left field Lake went on home and Moore reached second.

Then Walter Beck hit Johnny Hopp. Don Padgett promptly followed with a double scoring Moore and Hopp and came home on Enos Slaughter's two-bagger. That brought in Frank Hoerst, a left-hander, and the Cards were stopped—until the third inning.

Nick Etten opened the second for the Phils by hitting a home run to the pavilion roof in right. After two were out, Joe Marty, who had walked, stole second and scored on Harry Marnie's single.

Thompson Livingston, who replaced Ben Warren as the Philadelphia catcher in the fourth, had two doubles in two official times at bat. It was the seventh victory of the season for Mort Cooper, who was knocked out in his last four starts prior to today. The last knockout was at the hands of the Phils in a night game.

DeShong Named Baseball Pilot Of Allentown Club

Allentown, Pa., June 17 (AP).—Jimmy DeShong, former pitcher for the Yankees, Washington and Athletics, was named manager of the Class A Allentown team in the Interstate League today. He was released by Lancaster in order to accept the post laft vacant by Cy Morgan's resignation. Morgan will become a scout for the Phillies.

Fishing with JACK BELL

Efforts of northern Virginia sportsmen and Izaak Waltonians to have the waters of Gunston Cove, Belmont Bay and Dogue Creek placed under the jurisdiction of the State commissioners of game and inland fisheries, in order to preserve these spawning grounds for rod and reel anglers, culminated in success last week.

JACK BELL

Commercial fishermen bitterly fought this move. From time to time the commercial fishermen in this area have been accused of illegally taking bass in their nets and disposing of them on the Washington and Baltimore market. Although most of the commercial fishermen netting in the area abide by the law and return to the waters all of the bass caught, virtually all of them admit that it was impossible to select the bass caught in their nets. When they did it was found many died before returned to the water. One illegal haul brought to the attention of State game wardens included 368 large mouth bass.

Game conservationists long have contended that the practice of seining in these waters was responsible for reducing the supply of black bass—not only in these waters, but other nearby waters as well, this area being the natural spawning grounds. It was pointed out along with their contention that the supply was being depleted in favor of about 30 commercial fishermen. Last year only a total of 39 seine licenses were issued to commercial fishermen of Arlington, Alexandria, and Fairfax, producing a revenue for the State of only $145, as compared with the total of $12,212 which sportsmen paid through the purchase of State or county hunting and fishing licenses.

Judge William S. Snow, a member of the game commission, hailed the agreement as beneficial, not only to rod and reel anglers, but also to commercial fishermen, for whom the pact provides an unmolested spawning area.

Although the new agreement will cut off, temporarily, some of the income received by haul seine fishermen, it is believed that in a short time it will be made up by increased revenue derived from the rental of boats, sale of bait and other incidentals to sportsmen—a pursuit which no doubt will be more lucrative, now that the area will become popular to rod and reel anglers.

Fresh water bass fishermen got off with a tough break for the opening day in Maryland. With all the clear water we had for some time, the downpour of Friday night and again Sunday, well it is going to be tough going for a little while. We have not received any favorable reports as yet.

21 to Start in English Derby Today, Barring Axis Action

Site Moved From Epsom Downs to New Market Time Advanced to Coincide With Blackout

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Sports Writer

Newmarket, England, June 18.—This tiny town, cradle of thoroughbred racing, prepared today to handle one of its biggest crowds when 21 3-year-olds match strides in the famous Derby tomorrow.

The mile and half classic, run at Epsom Downs in pre-war days, is scheduled to start, barring Axis action, at 2 p. m. (7 a. m. E.S.T.). Time of the start has been advanced over other years in order to permit the crowd to get home before the nightly blackout.

The favorite, though not wide-openly so, is the Duke of Westminster's Lambert Simnel at 9 to 2. The duke's colt gained his position by reason of his recent victory in the 2,000 Guineas, mile trial for Derby entries.

The second choice and strongly backed at 11 to 2 is Sun Castle, winner of the Melbourn Stakes and owned by Lord Portal, parliamentary secretary to the ministry of supply. Then, too, Sun Castle is trained by Capt. Cecil Boyd-Rochfort, who has handled many American horses including Omaha when he invaded England several years ago.

Also receiving strong late support at 6 to 1 is Morogoro, who will fly the silks of Maharni Sajeb of Kolhapur. Neither Lambert Simnel nor Morogoro have won at a mile and a half, but Sun Castle has shown he can go the Derby distance.

Another factor in Sun Castle getting a big play is the old axiom that the Derby will be won by the horse that finishes third in the Guineas. Sun Castle did that, but in doing so yielded the favorite's position to the Duke of Westminster's representative.

Annatom, who gave Sun Castle a hard battle the last time they met, also is receiving some consideration. He is owned by Prince Aly Khan, son of the late Aga Khan, who won the Derby in 1930, 1935 and 1936.

Bosox, Tigers Split 2 Games Before 23,000

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 17.—After setting off the wildest barrage of their home season, an eight-run rally in the seventh, to take the opener, 14 to 5, the Red Sox were forced to split their Bunker Hill Day double-header before a 23,000 crowd today when the Detroit Tigers came from behind in the ninth to capture the second game, 8 to 5.

With Rudy York blasting out his fourteenth homer of the season with the bases loaded in the second inning, the Tigers built up a 6-to-5 lead that they protected until the Sockers pounded Luther Thomas and Harold Newhouser in the seventh. After Lou Finney opened by reaching base on an error, Ted Williams cracked out his thirteenth homer and before the side could be retired six other Sockes hits safely and three of them walked.

York collected another four-bagger in the sixth inning of the second game, when the Tigers put together the first of their four-run rallies. While trailing, 5 to 4, in the ninth, Bruce Campbell sewed up the game by doubling with the bases loaded and York and Birdy Tebbetts singled against Les Fleming, the third of the Boston pitchers, who was charged with the loss.

Dom DiMaggio opened the nightcap with a homer against Starter Johnny Corsica, and Jimmy Foxx collected his ninth four-bagger against that same right-hander in the sixth.

For the first time in more than three years, Manager Joe Cronin was expelled from a game for disputing a decision. The last time the Boston pilot drew official wrath was in the Yankee Stadium on Memorial Day in 1938, when he swapped blows with Jake Powell.

Harris, Gipe Tie in Federal Golf Tourney

Jack Harris, a public links regular and Jimmy Gipe, the Hot Springs, Va., Invitation champion, played one-over par golf for 36 holes yesterday to tie with 141 totals for the Federal Golf Association individual championship and the J. Edgar Hoover trophy at Bannockburn.

Harris and Gipe, the latter defending champion, each bettered par figures by a stroke in the morning with 69s and each played through the rain for a pair of 36s and a 72 in the afternoon for the tying totals. They will playoff Sunday at 12:45.

Olmsted Third

Harris represents the G. A. O. and Gipe Navy. Jock Olmsted, of War, finished third with 72-71, 143.

The Andrew Mellon trophy for the Class A team championship went to General Accounting Office with a 614 stroke total. Harris had 141; Ted Tuttle, 76-81, 157; Joe Wilson, 77-82, 159, and Don Dudley, 78-79, 157.

C. Henry Cohen, the first day leader, won low net in Class A with his 72-72, 144-8, 136.

William F. Watkins won Class B gross with 77-83, 160 and Fred Britton, D. Arnold, Charles Knox and R. L. Sheridan tied for Class B net with 136 totals.

The Henry Woodring trophy for the lowest Class A team net score went to W. P. A. while G. A. O. also won Class B gross and Post-office won Class B team net.

Class A net—Second, B. Beal (FRI), 71, 70—141—136; third, F. J. Rivet (Agriculture), 83, 78—162—24—138.

Class B gross—Second, A. Arnold (Patent), 81, 83—164; third, Ed Holloway (Postoffice), 81, 83—164.

Kenwood Wins D. C. Women's Golf Title in Six-Match Series

Chevy Chase, Dethroned, Is Runner-up

Winners Post 37½ Points to 33½ for Second Team; Manor A Disappointing 3d

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The triumph was the first for Kenwood in the 11-year team series, while Chevy Chase, runner-up with 33½ points, has won it five times. Manor finished a disappointing third with 22 points and Army and Navy last in the four-team circuit with 15 points.

The second team series has a match to go, but Woodmont pulled 18 points ahead and clinched the title in the 12-team league by blanking Army and Navy, 9-0, yesterday at Columbia.

4 Teams in Running

The third teams have a match to go and four teams have a mathematical chance of winning that class but Manor leads by seven points and although drawing a bye in the final matches it looks like the winner. Woodmont, Columbia or Army and Navy must score almost a clean sweep of the nine points to overtake the leaders, and Woodmont and Columbia play each other.

Kenwood entered the first team finals needing four points to protect its lead should Chevy Chase blank Manor. The new champions scored more than enough, trouncing Army and Navy, 6-3, with one player missing, while Chevy Chase came through with a 7½-1½ triumph over the Manorites to take the runner-up spot.

Mrs. Betty Meckley and Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg finished the season as Kenwood's top-bracket combination with two losses, once when the former was absent and the other to Manor's No 1 combination. Mrs. Meckley was a member of the championship Indian Spring team of 1938. Mrs. Kreuzburg was captain of winners.

Army-Navy Wins

Kenwood's second tandem was unbeaten entering the final series but Mrs. H. L. Price was unable to play yesterday and her partner, Mrs. Fred Evans, lost all three points to Army and Navy's second twosome. Mrs. Price and Mrs. Evans were the co-heroines of the Kenwood triumphs throughout the series.

Mrs. A. A. McEntee and Mrs. Woodlief Thomas, also beaten but once, scored another shutout triumph in the final series to complete the Kenwood triumph. The new champions were ranked back of both Chevy Chase and Manor in the pre-tourney ratings but except for a 7-2 defeat at Manor by the hosts they excelled throughout.

Argyle continued its surprising march in the second-team division and retained second place back of the Woodmont team with 54 points. Woodmont has been ahead since the first matches, however, and most of the second team interest has centered on the runner-up berth.

Bogart, Others To Play in Md. Amateur

Entries from the Washington District for the Maryland State Amateur Championship Friday through Sunday are lagging, according to the State Golf Association, although more than 50 Baltimoreans have filed entries.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock is the deadline and any golfers wishing to enter the tournament after that time must pay an additional $2, charged to all post entries.

The championship starts with a qualifying round over the Suburban course on Friday and will be followed by match play Saturday through the finals Sunday afternoon.

M. Parker Nolan, Congressional's defending champion, has not yet entered but he and a score of other top-notch District amateurs are expected to file their entries before this afternoon. Ralph Bogart, the District champion, is a sure starter.

Leiber's Circuit Sock for Chicubs Misses Deadlock

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 17.—A three-run homer by Jim Wasdell in the first half of the tenth innnig was more than the Chicago Cubs could match today, although Hank Leiber hit for the circuit with one on, and the Dodgers captured a 7-to-6 victory.

For nine innings the game was a pitching duel between Whitlow Wyatt and Bill Lee with honors about even.

The Dodgers scored twice in their half of the fourth on three doubles —by Pete Reiser, Dolph Camilli and Dixie Walker. The Cubs tied up the score in their half on two walks, a sacrifice, an infield out and Dick McCullough's single.

Then the Cubs collected single runs in the sixth on Leiber's double and Babe Dahlgren's single and in the seventh on two singles surrounding a sacrifice. Brooklyn tied the count again in the eighth on a single by Babe Herman and doubles by Reiser and Lew Riggs.

Wyatt received credit for his tenth victory, but was removed with none out in the tenth after Bill Nicholson singled, Leiber homered and Dahlgren walked.

West Lanham Midget Races Called Off

Heavy rains yesterday wrecked opening night plans for the new West Lanham, Md., Speedway for the second successive week and the eight-race program will be held over until next Tuesday night.

General Manager Edward L. Mahoney, in announcing the postponement, declared that the same field that was to have competed last night would be seen next Tuesday, except that it would be strengthened by the appearance of Bill Schindler. This one-legged veteran of the midget tracks would have been prevented by business from competing last night.

Racing Director Walter Stebbins, though disappointed by this second postponement, found consolation in the expectation of an even faster track for the new opening date. Recent rains have hampered final work on the track.

Tickets purchased for last night will be honored next week, it was announced. Seats can be obtained at the Standard Capitol Servicenter, and at the Sport Center.

Cambria's Report To Griffith Reads Like a Blitzkrieg

President Clark Griffith of the Nats this week dispatched Scout Joe Cambria to Charlotte, N. C., for a report on the doings of Charlotte outfielders who are the property of the Nats.

"In the sixth inning of tonight's game, with score tied at 6-6, Outfielder Roberto Ortiz hit a home run over the left-field wall.

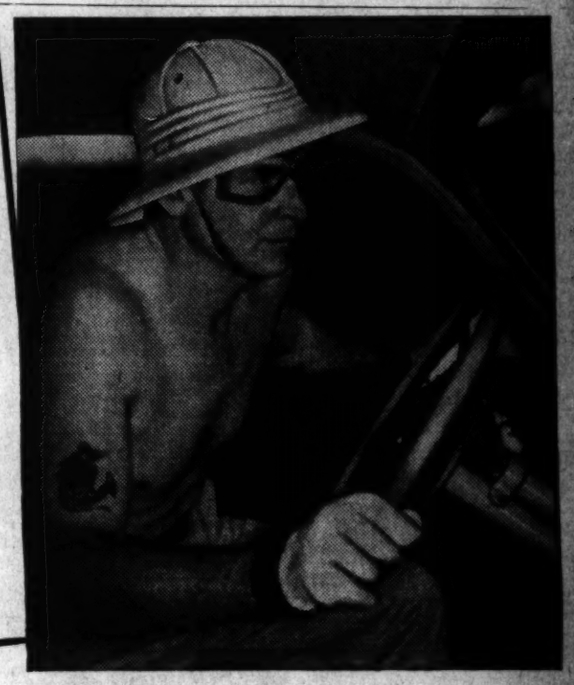
1 FILL LASTED 13,398 MILES -Certified

Then how long is a quart of this great New Motor Oil?



THAT'S NO RIDDLE: STRAIGHT FROM SIZZLING DEATH VALLEY COMES YOUR ANSWER

The lock-guarded engines of 6 coupes faced the Death Valley desert with oil exactly up to the "Full" mark. Not a quart—not a drop—could be added. The destination of all 6 identical everyday engines was . . . Death!

Here were 6 high quality motor oils getting the same strictly fair opportunity, to show how long they'd let an engine live on one fill and no more.

Down below sea level in Death Valley—down in this hotspot of the U. S. A.—every car sped at 57 miles an hour, all day long, day on day, till its oil gave out and the engine smashed. The brand of oil that used up quickest was outlasted 8,268 miles by a revolutionary new oil in this impartial, certified test. This new oil exceeded the average mileage of the other 5 oils by a full 7,057 miles! Certified. And this longest-lasting oil in the test, which you can have in your car today at popular price, is the new

CONOCO N*th* MOTOR OIL
—with its Man-made new Economy aid

The record long life that defied Death Valley comes straight from a new laboratory creation . . . man-made . . . called Thialkene inhibitor. Its action in some ways suggests Vaccination—which puts the right protective substance on guard to keep a trouble from even starting on you.

The trouble aiming to start on motor oils always lurks in the normal firing of every car engine. Filth is formed that tends to start the oil "festering." First one drop spoils, and then two drops "catch it," and that infects four, and that infects sixteen, and so on—faster, faster, FASTER. Soon the whole fill has "caught it." Oil stamina is sapped; the engine suffers, and keeps crying for quart after quart . . . but not when the worst of this "festering" attack is nipped in the bud—inhibited—by the life-giving Thialkene inhibitor in new Conoco N*th* oil.

IMPARTIAL

Latest available products of 5 leading competitors bought retail by Referee.

New everyday coupes used. Same make and model. Broken-in alike. Engines taken apart for Referee—to assure same conditions for all oils.

All cars tuned alike. Same Death Valley route for all. Drivers rotated to even up on skill and weight.

One exact fill per car. Never any added. Every engine under lock, under scrutiny, every mile.

Now you'll never in your right mind carelessly exceed the proper oil-change period for your car and driving conditions—any more than you ignore traffic rules just to "get away with it." But Certified Proof from the desert that new Conoco N*th* could outlast the other oils in the test by as much as 161%, gives you more than mere hope of long Summer mileage between quarts. Change to Conoco N*th*—at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station . . . today. Continental Oil Company—Pioneers in Bettering America's oil with Synthetics

AND CONOCO N*th* OIL
OIL-PLATES YOUR ENGINE!

Long the keystone of Conoco success, OIL-PLATING comes from another great Conoco synthetic . . . man-made under the famed Germ Processed oil patent. By magnet-like action, OIL-PLATING is bonded to inner engine parts. Then it can't all drain down—not even overnight—not while you're using Conoco N*th*. So OIL-PLATING is on guard against wear in advance! . . . and helps mileage, as it did in Death Valley. An OIL-PLATED engine is one more economy you get from a change to popular-priced new Conoco N*th* oil.

CERTIFIED

The Engine Destruction Test in Death Valley, testing Continental Oil Company's new motor oil and five other well-known advertised competitive brands, was closely observed by me and my assistants during the preparation of the test fleet and during the entire period of the test.

The five competitive brands were bought by us at retail and handled only under our observation. Closest possible uniformity was attained in the cars and driving conditions.

I hereby certify that the work and tests were thoroughly and fairly conducted. Engine Destruction occurred in each case at the mileage stated.

Brazen Hussy Splashes to Victory in Charles Town Feature

Black Filly Breaks Fast To Pay $16

Bletzacker Scores First of His Two Victories; Other Comes on Lena Girl

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 17.—The Gabe Murphy Purse, named for the graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown University, proved a hop, skip and a few splashes for N. Corbin's Brazen Hussy. Apprentice Jockey Martin Bletzacker took the 4-year-old daughter of Hi-Jack and Sun Hussy to the front going to the first turn and kept her there, winning by three lengths.

Capt. Ewart Johnston's Delhi Dan was second and a length in advance of Schley Al, owned by R. A. Bowman, jr.

It was to the tune of a $16 mutuel that Brazen Hussy showed her heels to seven rivals in the test over the Charles Town Course of 120 feet more than six furlongs. The black filly registered time of 1:20, more than six seconds over the track record. The racing surface, however, was heavy and soggy. A thunderstorm, accompanied by a downpour, visited the track before the program began and thwarted efforts of workers to get the oval in shape.

Apprentice Bletzacker, who was riding his second winner of the day, broke Brazen Hussy alertly from the No. 1 position. The filly shook off Schley Al and Bill K at the clubhouse turn to open a clear lead. From that point to the wire it was a case of trying to catch Bletzacker and the filly. Schley Al and Delhi Dan made repeated bids but Bletzacker kept his mount going and was drawing out at the end.

Bletzacker's other victory came in the third race, concluding the daily double of $31.40. He was aboard Lena Girl and also scored in front riding style. The mare, in earning her individual backers $6.20, took command early and held Goantell safe when shaken up. Third money in this test of seven furlongs went to Fritz W.

Jockey Willie Kelly started the daily double with a victory on Way Out, owned by E. Brining, in the second race. This $9.40 shot led Stubbs and Gay Prank to the wire in a sprint of 4½ furlongs.

†Donaldson and Rudacille entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIMJOFOR, $5.40, $3.20, $2.80; BUSY TIME (entry), $4.60, $3.00; VERA M. (entry), $3.00.
JIMJOFOR forged to the front at once, set a good pace while racing wide in the better going and held away under a drive to the end. BUSY TIME was shuffled back early, gained gradually, but was held safe in the closing stages. VERA M. was hard ridden and had no excuses. BAY ACRE closed ground from a sluggish beginning.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and unward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:08½. Off at 3:09. Winner, E. Brining's br. m. (6), by Sir Walter—Bogie Way. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:53.

†Pulled up.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAY OUT, $9.40, $5.00, $2.60; STUBBS, $5.40, $3.00; GAY PRANK, $3.60.
WAY OUT, steadied early, responded to a hard drive to take command from STUBBS and held on willingly. STUBBS shook off GAY PRANK to take the lead, but could not resist the winner. GAY PRANK was hard ridden and had no excuses. ASUNDER closed with good energy.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:37½. Off at 3:38. Winner, Mrs. Mary Knieriem's b. m. (5), by Chestnut Oak—Lena Rinehart. Trained by E. R. Jones. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:32.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LENA GIRL, $6.20, $3.20, $2.60; GOANTELL, $3.80, $3.00; FRITZ W., $4.60.
LENA GIRL, first away, set a good pace, drew out approaching the stretch and was shaken up nearing the end. GOANTELL came with good energy under a strong drive through the stretch. FRITZ W. was allowed to race forwardly on his own courage early and hung when placed to a drive. FORTUNATE BOOP was a forward factor and weakened.

Daily Double, WAY OUT and LENA GIRL, Paid $31.40

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:03½. Off at 4:04. Winner, J. W. Etheridge's ch. g. (4), by Cherokee—Ponzes. Trained by J. W. Etheridge. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:25⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIEF CHEROKEE, $15.40, $7.60, $3.80; TIME PASSES, $12.40, $5.60; CRUSAND, $4.00.
CHIEF CHEROKEE, within striking distance from the start on the outside, responded when placed to pressure and wore down TIME PASSES to win going away. TIME PASSES disposed of ALICE DODGE to take command, drew clear, but was weakening at the close. CRUSAND had early speed and weakened. ALICE DODGE set the early pace and stopped.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:32½. Off at 4:33. Winner, J. Pedresa's br. h. (8), by On Watch—Sox. Trained by F. Castro. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:26.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Dear Al:

Today's feature race is the Annefield Purse, named for the farm of W. B. Watkins, local steward. The buildings on the farm were originally built by Sweet Anne Page in 1790. The Bennings stable has turned over the 2 year-old Cap's Queen to Brooke Johns, who gave him to his son. The filly has a bad knee which makes her unfit for racing. By the way, the entire Bennings Stable is in the entries for today.

Sallipatica goes in the second race. Clymene is far down the list in the third and Mastake is an also eligible in the seventh. Can't see Sallipatica but the other two will be right in there knocking. Mrs. Helene Boyle's Sturdy Duke went lame in Monday's feature which accounts for him stopping after getting to the top. The Charles Town Horse Show Association will put on its 29th annual exhibition today and tomorrow. The draft classes will be shown today and the thoroughbreds tomorrow. Cash prizes will be awarded in all classes. T. T. Perry is the president of the body. Jockey Danny Scocca is a former Eastern High boy from Washington. He hustles and scuffles with every mount he can get. Jockey Francis Kelly, former rider for J. W. Y. Martin, arrived and will ride out the meeting. It looks as if Sonny Workman has hung up his tack for good. They tell me the colt, Walter Haight, is on the schooling list at Delaware Park. It certainly would be a thrill to see a fast track once in a while. I wish Carlyle Johnson, of the Racing Form, would stop wearing that Esquire shirt. It gives me an inferority complex to sit beside him in my hemstitched polo job. Sixteen more days of this meeting and then it will be on to Hagerstown. Apprentice J. Peck leaves to report to E. A. Christmas at Delaware Park. Jockey George Watson resumed riding yesterday after a lay-off. Russell Oakes, of the local official family, is back to work after an illness. The Goodyear blimp paid us a visit yesterday and then gained altitude and crossed the mountains toward Leesburg. Frank Getty please note. Track Superintendent Henry Erickson was getting the track in fair shape yesterday and then the rains came. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—FARMLANDS could be the right one in this short sprint. Has the speed and needs only alert handling at the gate. RADIO CHARM carries top weight, but is a threat. HIGHLAND SONG probably is the class, but may be anchored by the rail position.

Second race—SCOTTIE has a fast race in the book at a shorter distance. May take the top on this gang and stay there. BALLYHAUNIS is consistent. HAPPY SIS for the show end.

Third race—HAPPY HOSTESS has shown signs of going this route. Will like the track and the weight is right. HIGH BUD must carry 119 pounds, but is a threat. OVERBOST for the minor money.

Fourth race—SUN SALVATOR, a winner at the meeting, gets my call in this field. Needs only to be off in the first flight. RED WINGS and SCARLET FLAME to fill out the money brackets.

Fifth race—JINNEAL gets the post position and light weight. May lack some of the class of YANKEE LAD and SUMMER STOCK, but is a hard-knocking horse and deserves a top pick.

Sixth race—SILVER BEAM has done about everything asked hereabouts and seems headed for another purse. RED IDOL has speed and will be in the thick of contention. WELSH LAD for the show end.

Seventh race—MAETAKE is third on the reserve list. She is fit as hands make horses and will have to be beaten if she can get off the reserve list. CHANNING will be a keen factor. FIRST FLING should be close.

Eighth race—SUNNY ROSE has been getting ready for a crackdown and this looks like the right spot. This is NEVER IDOL'S distance. HAGERSTOWN BOY to take care of the others.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take CHIEF HOLLIS, MISS WING and LANCASTER.

Promoter Wins Suit Against Don Meade

New York, June 17 (AP).—Municipal Court Justice John O'Rourke today awarded a $419-plus-interest civil judgement against Don Meade, nationally known jockey, in favor of George Remus, Cincinnati sports promoter, who claimed the money was loaned in 1931 to cover two checks issued by Meade.

April Exports At New Top of $385,454,000

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday revised merchandise export figures showed that the $385,454,000 shipments in April were the highest for any month in recent years.

Although the Department is refusing to give the destination of specific products, the figures indicated accelerated shipment of airplanes and other war materials to Great Britain.

Merchandise imports totaled $287,550,000, and were the highest for any month since early 1937. Exports exceeded imports, however, by $97,904,000, compared with an excess of $39,449,000 in March last and $110,586,000 in April, 1940.

Export Excess Drops

In the first four months of the year exports totaled $1,371,424,000, imports $1,017,694,000 and the export excess was $353,730,000. In the similar period last year exports were $1,390,910,000; imports, $871,167,000, and the export excess was $519,743,000. In the early months of this year exports failed to equal similar figures of last year, because trade lanes to France, Italy, and much of the rest of Europe were open until June, 1940, and are now closed.

Airplane exports in April totaled $86,000,000, an increase of $16,000,000 over March. The April figure trebled that of a year ago. Shipments of heavy iron and steel products were $43,000,000 in April, a gain of one-eighth over March. Exports of firearms and explosives, worth $16,300,000, and of metal-working machinery, worth $22,400,000, also were substantially higher than in March. Other increases were shown in exports of lubricating oil, lumber, wood pulp, rayon manufactures and other manufactured goods.

Declines were shown for automobiles, gasoline and manufactured cotton goods.

Heavy Food Shipments

Other indications of lease-lend operations were increased shipments of wheat flour, canned milk, milled rice and other manufactured food products. Shipments of unprocessed foods and agricultural products, including wheat, cotton and tobacco, declined.

The rise in imports was attributed partly to the purchase of strategic raw materials, including copper, tin and unmanufactured wool. Sugar and coffee imports also increased.

Comparisons of principal agricultural commodities follow (figures given in this order—April, 1940; March, 1941; April, 1941, first four months of 1940, first four months of 1941):

Exports of unmanufactured cotton (pounds)—192,607,000; 32,614,000; 39,347,000; 1,429,434,000; 158,746,000.

Imports of unmanufactured cotton (pounds)—8,098,000; 23,136,800; 24,472,000; 40,333,000; 94,987,000.

Exports of unmanufactured tobacco (pounds)—15,912,000; 19,404,000; 14,030,000; 103,587,000; 63,208,000.

Imports of unmanufactured tobacco (pounds)—3,790,000; 7,087,000; 5,927,000; 92,407,000; 24,179,000.

Exports of wheat (bushels)—1,833,000; 1,998,000; 1,246,000; 7,875,000; 3,346,000.

Imports of wheat for milling and reexport (bushels)—754,000; 533,000; 584,000; 3,369,000; 2,306,000.

Exports of corn (bushels)—1,303,000; 24,000; 139,000; 14,126,000; 1,487,000.

Exports of meat products (pounds)—9,314,000; 5,716,000; 6,021,000; 90,767,000; 22,664,000.

Imports of meat products (pounds)—7,300,000; 12,582,000; 14,394,000; 35,188,400; 53,328,000.

Exports of lard (pounds)—18,849,000; 24,339,000; 22,376,000; 92,834,000; 75,500,000.

D. C. Agents Quality

Raymond A. DuFour, Washington general agent for the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Jones Lawson, agent, have qualified for the company's annual sales convention, to be held on July 7, in Sun Valley, Idaho. Mr. DuFour reported production for the Washington agency for the first six months of 1941 totaled 13 times the same period of last year. Addition of five new men to the agency force accounted for the increase.

Gar Wood Offering

A syndicate headed by Emanuel & Co. and John J. Bergen & Co. yesterday offered 456,000 shares of Gar Wood Industries, Inc., common stock at $4.75 a share. The company produces truck bodies and accessories, winches, cranes, road machinery and other industrial equipment.

Italy's War Budget Shows 10% Increase

Rome, June 17 (AP).—The war ministry's budget appeared today with an increase of about 10 per cent for the second year of the war.

The budget, as published in the official gazette, totaled 4,657,306,200 lire, the equivalent of about $223,300,000. This was an increase of 426,000,000 lire, or more than $21,000,000.

The ministry of popular culture, whose budget appeared at the same time, was cut more than half. Its budget was 48,000,000 lire (about $2,400,000) against 110,000,000 lire for the year 1940-41.

Bankers Acceptances Dip to $215,005,000

New York, June 17 (AP).—Bankers dollar acceptances outstanding May 31 totaled $215,005,000, the New York Federal Reserve Bank announced today. This compared with $219,561,000 at the end of April and $213,685,000 at the close of May, 1940.

The report covers the 12 Federal Reserve Districts.

Week's Gold Imports Fall to $4,838,603

By the Associated Press

Gold imports totaled $4,838,603 in the week ended June 11—one of the smallest weekly totals in recent years. In the preceding week, the total was $6,254,395, the Commerce Department said.

Principal shipment was $4,031,041 from Canada. Silver imports also were unusually low at $650,035. Mexico sent $389,027 and Canada $38,708.

St. Louis, June 17 (AP).—The National Retail Credit Association said today 11,735 stories in 30 cities in the United States and Canada reported an average increase of 10.1 per cent in sales during May as compared with May, 1940. Credit sales increased 9 per cent. Collections were up 5.2 per cent.

Sugar Futures

New York, June 17 (AP).—World sugar futures today closed 1 to 3 points higher on sales of 37,550 tons. Issuance of 1,104 July delivery notices uncovered broad demand for Cuban and local trade accounts. Delivery was accepted on the bulk of the notices and the market gained momentum as the day progressed.

The domestic contract was steady and closed 1 lower to 1 higher on sales of 16,350 tons.

Only a few lots of duty-free raws were on offer at 3.65 cents. The refined market was quiet.

A. N. Williams Made Head of Western Union

By the Associated Press

New York, June 17.—The Western Union Telegraph Co. today chose as its president Albert N. Williams, who, at 16, swung a pick and shovel with a railroad gang, and 34 years later became head of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co.

For the second time in a decade the big wire company reached into the railroad field for a president. Williams, as soon as he winds up his affairs with the Lehigh Valley, will take over the Western Union post vacated by Roy B. White, who came to Western Union from the Central Railroad of New Jersey. White, on June 1, returned to railroading as president of the Baltimore & Ohio, succeeding the veteran Daniel Willard. White continues as a Western Union director.

Long Railroad Career

Williams was born in Denver 53 years ago. In the course of his long railroad career he took time out to gain a diploma from the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University and there was also a brief interlude of work in the petroleum industry as construction engineer and operating superintendent.

The biographical sketch released by Western Union with the announcement of his election said Williams began his business career as a rodman on the Denver & Salt Lake Railroad. Williams, however, in a press conference after the Western Union board meeting, said he started on the line "handling a pick and shovel, and got to learn most of the angles of the railroad business."

Important railroad jobs held by Williams before he joined the Lehigh Valley in 1939 included the presidency of the Belt Railway of Chicago. His association with this property started in 1932 and he was credited with working out the modernization program which was the basis for the present rapid system of freight delivery in the Chicago area. He was also connected with the Midland Valley Railroad.

Silent On Merger

Williams was enthusiastic over the opportunity to do a "good job" in the communications field.

"After all, the railroads and communications companies are coordinate branches of industry," he said. "The roads transport goods and the wire companies transmit words—intelligence. And development of good policies of public relations is equally important in both."

Williams asked to be excused from any comment on such matters as the tentative proposal for a consolidation of the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph Co.

"I don't know a thing about it," he said. "I just quit my railroad job for a few minutes to come here for this board meeting."

Williams' home is in suburban Florham Park, N. J. He is married and has three children.

April Auto Sales Set All-Time High Of 489,074 Units

Detroit, June 17 (AP).—R. L. Polk & Co. reported today that new passenger car registration during April this year totaled 489,074 units, surpassing the previous high month of April, 1929, by 7,399 cars. New truck registrations totaled 70,269, up 2,390 units over the previous high month of April, 1937.

A compilation for the first four months of this year show new passenger car registrations totaled 1,508,777, compared to 1,314,827 in the like period of 1929.

Truck registrations for the first four months this year total 255,679 units, an increase of 17.5 per cent over the previous best first four months for trucks, which was in 1937.

Alabama Power Plans $11,000,000 Projects

Birmingham, Ala., June 17 (AP).—The Alabama Power Co. today announced plans for construction of a 80,000 kilowatt unit at its Gorgas steam plant to supply power for increasing defense needs.

Thomas W. Martin, Alabama Power president, said the unit should be ready by May 1, 1943. He estimated the cost of this unit and the steam plant expansion at Mobile at $11,000,000.

OPM Establishes N. Y. District Office

New York, June 17 (AP).—A New York district office of the priorities division of the OPM was established yesterday by E. R. Stettinius, jr., director of priorities, to assist manufacturers and businessmen in their requests for preference ratings. The new office, under the direction of Phillip M. McCullough, is one of 15 being set up throughout the country.

Cottonseed Oil Firm

Reorganization Heads Appointed for Erie R.R.

Cleveland, June 17 (AP).—Federal Judge Robert N. Wilkin today confirmed designation of five reorganization managers for Erie Railroad. The managers have full power, under court supervision, to put into effect the railroad's reorganization plan, replace old securities with the new issues provided by the plan, and appoint directors.

The managers are J. K. Thompson, of Cleveand, Erie vice president; Frank C. Wright, representative of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Harry G. Hagerty, representing Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; John W. Stedman, representing Prudential Life, and Henry S. Sturges, vice president of the First National Bank of New York.

Japan Concentrates Dollar Exchange

Tokyo, June 17 (AP).—Domei news agency reported today it was understood a concentration of United States dollar exchange in the Bank of Japan through the Yokohama Specie Bank would be effected beginning July 1.

This will be done, it was said, to bear the government's risk of losses due to fluctuations in the exchange rate between the yen and the dollar and is authorized under the foreign exchange loss compensation act approved by the last session of the Diet (Parliament.)

C. & S. to Sell Northern Properties

New York, June 17 (AP).—The Wall Street Journal said today Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, largest public utility holding company in the country, was planning the disposal of its northern properties.

The step was regarded as terminating the company's fight against dismemberment under the public Utility Act's integration provision—a fight long led by Wendell Willkie, former president of the company.

Preferred Stocks Lead General Recovery; Clearing of Dividend Arrears Anticipated

New York, June 17.—Led by senior issues, the stock market turned around today and retrieved most of the ground lost in the preceding three sessions. The direction was moderately upward from the start but there mere frequent slight relapses. Prices began to stiffen in the final hour and closing quotations were around the best. Gains for scattered favorites ran to 4 points or so. Fractional improvement, however, was the rule when the concluding going sounded.

Volume expanded a bit on the forward shift, transfers totaling 403,880 shares against 338,130 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .3 of a point at 41.6.

Commonwealth & Southern paced the preferreds with a jump of 4¼ points as talk was heard of the company dropping its fight on "integration" and selling some of its northern properties to comply with the holding company law.

Hopes that brightening industry would enable some corporations with big dividend arrearages to reduce or eliminate back disbursements helped many issues in this group. Climbers in the senior class included Certain-teed, American Woolen, American Car & Foundry, General Cable, National Supply, General Steel Castings and Kinney. Some of these were at 1941 peaks.

Among common stocks up 1 to 2 or so were Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, American Telephone, American Car & Foundry, Loft, Oliver Farm, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse and Johns-Manville.

Modest gains were shown for U. S. Steel, General Motors, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Anaconda, Sears Roebuck, du Pont, Union Carbide, United Aircraft, Standard Oil (N. J.) and Eastman Kodak.

While markets still had to contend with thoughts of spreading Government price pegs, priorities and growing shortages of materials due to defense necessities, the feeling of most was that the recovery swing in stocks of the preceding two weeks might go considerably farther in the light of inflation symptoms cropping up here and there.

Many potential share purchasers remained in the do-nothing division as fears continued that the growing rift between the United States and Axis powers might soon touch off a shooting war. Developments in the European conflict, brokers said, provided scant aid for sentiment.

Advancing in the Curb were Singer Mfg., Brewster Aero, Phoenix Securities, Superior Oil and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Trades here were around 68,000 shares versus 66,000 Monday.

Foreign dollar issues provided the only worthwhile changes in today's bond market with a 10-point jump in Belgium 6s an outstanding feature.

The domestic list was narrow and inclined to irregularity and a generally lower trend prevailed for United States Governments.

Transfers of $5,531,000, par value, compared with $4,912,250 on Monday. The Associated Press average of ten foreign bonds advanced .7 of a point to 45.7, only .2 of a point away from the 1941 high. Other groups were about stationary.

Cotton Rises, Other Staples Are Hesitant

By the Associated Press

Cotton futures paced the commodities markets yesterday with prices moving forward 80 cents to $1 a bale. Cottonseed oil futures advance was partly checked with the closing unchanged to 3 points higher.

Chicago wheat and corn sagged slightly. Wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ of a cent lower, while corn was ¼ to ⅜ of a cent lower.

Silk moved higher on reports of the halt in negotiations between the Dutch Indies and Japan. The market closed 3½ to 4 cents higher.

Other commodities were hesitant. Santos coffee futures were .06 of a cent lower to .03 higher. Rubber was unchanged to .05 cent lower while cocoa, at .11 to .13 higher, and lead, .02 to .08 higher, continued mild advances.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities closed at 87.37 per cent of the 1926 average, a new high since 1937, against 87.34 per cent Monday.

Installment Loans Reach New Peak

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department estimates that consumer debts to banks and others who make cash installment loans, reached an all time record high of $1,900,000,000 on March 31. This represented an increase of $156,000,000 in the first quarter of the year.

Consumer debts resulting from installment buying of automobiles, furniture, household appliances, jewelry, and general department store merchandise, reached a record high of $2,865,000,000 at the end of 1940.

Improvement Noted In Theater Income

New York, June 17 (AP).—Theater operations thus far in 1941 are somewhat better than a year ago, but increased taxes offset the improvement in earnings, Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, Inc., said at the annual stockholders' meeting today.

While revenue from films shown has declined slightly when compared with a year ago, he said, there has been some improvement in recent weeks. So far, Paramount's British properties have suffered "only minor" damage as a result of bombings, Balaban said.

Building Cost Index Advances

New York, June 17 (AP).—The index of construction costs in the United States, compiled by the American Appraisal Co., advanced to 215 in May, compared with 213 in April, the company reported today. A year ago the index stood at 202.

The measure is based on building material and labor costs in 30 representative cities.

This rise in the index in May was caused by small but widely distributed increases in prices of masonry materials, a few lumber items, some painting and roofing materials and labor rates.

Grocers Assail Food Inquiry Implications

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 17.—The National Association of Retail Grocers declared today the Federal antitrust division, in its current food inquiry, was spreading "factually unfounded" publicity and making "false" statements of "spectacular drops" in food costs.

The grocers' convention resolution, which also reaffirmed the association's support of a "full and fair" investigation of the food industry, came a day after a Chicago Federal grand jury charged 69 canning companies, trade organizations and individuals with conspiracy to fix prices for canned peas in violation of antitrust laws.

The 5,000 grocers said the division, either directly or by "clear implication," advanced a claim that the existing spread between prices paid farmers and those paid by consumers was "largely attributable to uneconomic distribution practices, presumably on the part of retail grocers."

Another claim, they said, was that investigation and prosecution, "as in Denver, invariably results in a spectacular drop in food prices with consequent savings to the consumer and an enlarged market for the farmers."

Each of these claims is largely unsupported by the facts," the association said.

The resolution stated that A. C. Hoffman and F. B. Waugh, Department of Agriculture economists, "assigned to increased labor costs primary responsibility for the increase" in the spread of farmer and consumer prices.

Of the second claim, the association said "the statement that cost drops of foods following investigations have been spectacular have been proved false."

Corporate Earnings

Pennsylvania Railroad reported for the first four months of 1941 a net income of $9,330,180, after taxes and charges. This was equivalent to 71 cents a share on 13,167,754 shares of capital stock and was an increase of $2,604,995 as compared with $6,725,185 for the like period last year when earnings were equal to 51 cents a share.

The soft coal strike in April brought a decrease of $231,881 for that month in net income, which totaled $2,022,237 against $1,790,356 in 1940.

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad reported a net deficit of $970,782 for April, after taxes and fixed charges. This compared with a deficit of $579,696 for the like month last year.

For the four months ended April 30, 1941, the railroad reported a net income of $2,476,192, as against a deficit of $2,681,394 for the corresponding 1940 period.

The April deficit reflected the loss of freight traffic due to the soft-coal strike, which lasted almost the entire month.

United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Co. estimated net earnings were $1,547,775 during the first five months of 1941, compared with $1,944,031 during the same months of 1940. Earnings per common share, after preferred dividends requirements were $1.64, compared with $2.39 in the first five months last year. The directors declared a dividend of $1.00 per common share, payable July 15 to stockholders of record June 25.

South American Gold & Platinum Co. and subsidiaries reported a net profit of $201,525, equal to 11 cents a share for the March quarter compared with $95,870 or 5 cents a share for the same period in 1940.

Conn to Start Heavyweight Scrap Early

There wasn't as much betting around New York tonight as one might expect. The price at press time was momentarily pegged at 17-to-5, but there were signs that Louis might go out to as much as 3-to-1 by fight time. The price on a knockout of Conn by Louis was 11-to-5.

Joe ambled into the ring for the last time at his Greenwood Lake training grounds today. He took no chances of hurting himself or of getting hurt. There is little doubt that he has trained harder for this fight than for any one since the second Schmeling battle. He will try for a quick knockout, if the last word from his camp is to be believed.

Fans stood in long queues in front of the various box offices today, causing the usually imperturbable Mike Jacobs to pull happily at one of his remaining hairs and yell: "There ain't been one like this for years." That the gate will top the $333,000 Joe drew with Tony Galento two years ago is a foregone conclusion. That it will also be at least 50 per cent under the $1,000,000 gates drawn by Louis for the Baer and second Schmeling fights also is assured.

Conn's proposed action tomorrow at the weigh-in is expected to add to the mental turmoil supposedly imposed upon Louis by the Conn camp—whose cry for the last fortnight has been that Louis is washed up. As Mushky Jackson, a celebrated Jacobs Beach malaprop, repentfully observed today, "Them bums hope to get Joe's brains working mentally." Another fight manager, after watching Conn's final workout, was heard to state flatly: "Conn's the most self-conscious fighter I've ever saw. I don't see how it's possible to lose."

Fight fans from 42 States in the Union will see the battle, according to the reservations. Pittsburgh will send in thousands on special trains labeled "The Shamrock," the "Corned Beef and Cabbage" and other titles indicative of the forebears of the challenger. Twenty special planes are flying in from Boston alone.

Conn's Weight Is Big Mystery

sense of his title on the eighteenth day of the month. This is just 2 pounds over his weight the night he won the crown from Jim Braddock on that June night in 1937.

As strange as it may seem, there's plenty of Conn money floating up and down Broadway. Billy's home-town supporters from Pittsburgh have taken over the mid-city hotel into which Conn—fed up with the usual life—moved last night.

The betting, however, favors Louis at 1-to-3 to win a decision and 5-to-8 to knock out the handsome, curly-haired kid from the streets of the Smoky City. The gamblers are more anxious to take Louis by a knockout, fearing if the fight goes the 15-round distance Conn will outpoint Louis.

Conn, lounging about the jam-packed lobby of his hotel, was still the cocky, fearless Irishman, still insisting he'll cut Louis up and knock him out.

The town has a festive atmosphere and the fight is on every tongue. Conn called up Jacobs today for the third time wanting to know if the gate will hit $500,000.

Jacobs said that Conn has been "pestering me to death about this." And it's little wonder, for Conn will draw down $100,000 if the gate hits the half-million mark. Louis, with 40 per cent, would get twice as much.

The New York promoter conservatively enough, puts the figure at "upward of $400,000 with about 45,000 people."

The question of the referee for tomorrow night's fight also had the tongues wagging. Arthur Donovan is generally conceded to be out of the picture as a result of the bad publicity he received for his handling of the recent Louis-Buddy Baer fight in Washington.

Redskin Owners Confer on '41 Plans

Directors of the club for the 1941 season, it was decided, will be George Marshall, Milton W. King, Jack Espey, M. D. Doyle and Edward Reeves. Plans for the organization of a 21-man glee club were discussed, along with the purchase of new uniforms for the Redskin band, which will be increased from 100 to 110 pieces.

On the Line . . .

Tunney, but just how good was Tunney? . . . Louis has a stomachful of boxing . . . Louis needs cash and will stick in the game for years.

Conn will curse Louis in the ring and get him so mad that Joe will lose his fine tuning and get flustered . . . Louis says he won't hear anything, even if Conn talks to him. That he'll be too busy stalking Billy . . . "We're not holding Conn lightly," says John Roxborough . . . "On paper, Billy doesn't figure to be heavy or rugged enough for Joe," says, of all people, John Roxborough . . . Boxers worry Joe the most—Ramage, Perront, Pastor . . . It'll take a puncher like Buddy Baer to beat Louis . . . Joe's cut eye is still sore . . . it's completely cured.

Jacobs wants Conn to win because he loves him as a son . . . Jacobs wants Louis to win because Louis is the comptroller of Mike's boxing fortune . . . Billy has been working secretly on his in-fighting, with an aggressive over-tone . . . Billy will stay clear of Joe and stick him in the Pastor manner . . . Conn's never been knocked out . . . The referee in this one will toll the full ten for Billy, instead of stopping it as is usually done in Louis' fights . . . Conn has thought more about playing softball at Pompton Lakes than he has about the fight . . . Louis' mind wanders perpetually to the problems of his farm in Utica, Mich. . . . "He tawks too much," Louis says . . . "He ain't heard nothing yet, until I get started on him," Billy says . . . Louis in three heats, Louis in five rounds, Louis in seven chapters . . . Conn in 15 . . . Louis' managers say . . . Conn's manager says.

the Crimson's Jake Schweda tortured the Blue hitters with his curve much in the same manner as Wood did Harvard with his fast ball.

Schwede set the stage for his own downfall as Yale came to bat for the ninth time by walking Tom Whelan. The latter reached second on Wood's sacrifice but he was halted there temporarily when Gerry Besse flied to Ed Buckley in center.

Two were away—and extra innings appeared inevitable even though Schwede walked Jack Schroeder. With the old Blues pleading for a hit of any dimensions Roger Hazen lofted a Texas leaguer to right. Parsons had to run in for the ball. He arrived a fraction of a section late and attempted a diving catch. The ball landed in his glove but it bounced out again as it did. Whelan was scooting over the plate with the winning run.

Billy Conn Gets Marriage License

It was learned, however, that Conn and Miss Smith motored to Brookville two days after Billy's knockout victory over Buddy Knox here.

Miss Smith's father, aroused by the reports, said:

"Champion or no champion, I'll punch hell out of that fellow and he'd probably be the first one to say I could do it. I hope he wins, but I want him to stay away from my family."

Smith asserted he believed he could prevent the marriage because his daughter is only 18.

The license could be issued any time after June 19, Evans said.

Evans said the license would be mailed tomorrow to a physician friend of Conn's at Brockway, Pa.

HE'S BEEN PRACTICING TO BE ONE OF THEM SUPERMEN!
GROCERIES
WELL, WHAT'S YORE EXCUSE THIS TIME?
I WANTED TO FLOAT THROUGH SPACE, BUT I WAS AFRAID I COULDN'T OVERCOME GRAVITY!
SO YOU CLIMBED INTO THAT UNDERWEAR AN' SLID ALONG THAT CLOTHESLINE! COME WITH ME! YOU'RE GOIN' TO TH' CLINK!!
MORE O' YORE WORK! YOU SPENT ONE WHOLE NIGHT REMOVIN' BRICKS TO MAKE PEOPLE THINK YOU RAN RIGHT THROUGH THE WALL!

JOE PALOOKA — First Stop — BY HAM FISHER

BOY IT'S TOUGH DRIVIN' WITHOUT LIGHTS — WHAT A TERRIBLE ROAD!
ONE HOUR LATER.
GOLLY IF I COULD OF ONLY PHONED THE P'LEECE T'BE WATCHIN'— TOO BAD THERE WAS NO PHONE IN THE REST'RUNT.
OH OH-HE TURNED IN AT A HOUSE. I'LL STOP AN' SNEAK UP.

WINNIE WINKLE — Too Soon for Office Scandal — BY BRANNER

MR. CRUCIBLE, THIS IS MISS WINKLE, THE NEW SECRETARY!
HOW DO YOU DO, MISS WINKLE! PLEASE SIT DOWN!
WE ARE DOING VERY CONFIDENTIAL WORK HERE FOR THE GOVERNMENT DEFENSE! CAN YOU KEEP A SECRET?
YES, YES!
FINE! THAT'S THE KIND OF GIRL WE WANT!
OH! I THOUGHT YOU WERE GOING TO TELL ME A SECRET!

HA-HA-HA-I'M TOO SMART FOR 'EM!
I DON'T LIKE THIS!
WHAT DO YOU CARE? I'M MAKING IT WORTH YOUR WHILE—WE CAN'T LAND THERE—THEY'RE BLOCKING US!
BUT WE'VE GOT TO GET DOWN—THE STORY—AND THE SERUM—
THERE MAY BE AN EPIDEMIC IF WE DON'T GET THIS SERUM INTO TOWN!
IF I DIDN'T HAVE PASSENGERS, I'D TRY THAT FLOODED FIELD—THE WATER CAN'T BE VERY DEEP!
DON'T MIND US—GO RIGHT AHEAD—EH, BILL?
SURE—FASTEN YOUR SAFETY BELT, JANE!

SUPERMAN — Tables Turned — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

LIL DANVERS! WHAT ARE YOU DOING HERE?
I'LL MAKE THAT QUITE PLAIN, YOU TORTURING FIEND!
I DON'T LIKE YOUR INTERFERENCE—NOT ONE BIT AT ALL. I'D SUGGEST THAT YOU LEAVE HERE AT ONCE BEFORE YOU REGRET IT!
AND I'D SUGGEST THAT YOU RELEASE LOIS LANE IMMEDIATELY OR YOU'LL LEAVE HERE TOO—FEET FIRST!
GOT HER!
TAKE YOUR--
GOOD WORK!
YOU DIDN'T TAKE ADVANTAGE OF MY WARNING, THEREFORE YOU TOO WILL GET A TASTE OF THE FATE IN STORE FOR MISS LANE!
YOU SHOULDN'T HAVE TRIED TO HELP ME!
I'M SORRY I-- FAILED.

GOOD HUNTING!
IN THE ANCIENT SPORT OF FALCONRY, A TRAINED BUT VICIOUS HAWK SPRINGS INTO THE AIR FROM ITS OWNER'S WRIST, OVERTAKES, KILLS AND DROPS A BIRD. BEFORE THE WAR, TWO OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST ENTHUSIASTS FOR THIS PRIMITIVE KIND OF HUNTING WERE CHARLES PORTAL IN ENGLAND, HERMANN GOERING IN GERMANY. IS IT A COINCIDENCE THAT TODAY ONE OF THEM COMMANDS THE R.A.F., THE OTHER, THE GERMAN LUFTWAFFE?

Listen! with Glynn

Arthur Godfrey, the humorous gentleman you hear over WJSV in the "Sun Dial" every morning doesn't say anything about it himself—he's, the kind of guy who wouldn't, no kidding—but, from one source or another, information comes which indicates that for assorted charities Mr. Godfrey probably has few peers in an extensive vicinity.

For instance, he's the sponsor for one of the barracks at Camp Brown, the Metropolitan Police Boys Club vacation spot on the Maryland shore, and he pays entirely for the upkeep of its many small inhabitants during the summer months. To that endeavor just recently he's added a similar project at Camp Sebago at Bear Mountain, N. Y., run by the New York Police for that city's underprivileged lads.

He's collected about 3,000 books for convalescents through his radio program at Christmas time; he's always finding things like radios, wheelchairs and other incidentals which invalids can use. He's even got pianos for eager, but impecunious music lovers.

His latest contribution is a pretty large order, too. It's 30 light weight uniforms for members of the Army Selectees' Band at Camp Dix after one of them wrote in and told him they needed them. And Mr. Godfrey is a commander in the Naval Reserve!

Contract Bridge

Partner opened the bidding last night in a rubber-bridge game with one spade," writes contributor R. T. of a hand on which he missed game. "I bid two diamonds with this holding," he continues:

♠ 5 6 5 4
♡ K J
◇ A Q 10 7 2

"He then bid two hearts and as I liked his first suit I said two spades. The next three hands passed. P. S. —Four spades rolled in quite easily. How would you bid it?"

A preference is not a raise. In the bidding of this hand R. T. rightfully responded by mentioning his own suit; but when his partner bid a second suit, hearts, our friend should have shown that he had a real raise for spades by jumping. Three spades might have brought a game call from the opener.

Mystery Still Veils Lupescu Despite Press

This is the third of a series of articles about former King Carol of Rumania and Mme. Lupescu in exile, written by Inez Robb, who accompanied the famous refugees to Havana, where they are now settling down in their new world haven, far from the glitter and intrigue of Rumanian court life.

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

Havana, Cuba, June 17.—Although her life for the past 18 years would seem to be an open book—with the world constantly pawing through its pages—Mme. Lupescu remains pretty much of a woman of mystery.

Except for the fact that she was born the daughter of a Jewish junk peddler and that for 18 years she has been King Carol's constant companion, no two stories about her agree.

Now that she is on this side of the Atlantic, a refugee from Hitler's vengeance, even the name by which she has been known for almost two decades she denounces as phoney.

"Helene," not "Magda," is her true name, she insists. "Magda" by which she was known for so many years, has never been her real name. It is just something that French journalists either misunderstood as her real name, or else made up out of whole cloth.

And since neither she nor the King ever comment or deny any printed matter concerning them, the mistake has continued uncorrected through almost 20 years.

It even develops that (1) Lupescu is her name and (2) isn't her name. And this doesn't confuse you any more than it does me. Madame's Rumanian passport is made out in the name of Mme. Helene Lorenz. Yet when madame signs her autograph, she invariably writes "Helene Lupescu." Perhaps even madame realizes the value in a well-advertised trade name!

Why madame's legal name is Lorenz, since presumably she would only affix her legal signature to a passport, is something I cannot explain. That, again, is something on which the royal party does not expand.

"Mme. Helene Lorenz, married," reads her passport. Yet her first and only husband, an officer in the Rumanian army, was named Tampeano. In an old story about madame, a cousin named "Lorenz" is mentioned. Possibly the "Lorenz" on the passport is simply a family name she prefers in business matters to the better known Lupescu.

Certainly, madame is living proof that a rose by any other name is still as fair.

On her passport, madame has inscribed her age as 35. Since she looks even younger, it seems fair enough to let this pass. A woman is entitled to a little leeway in her age, and even the historians can prove that Mme. Lupescu is no more than in her early forties. One of the other unknown quantities about madame is when and where she was born.

Madame is a contradiction to many attributes that men have always believed to be self-evident in the mistress of a king. If she has dazzling jewels and clothes, no one has ever seen them. Even her enemies agree that she has always lived simply and unpretentiously.

The tremendous pearl earrings she always wears and the huge, matching pear ring look like costume jewelry. But because she is who she is I am willing to give her the benefit of the doubt and write them off as real. Certainly there is nothing phoney about the tremendous diamond ring she wears. It is nothing less than a headlight, and in a dark alley could do duty as a brass knuckle. A third ring, which would pass for a wedding ring in any circle, completes the only jewels she wears.

Whether His Majesty put the third ring on her finger, as well as the other two, is anybody's guess.

Madame's only make-up is powder and lipstick, the usual clear, bright red shade favored by American women. Her dazzling white skin has a warmth which keeps it from resembling the dead-white circus make-up occasionally sponsored by our own debutantes and glamour girls.

Obviously, madame prefers the most simple and inconspicuous of clothes. It is equally evident that at the moment Mme. Lupescu's wardrobe is practically nil. On board ship and now in Havana she wears over and over again a few simple, inexpensive sports costumes.

A brown and beige linen sports dress seems to be her favorite in her limited wardrobe.

But the plain truth of the matter is that madame is not particularly interested in clothes. No one has yet talked with her who hasn't mentioned that madame is the intellectual type!

This does not mean that Mme. Lupescu will ever go in for ground grippers and polo coats. But it does guarantee that she is not apt to make the pages of the Nation's fashion magazines. Her taste is too simple and conservative.

She is no triple threat to the hardy perennials on the list of the best-dressed women. The laurels of Mrs. Harrison Williams, the Duchess of Windsor and Mrs. Byron Foy are secure. Mme. Lupescu will always be beautifully groomed, and well and properly dressed, but never, never a season ahead of the game!

Her titian hair has a soft, natural wave. Parted low on the side, it is swept back and ends in a little roll from ear to ear across the nape of her neck.

Lend-Lease Ship 'Too Comfortable'

By Morgan M. Beatty
Associated Press Feature Service Writer

Aboard H. M. S.——, at Sea—"Release depth charge!" The order came down from the bridge of our lend-lease ship. The English tar at the racks on the stern pulled a plug, and the ash-can of death to submarines splashed into the ocean.

We put on a burst of speed while the bomb was finding the deep level where it would burst automatically from pressure. I braced myself for an explosion.

I got the surprise of my life. I heard a noise like a distant shotgun firing in a foggy November field. A sort of a "Boom." In a minute or two I saw a great area of the ocean behind us suddenly flatten out, glisten in the sun. There was a shimmery, rapid vibration on the surface, like heat waves, only faster and mushier.

That was all.

"What?" I asked. "No explosion?"

"No," explained the officer at my side. "Not at that depth. Nor fish, either."

He was looking over the side, obviously disappointed at bringing up no fresh fish for supper.

Nor was there any submarine, for we were just practicing with American depth charges. Our senior officer was putting our squadron through the paces of submarine attack, our last drill before I was to leave ship at an Eastern Canadian port.

I was glad of that for the crew's sake. I thought they needed a respite, even though they never seemed to mind the pace. We had zigzagged ourselves seasick. We had signaled ourselves blue in the face. We fired practice rounds frequently, did 45-degree starboard turns.

Now we were about to get a rest. I went below, asked my cabin boy to pack me up when he had a free moment.

"Davey," I asked, "what did you like most about America on your brief stay with us?"

"The big cities. They were fine. Life seems to begin at midnight."

"And how about our girls, Davey?"

"Fresh?"

"I've seen them roll their stockings in the street, sir."

Davey was embarrassed.

He and the other lads who kept the wardroom shipshape and fed the crew obviously were tickled pink with their American ship. What impressed them most was the gadgets.

"There seems to be a gadget for everything except your fingernails," he said, "and you're likely to get them clipped too if you don't mind out."

Our food was well prepared, extremely clean, and less greasy than the fare on most American warships. Outstanding was their standard curried race with chutney, though it's hot enough to scalp a fellow.

The coffee? Let's skip it. They tried very hard, but they just don't know what to do with coffee. The big coffee percolator—a standard fixture in the crew's quarters of every American warship—was soon being used to distill cocoa.

British officers liked American desserts better than their own, wished they could get coffee the American way. But they didn't like our cigarettes very much, thought they were a bit strong. I thought the same thing about theirs.

The ship lost its prohibition regulations when the British took over. With them came barrels of rum. Every man over 21 years old got his three fingers of grog every night—or the equivalent in pay, about $1.50 a month. Nearly half the men prefer the pay to the rum. When I tasted the stuff, I agreed with the men who took the pay.

I couldn't find a soul with a complaint against the lend-lease vessel I was leaving. That is, I could dig out only one grumble.

"'Fess up," I said to one of the officers. "Isn't there one single thing you don't like about this ship?"

"Well, if you put it that way," he said. "I own the bunks in the cabins are a bit too comfortable."

"Too bad," I sympathized.
